The pleasures of the proletariat it becoming more expensive every year, according to Al Taxin, managing director of Unity House, Forest Park, Pa., a resort operated by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; primarily for its membership.

Last season, axys Taxin, Unity ipent approximately $30,000 for the entertainment of its patronage, with bulk of it going to variety ialent. Figure is expected to go higher in subsequent seasons because of the fact that Unity will start work this fall on $300,000 theatre seating 1,500.

Upon completion of the new house, Unity will seek to have the resort become a focal point in theatreal labor conventions and conferences. Hotel may convert to all-year operation to accommodate the convention trade.

The ILGWU already is one of the largest talent users in the entire labor movement. The union onto only is an important vaude and legit buyer but has operated its own FM station (WFDR, N.Y.), which it recently closed down; produced "Pins and Needles" and went into film production via "With These Hands."

With a theatre of its own, Unity is again expected to go for its own production. Taxin and producer-booker Herman Fialkoff are falking about a resident company for the theatre in the near future.

$20,000 for an Act? It's Murder for Everyone, Sez Miami's Weinger

Sez Miami's Weinger

The day of paying $20,000 for an act is over, according to Murray Weinger, who with Ned Schuyler operates Copa City, Miami Beach. Weinger, who is in New York prior to departing for New York prior to departing for the Coast, declared that Copa City is settling down to playing the same headliners season in and season out. If any new names develop, he'll go after them, but he'll have to rely on the same ton acts for the bulk of the talent throughout the season.

Weinger said it's uneconomical to go out for the extreme top level of names. The last time he shelled out $20,000 or over was for Danny Kaye. He said that with that kind of salary the club can't make any money, and what's more, neither can the act. Consequently, it's by mutual consent that this custom will have to die out.

Acts that can command that kind of fee, he declared, have to (Continued on page 63)

Disk Cleavage

New line of thinking has cropped up in a couple of the major record companies that's developing into a surefire attention-getter. Columbia and M-G-M have been dressing their album covers with eye-appealing models who display plenty of cleavage and s.a. One exce explained the new practice with, "if music won't get 'em—sex will—and it worked with the pocket books."

Col is using the sex allure on its recently released "Quiet Music" album, while M-G-M, which spearheaded the trend, is repped by sexy covers on its "Danger," "Have You Met Miss Jones" and "Music By Offenbach and Strauss" albums.

Change has been in the wind for more than a year, but hasn't been acted upon because of the fact that Texaco, sponsoring the show, as well as Berle, were loathe to disturb a setup that resulted in the top Nielsen spot. However, as the rating slipped in the middle of the year, it was felt that the time was propitious for the change.

For the time being, it's planned to continue the variety format, but switch into the situation setup gradually. Under plans now being blueprinted, top guest talent will still be used.

In line with the guest policy, the Morris Agency recently sent a list of all major vaude acts to Myron Kirk, Kudner agency vice-president in charge of the Berle show, for approval in advance of next season. Step was reportedly taken because of the conflict between the (Continued on page 63)

Latest Hope For Pix B.O. Seen In U. S. Birthrate

America's shifting birthrate may provide a cue to a brighter future for Hollywood, in the view of some industry observers. B.o. presently is being hit by the slump in births during the depression '30s, they opine, and will eventually profit by the current prolificity of American couples.

Bob Wilby, head of the south's Wilby-Kineey, circuit, put the thought into words last week in an interview with the Wall St. Journal. He was primarily aiming to explain the comparatively good biz being racked up by drive-ins.

"The high birthrate," he declared, "has hurt four-wall theatres more than anything else. Throw the kids in the car and go to a drive-in. It settles the sitter problem."

Going beyond Wilby's explanation, the number of new-born babes produced each year can, have a serious effect on pix b.o.'s. because

17,900,000 TV Sets

By Convention Preem

By Convention Preem Confirming industry predictions that there will be 18,000,000 television receivers in circulation by the time of the political conventions, the NBC research department this week revealed that a final count for the month of May showed 17,627,300 sets, a boost of 336,500 over the preceding month. Figure, consequently, is expected to reach 17,900,000 by next Monday (7), when the Republican conclave tees off in Chicago.

There were only 420,000 TV sets throughout the country at the time of the 1948 conventions. Some 70,000,000 viewers will watch the conclaves this year against 1,000,000 in 1948.

N. Y. City government, seeking to retain a large portion of television film production in the east, is mulling the idea of lining up a group of Ananciers to bankroll construction of a super-vidfilm studio in Manhattan. With the city currently hard-pressed for funds, it's hoped that the indie syndicate could build the studio and then turn it over to the city for administration, with the city in turn leasing it to vidfilm producers.

Commerce Commissioner Walter T. Shirley, who's apearheading the city government's role in the latest-eastern film production push, revealed that the committee formed last week to work out the project has two or three sites in mind in midtown Manhattan. He said that the committee, which is being chairmanned by James A. Sauter, USO-Camp Shows prexy, hopes to stay in Manhattan, since the actors who would be used in vidgix invariably want to remain close to Broadway and the radio-TV network studios.

After huddling with the producers' committee last week to launch the operation, Shirley took the plans to Mayor Vincent R. Impellitterl and said that the mayor is willing to go along along on any reasonable project. Commissioner relterated that one of the big problems in setting the plan in work is the launching of a publicity campaign to combat the "good public relations foh" belag done by Hollywood to boost its vidfilm production. Committee estimates that the TV film production business could be worth $2,000,000,000 in the next five years.

Shirley noted, incidentally, that Commissioner of Parks Robert Moses had lined up 15 sites outside Manhattan for the proposed "TV City," in which all four major networks were interested several years ago. Four nets, however, turned down all 15 on the basis that the years ago. Four nets, however, turned down all 15 on the basis that the years ago. She gladhands with verve and chirps, with fine coordination and movement that enhances her songs. She bounces with "Troulala," "The Kid of Paris" and gives a witty takeoff of "I'm In Love," interpolating English lyrics into French. Minneapolis, July 1.

Plans to get organized labor behind a "Go To The Theatre" campaign for legitimate houses as well as film emporiums are expected to be one of the orders of business when Intl. Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Pictures Machine Operators hold their biennial convention hare Aug. 4-8, according to Bill Donnelly, arrangements chairman.

Organization leaders believe it devolves upon organized labor to do its bit in helping in a practical way to combat TV and other boxoffice inroads, and ,boost sagging theatre attendance, Donnelly announced.

"If only for selfish reasons, our heads have let it be known that they will do what they can to aid theatre-owners in their fight for survival," said Donnelly. "With the present trend unchecked, there'll be more unemployment for our members."

It's hoped to line up unions outside of those affiliated with films in a proposed campaign to encourage theatre attendance, according to Donnelly. One suggestion, he said, was that the familles of as a French production. Fete opened no awards were officially made, but the public was asked to vote

Swedish-made "One Summer of

at the Cannes Film Festival,
"The Well" (UA) finished sixth and "Death of Salesman" (Col) was seventh in the public balloting, the two American pix running neck-and-neck, "Cry Beloved Country" (UA), a Britishmade, was third. Fourth was "Stimme des Anderen," a German

"Three Forbidden Stories" (Italian), "The Deserted Farm" (Mexican) and "Rashomon" (Japanese)

Maj. Gen. C. F. C. Coleman, British commander in Berlin, presented the David O. Selznick award for the German film, "Heart of the World." Together with the award pix from other countries, it will be shown before a U. S. jury in N. Y. where the top film will be given the Golden Laurel.

Friars' Garland Tribute On Coast Pulls $25,000

Hollywood, July 1. A capacity crowd of 800 attended the testimonial dinner to Judy Garland tendered by the Friars at the Biltmore Bowl on Sunday (29). Organization realized an estimated $25,000 which will be distributed among various charitable organizations.

Among those paying tribute to the singer were Frank Sinatra, Rosalind Russell, George Burns, George Jessel, Lt. Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, Eddie Cantor, Ezio Pinza, Olivia De Havilland and Marie Wilson.

After their experience with "Wish You Wers Here," producers Leland Hayward and Joshua Logan will probably never again "try out a show in. New York. In this instance they had no choice, because of the complicated nature of the production, including a real swimming pool onstage. But hence forth they'll see that no such circumstances arise.

During the three and a half weeks of paid previews, which took the place of the road tryout, every revision of the book or music, cast change or even altered bit of staging became a hot flash for the gossip-agents of Shubert Alley and Sardi's bar. Some professionals apparently made a minor career of attending: preview performances, then rushing off to spread the latest tidings on how the venture was progressing. Instead of doing the doctoring in the comparative secusion of New Haven, Boston or Philly, it was like a Manhattan construction project, with a capacity audience of sidewalk superintendents volcing pessimist comment. Another negative factor in the situation was that when the musical finally-opened about half the advance sale had been used up by the paid previews, leaving relative-ly little to carry the show over the traditionally grim July period in the face of the unfavorable reviews. At the moment, the remaining advance reportedly totals about $100,000 mostly in August, September and into October. That reduces the amount to a slim margin per week. In addition, it's expected that since they cannot get refunds, many of the ticket-holders may, as is usual in such circumstances, make exchanges for later performances, if necessary repeating the procedure until the show has closed.

Busy Revising

Busy Revising

Despite the generally bearish notices, co-producer Logan, who also co-authored the book, directed the show and staged the dances, went to work this week to revise the story line and make changes in the staging, chiefly in the line of strengthening the romantic element and punching up the action. Six rewritten and restaged scenes were inserted last night (Tues.). It's hoped that the RCA-Victor album, which was recorded Sunday (29) and is due for quick release, may also help the ticket sale, especially in view of the quality of the Harold Rome score.

However, in view of the quality of the mild audience reaction, efforts to buy back from RKO the screen rights to "Having Wonderful Time," the 1936-37 Arthur Kober play on which the musical is based, are in abeyance. An offer of $50,000 was made for the rights, but was nixed by Howard Hughes, head of the studio. The company originally, paid $87,500 for the property, and made a picture of lt. Danny Kaye's closing here Saturday (28) at the Theatre Royal saw his 14 shows gross 12,690 pounds ($34,532), a total never before seen in this city. It was probably the most successful personal appearance engagement in Dublin's theatrical history.

New order in film production, that of endowing each pic with maximum production values for every dollar invested, is resulting in more frequent hops to the Coast by company presidents who headquarter in N. Y. They want to be on the scene to continually stress the more-for-the-money objective as an economic must in the curently depressed market.

Particularly reflecting the new trend is Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's-Metro. He has been at the Culver City lot the past month, and will remain there for at least the balance of this week before returning to his Gotham office. Thereafter, Schenck plans to trek west at the rate of once every eight weeks. This is a big switch for the Loew's topkick who, in past, entrained to the studios about once a year.

Barney Balaban, who is now in Europe, similarly has been spending more time at the Paramount lot and will continue to do the same in the future, it's expected. Par's sales execs also will be on the production scene more often.

Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox topper, plans a flight to L. A. shortly after the upcoming holiday weekend, for huddles on future lensing. Skouras likewise is on the, list of frequent N. Y.-to-L. A. ers. Nate J. Blumberg spends a substantial part of his time at the Universal lot and Harry M. Warner and Columbia's Harry Cohn headquarter on the Coast. Ned E. Heat, Pre-Holiday Cut Trade; 'Scaramouche' First, 'Pat' Second, 'Clash' Third, 'Lydia' Fourth Combination of record heat and customary slow pace prior to a holiday week is producing lagging grosses this week at key cities covered by Varkery. Although rains broke the backbone of abother torid spell, the fact that many firstruns are awaiting arrival of the July 4 weekend to spot in their strongest fare is cutting into rational gross total.

"Scaramouche" (M-G), which had climbed to fourth spot last week is moving up to No. 1 spot this session. "Pat and Mike" (M-G), which was first a week ago, is finishing second with another healthy total. Third money is going to "Clash by Night" (RKO), second last round.

"Lydia Bailey" (20th), fifth last session, is capturing fourth position while "Winning Team" (WB), with some better individual showings, is doing well enough money to cop fifth spot.

"Kangaroo" (20th), in 10th slot a week ago, will be sixth this round. "Outcasts of Poker Flat." (20th), making a much better showing this stanza, is finishing seventh. "Man in White Suit" (U) and "Walk East on Beacon" (CO) round out the Top Nine list in that order. "Denver and Rio Grande" (Par), "No Room for Groom" (U) and "Encore" (Par) are the runner-up films.

A plan for closing 100 of the 570 theatres in New York's four principal boroughs has been presented to operators of all the important circuits in the area by Harry Brandt. Head of the Brandt chain is selling the scheme on the basis that shuttering competitive theatres would put the remaining ones on a more profitable level.

Ingenuity of the plan is that it calls for conversion of the houses that are closed to commercial purposes, such as supermarkets, in order to permanently get them out of the way as theatrical competition. Brandt proposes that the conversion in each case be paid for by owners of the formerly competing houses that remain open in each situation.

For example, if there are three theatres close by each other and all doing poor biz, Brandt suggests that the three owners get together and decide which one should shutter. That would be determined by its losses, its situation in regard to product, its location, its age and condition, and whatever other factors apply.

3G Profit to Some Theatres on Fight; Exhibs Learn Pricing, Ballyhoo

At least 34 of the 38 theatres carrying the Ray Robinson-Joey Maxim fight via large-screen television last Wednesday night (25) earned a profit on the event, with several of them petting up to $3,000, according to a roundup of reports from house managers. Record earnings point up the fact that theatre TV, now that exhibitors have learned how to price and ballyhoo their special shows; will be a lucrative new source of income for them.

Total gross in all 38 theatres hit over $200,000 and, with several for them forced to sell standing from the total attendance was well over 125,000, or triple the number which paid their way into Yankee Stadium, N. Y., to see the fight in person. This factor underscores the validity of predictions that fight promoters might well hit a $1,000,000 gate within the foreseeable future, when enough theatres are inter-connected from coast to coast to pad out the official take at the gate.

U.S. Pix Pact Bids After Impasse

Paris, July 1.

Negotiations for a new U.S.French film agreement hit an impasse this week that almost torpedoed the talks. Instructions from New York to American industry reps to keep at the negotiations have salvaged them, however, and the French have now agreed to come up with a revised proposal for a pact.

Point on which the powwows broke down was French insistence on a reduction of Yank film imports to about 100 a year, according to reports. Last agreement called for 121. The Americans in present talks have been asking for unlimited imports, but 140 at the very least.

Also tossed in the hopper again by the Paris contingent is a request for a subsidy by American distribs to French producers. It's not called a subsidy now, but whether under a camouflaged title or not, it would require a donation of 100,000,000 francs ($285,000) by the Yanks. That wouldn't be used directly to boost production, according to the French, but is a minimum amount required to maintain a promotional and sales setup for Callie with Navarantees.

Exhibs May Get 2d Fight TV'er

Theatres will probably, have another fight to themselves when Rocky Marciano meets Harry Matchews at Yankee Stadium, N. Y., July 28. International Boxing Club, pleased with results of the Sugar Ray Robinson-Joey Maxim bout last Wednesday (25), is leaning toward a similar setup for the Marciano-Matthews fray.

That would mean an exclusive for theatres equipped with large-screen tele, followed by a two-reel compilation of highlight rounds for subsequent showing by other houses. As with the Robinson-Maxim battle, home television and radio would be nixed.

IBC was highly pleased by results on last week's fight. The radio-TV shutout gave the promoters a gate of more than $400,000, a new record for a light-heavyweight championship bout. Fight drew 47,983 patrons.

In addition to the coin at the gate, IBC got, better than $100,000 as its share of theatre TV income. Affair was carried by 38 houses in 24 cities, and most of them did sellout biz. New York was blacked out.

It will take some time to compute the financial tally on the fight films, but they've been doing very well, partially because of the unusual finale in which Robinson was knocked out by the heat rather than by Maxim. It's anticipated income for the club will be between $50,000 and $75,000.

Joe Roberts, who produced the reel in association with the IBC, disclosed this week that 310 prints were used, far more than originally anticipated (though a lot less than the 1,200 used by RKO when it had rights to the Robinson-Randy Turpin battle last year). Pix were in Broadway houses by 2:13 p.m. the afternoon following the fight, in Boston by 8 p.m. and the Coast the following morning.

Engagement at the art house has proved somewhat disappointing. It hit $9,700 the first week and about $7,500 the second. It's felt that on basis of recent publicity, the pic will do better in a Main Stem house than at the Paris, where it was playing its preem date when pulled as a result of a New York State censors' ban 18 months ago.

Meantime, Burstyn continues to get unexpected and unsolicited financial contributions in appreciatory letters for the long, costly fight he made in carrying the case to the High Tribunal. Latest, which arrived on Monday (30), came from a GI on Koje Island, Korea, with a check for $7.

The national boxoffice for June, usually a bad month, suffered more severely than in previous years, because of hot weather. Gross totals for the month of June, according to reports from VARITY correspondents in 25 representative key cities, showed receipts the lowest since early last December. Only the closing week was anywhere near normal. Cool, rainy weather a couple weekends gave many keys an upbeat, though not enough.

with lagging biz, only the very strongest pictures garnered boxof-fice laurels. "Skirts Ahoy" (M-G) was June champion, shaping up about as expected, judging from playdates late in May. The Esther Williams starrer finished first twice and was among the top grossers all four weeks last month.

"Clash By Night" (RKO) won second place on Variety's top 10 list, while "Walk East on Beacon" (Col), also a promising entry late in May, captured third spot.

"About Face" (WB), strong in the closing week of May, pushed up to fourth position, indicating, as with the leader, "Skirts," that the public goes for light fare in the public goes for light fare in the public goes for light fare in the flummer. "Pat and Mike" (M-G), getting under way as the month closed, wound up fifth by dint of landing first in the final week with some big showings.

"Man in White Suit" (U), displaying marked strength for a British pic playing almost exclusively in arty theatres, is sixth place winner. Film was 11th last month. "Red Mountain" (Par), with a flock of bookings one week, displayed enough strength to take seventh money. "Kangaroo" (20th), which started out slowly, picked up to finish sixth one week and was near it another stanza; It landed eight position.

ALLIED AND TOA HONEYMOONING

Eyeing Eidophor

Color provided by Eidophor large-screen tele in demonstrations at the 20th-Fox homeoffice, which began last week, proved excelent both in full tones and subtle shadings. Flesh tones were particularly good with male performers using no cosmetics and gals merely regular street makeup. The 25-minute demonstration show was at times so radiant as to give almost a tri-dimensional effect. The color proved considerably better than what CBS was putting on the air for home tele and an improvement on what RCA demonstrated for theatres last year. At times it approached the quality of Technicolor, but like all rainbowed tele, it doesn't seem able to maintain consistency. The tints wobble somewhat. 20th-Fox prez Spyros Skouras explained that the model being demonstrated was still in the laboratory phase, but that production output would have most of the bugs eliminated. The flaws, however, are not in any sense too great and even the present set is commercially practical. The only really serious limitation is a tendency at times for all or part of a scene to go off focus momentarily.

Fast action across the screen causes the colors to break up into their components for an instant, which is a defect for which the remedy is readily known. It results from 20th's decision to compromise on an eight megacycle width band. A band can accept only a certain amount of information at a time, and if 20th used a 10 megacycle width, the breaking up of the color would be largely eliminated. However, there's a considerably added charge by American Telephone & Telegraph for wider band facilities. 20th is trying to get down to a still cheaper six megacycle channel, but feels the eight is a practical compromise at the moment.

The demonstration show was femceed by Kyle MacDonnell, out of TV. Talent included terper Georgie Tapps, comedian Jay Marshall, a trio of singers doing a "Faust" aria, dancers Mary Raye & Naldi, the Beatrice Kraft East Indian terpers, dramatic players Anthony Ross and Joan Chandler, eight line girls and two boxers in a one-rounder. Sammy Rauch produced and Arthur Knon designed the sets.

Skouras said that he was already in negotiation with Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, Irying Berlin and other important producers and writers to prepare the live shows which will be offered when Eldophor is available. "It's not a policy," he explained.
"If we find that an exhibitor has agreed to terms that prove definitely out of reason, we'll take care of him. However, we do want to cut down on making each deal twice — once before the picture is played and once after."

The vet distrib compared the renegotiation of terms frequently sought by exhibs to buying a fack-tie, wearing it for three weeks and then deciding you paid too much for it and seeking a refund.

In those cases where an adjustment of terms appears merited, Lichtman said, the homeoffice will readily authorize the branch to make it. However, he indicated, adjustments will be harder to come by in the future in anything less than unusual situations.

Youngstein's Field Hop

Max E. Youngstein, United Artists v.p., left New York Monday (30) night on another field hop to conduct branch sales meetings in connection with the current UA sales drive.

He'll have sessions in Philadelphia and Washington. Pittsburgh also will be included, if he can squeeze a full-day conclave in before the weekend.

EYE-TO-EYE ON TRADE MOVES

Thearre Owners of America and Allied States Assn. are acting as one. While Allied and TOA (and TOA's predecessor outfits) have been rivals down through the years, the two national exhib orgs have been behaving like honeymooners lately.

This came into focus as the entire trade got together in a common effort to map a system of industry arbitration. Allied-ites and TOA-ers were in the same camp on all issues, as they were taken up at the three-day conclave in New York two weeks ago. What minor differences did develop were quickly resolved. Thus, it was Allied and TOA virtually functioning as a unit, sitting across the negotiating table from the distributors. (Incidentally, the 10-man committee named to draft a new set of arbitration proposals went into its bitration proposals went into its first huddle in N. Y. Monday (30) and will continue such meetings until conclusions are reached.)

Allied and TOA, additionally, haven't been at serious odds on an industry matter in months. Not like the old days, when an agreement between the two would have been as rare as a threatreman happy about business conditions.

Working together in the campaign to repeal the 20% Federal admissions tax are Pat McGee, long identified with TOA, and H. A. Cole, for years a key figure in Allied at the policy-making level.

Treasury Delays 20th Divorcement

Fact that 20th-Century Fox Film Corp. will continue in business as the same corporate entity, although divorced from domestic theatres, was behind the past week's delay in obtaining the Treasury Dept.'s okay on the divorcement and the issuance of new stock to investors. In the case of the previous RKO and Paramount reorganizations, each was dissolved and two new companies were established.

However, since the time when those two outfits split, the revenue act was amended to require the formation of only one new corporation. Thus 20th stays as is, and its theatres subsid, National Theatres, becomes the single new corporation growing out of divorce-

Theatres, becomes the single new corporation growing out of divorcement.

Treasury's approval is awaited on the issuance of the National stock to 20th's stockholders on a tax-free basis. It's the first time that the new revenue ruling has applied to a film company and Treasury is giving the matter more than the usual amount of time. However, the decision is expected momentarily.

Aimed-for date for the divorcement was last Saturday (28). But National has been operating independently, in large part, for the past month and the few days' delay in the formal severance is not regarded as significant.

Four Hollywood films and one Italian import were rated as Class B. (morally objectionable in part for all) by the National Legion of Decency this week. Columbia's Rita Hayworth starrer, "Affair in Trinidad," was rapped for "suggestive lines, costuming and dances."

"Don't Bother to Knock," a Marier Monroe-Richard Widmark starrer from 20th-Fox, drew objection for "suggestive sequences," while "We're Not Married," from the same studio, was criticized for its "light treatment of marriage." Other B pix were "Nightmare in Red China" (Indie) and the Italian-made "Sky Is Red" (Realart).

Rift between Allied States Assn. and its "suspended" affiliate, Al-lied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, this week of Eastern Pennsylvania, this week took on the appearance of a complete and final divorce. Delivering the blow which makes the full disaffiliation apparent was Sidney Samuelson, head of Eastern Pa., via a publicly-stated, sharp disagreement with Wilbur Snaper, prexy of National Allied. Samuelson, in his most recent organizational bulletin, refrained from mentioning Snaper by name. But he cited "exhibitor organizations and exhibitor leaders" who have been supporting National Screen Service in its monopoly fight with the Dept. of Justice. Samuelson sides with the Justice Dept.

Industry execs conjectured this week that the upcoming film trade practices probe by the Senate Small Business Committee could possibly lead anywhere, from a beneficial exemption from some dictates of the anti-trust laws to some sort of Government-appointed public service commission to oversee exhibdistrib business conduct.

Tradesters said there's been an distrib business conduct.

Tradesters said there's been an absence of official advice from the Senate group on the likely course of its investigation, other than that hearings will be conducted in some key cities, beginning in Los Angeles, in the fall. There have been no statements on who'll be called to testify at these sessions, and what line of interrogation will be followed. followed.

However, some exces figure that the probers will be in search of problems besetting small indie exhibs. According to one highly-placed film man, the Senate quizzers will find that "what's now legal under the courts' interpretation of the trust laws results in economic hardships for theatre owners and distributors alike. No one likes competitive bidding or the quick playoff of pictures, but these continue in practice as a direct result of the court orders." He added that the small exhibs as well as well-heeled circuit ops suffer from the bidding and rapid playoffs.

Unsound Conduct

Thus, it's reasoned, if practices demanded by the anti-trust statutes are found to lead to otherwise unsound business conduct which hurts the film trade and the public as well, some changes in the law might result.

On the other hand, some indie ops have been suggesting a Government commission to the extent that curbs would be imposed on the amounts of rentals coin demanded by the digtribs, similarly as a public utility outfit's rates are fixed. It appears as extremely remote (Continued on page 14)

Warner Bros. has a winner in its Technicolor filmusical version of "Where's Charley?" Based on the Broadway musical success, tunefilm emerges as a gay spoof and delightful romp. It's appeal is universal, having entertainment values for old and young, for sophisticates as well as naive. It should prove Warners' big money-maker of the year.

Duplicating his legit triumph in the lead, Ray Bolger terps, clowns and warbles in a heart-winning, ingratiating manner. A first-class terper, and a comedian with great sense of timing, he also handles the Frank Loesser tunes competently, despite a limited set of pipes. His singing of "Once in Love With Amy" comes off as fresh and appealing as it did on the stage. It's socko.

Also on hand from the original

Also on hand from the original Broadway cast is Allyn McLerie, as Amy, Bolger's vis-a-vis. Femme shares the terp-tune duties with Bolger perfectly, and appears headed for big things in pix. (Warners signed her' to a longterm pact as result of this pic). Horace Cooper, a 70-year-old trouper making his film debut, and Robert Shackleton are also holdovers from the original cast.

Story, based on Brandon Thomas' hardy perennial, "Charley's Aunt." is pure corn, but corn of the tongue-in-cheek type. Well-known farcial yarn presents Bolger, as Charley, and Shackleton, as Jack, as roommates at Oxford back in the Victorian era. Expecting the arrival of Charley's rich, widowed aunt from Brail, Dona Lucia d'Alvadorez (Margaretta Scott), they invite their gals, Amy (Miss McLerie) and Kitty (Mary Germaine) to their rooms. Unexpected delay of the aunt's arrival leaves the boys without a chaperone, apparently a fate worse than death in those days.

In a spot, Bolger dons a feminine costume and poses as his aunt. Further complications arise with the arrival of Spettigue (Horace Cooper), uncle of Amy and guardian of Kitty, and Sir Francis Chesney (H. Marlon Crawford), Jack's father. Learning of Dona Lucia's wealth, both oldsters ardently woo the disguised Bolger, leading to a series of hilarlous comedy situations. Highlight laughwise in the wooing campaign is the scene in the ladies' dressing room bletween Bolger and Cooper. Latter scores as an old roue on the make. Story and musical numbers are blended expertly. Filmed at the Warner studio in England and on location at Oxford U., pic encases 11 Loesser tunes, most familiar benderic in the wooling campaign is the scene in the ladies' dressing room blowed the George Abbott stage book closely. David Butler, marking and inside studies, in films, celebrates auspiciously with crisp, intelligent direction.

Predominantly British chorus lads and lassies show verve and spark in the tune-terp production numbers. Supporting cast is also firstrate. Shackleton is properly handsome as Jack and handles the love ballads nicely. Miss Germaine, a blonde, English looker, is an okay ingenue. Miss Scott and Cooper also turn in winning performances. Erwin Hiller's Technicolor cameras show the players, backgrounds and costumes to advantage, and other technical aspects are on the plus side.

The current election year hubbub and national capital setting may prove of help to "Washington Story's" chances. It manages to be fairly agreeable film entertainment most of the time, although way overboard on talk, and shapes to passable possibilities in regular release.

Van Johnson and Patricia Neal provide the boy-meets-girl angle which Robert Pirosh has developed rather obviously in his sereen story. Just as obvious is Pirosh's tattempt to make a case for elected representatives and against political commentators who sensationalize bribery and other Government corruption. This significance would have been strengthened had he used more objectivity and less rancor in stating the case.

Johnson is a boyish Congressman who is the target of Philip Ober, columnist whom the solon is suing for slander. Miss Neal-plots with Ober to get something on 'the Congressman, using the ruse that she plans a series of articles showing Congressmen is a favorable light as hard-working, honest representatives of the people. It's no surprise that the close association necessary for the articles convinces her that Johnson is true-blue, and at the finale she supports him when he votes against his home town on an issue of national importance.

Pirosh's direction guides the story through scenes designed to show Congress and its various committees in action. On this recover, film does help to enlighten the public on the behind-the-scenes work that goes on in the national capital. The Dore Schary production also furnishes a tourist's eye-we of the capital and its buildings, but production and direction miss on giving the film story quality.

Trouping is agreeably paced to answer the not-too-exacting demands of the script. Johnson and Miss Neal make a pleasant team, and there are a number of other good performances to help carry the picture. Louis Calhern shows up excellently as a Republican congressman who furnishes John-on with a friendly rival. Sidney Blackmer is good as a lobbyist. Ober, with nasal-toned speech, thin mustache and thinning hair, "ets over a portrayal of a newsnaper-radio commentator constantly attacking Governmental. misdeeds. Others provide acceptable support.

Their unrelenting work in fencing off large areas of land with barbwire prevents the range men from driving their cattle north to the markets. Autry uncovers the plot and thwarts Penn and his gang after a gunfight and several rounds of fisticuffs.

Autry is his customary cowboys left here. He chips in with two good tunes, "Mexacail Rose" and "Old Buckaroo," with his ballading worked in more easily than in some recent pix. Pat Buttram, as his friend and U. S. Government land agent, supplies the comedy relief. Lone femme is Anne James, who goes through the motions of being a weekly newspaper editor. Penn is sufficiently conniving as the wealthy ranchman who sets up the phoney homesteaders in order to get land for his planned rail line. William Fawcett heads a standard support cast.

Armand Schaefer has given the film sufficient production, while George Archainbaud directs with intelligence. Gerald Geraghty's story has a few nunsual angles for a cowboy thriller. William Bradord's lens job is okay, while James Sweeney has edited sharply.

Only language-spot opportunity in Film unfolds in a border German town where poverty leads the children into wholesale smuggling with the full sanction of the parents. In this group is a girl who is supporting her family with the father in jail. Into this comes an idealist teacher who wants to study and remedy these pitiful conditions. Here the vehicle falls into a conventional love affair and blunts the originality of locale and theme.

There are some fine scenes as the children scoot across the Siegried line and some hairbreadth moments as they scoot under oncoming trains to evade the customs men. Direction is good in a journalistic way but does not get into the dramatic core of the story.

Dieter Borsch can't do much with the vague role of the teacher. Inge Egger shows promise as the smuggler with a case of conscience, while Jan Hendriks, is properly ruthless as the gangleader and seductor. Lensing shows limited budget in its murkiness. Wednesday (25).

There is no more than mild excitement in the two reels, although there's a good bit of interest in watching first the referee and then Robinson being kayoed by the blistering 104-degree heat in the ring. Since only five rounds are shown, they are well-selected to indicate Robinson's immediate primacy over Maxim in stanza one and two; the most active of the middle rounds (seven); refere Ruby Goldstein's "defeat" in the tenth (along with the start in the same round of Robinson's wilting), and the final (13th) stanza when Robinson literally melts from heat exhaustion.

Maximum length for a whole film of this type to please exhibs and to make print cost reasonable is 20 minutes. In addition to the 15 minutes used up the five full rounds in the present pic, there are a couple minutes of introduction at the weighing-in (which is pure waste) and some interesting footage of Goldstein; fadeaway and Robinson's inability to get off his stool when the bell for the 14th rang.

Customers Always Groan

Customers Always Groan

Whether they see full rounds, as in this version, or bits and pieces of rounds, as in some past pix, the customers always groan. Actually, the full-round method gives a much more accurate overall impression of battle—or lack of battle, in this case. The fight could, he made to appear to have considerably, more action if only the section spots from each gound were selected—but the result would be a false picture. Whether it would be better commercially is another question. question,

In this case, there are audible howls in theatres when the pie jumps from round two to round seven, then to 10 and then to 13. Actually, from one who witnessed the original at Yankee Stadium, theatre customers are missing nothing by not seeing the in-between stanzas. They merely prove that Maxim isn't much of a champ, no matter what the final result. Particularly commendable in the

and then being relieved, with Ray Miller coming in to sub for him.

Except for a few seconds of closeup in the last round, all the camera shots are from middle distance. That makes for visual monotony that editor Larry Sherman might have eliminated with some interesting facial closeups lill Corum's commentary is adequate. It is justifiably sparse, but appears to be a bit too much ofthe-cuff, as though he were seeing the fight pic for the first time when his voice was recorded. That may be so, as a matter of fact, since all emphasis was on speed in getting the films into Broadway theatres by 2 p.m. of the day following the fray.

Background crowd noises, incidentally, also appear to have been dubbed in with speed rather than realism in mind. They go up and down in volume at wholly irrelavant times. That's minor, however, since, as has been pointed out, the b.o. value of the pix is governed by the intrinsics of the fight it self, rather the mechanics of reproduction.

Warners Revamp In Upstate N. Y.

In Upstate N. Y.

Albany, July 1.

Further contraction and revamping of the Warner Theatres upstate operations were effected with the sale, effective today (Tues.), of the Keeney, Regent and Strand in Elimita, to John Osborn, of Wheeling, W. Va.; and of the Diana and Park in Medina to Dipson Theatres, of Buffalo, and the transfer, July 15, of supervision of WB houses in Olean, Dunkirk, Hornell and Jamestown to the Pittsburgh zone. Osborn operates five situations in the Wheeling area, according to word here.

The theatres being placed under the guidance of zone manager M. A. Silver in Pittsburgh are now directed from Albany by Charles A. Smakwitz. Several women employees in the local offices have been let go, Before the bookkeeping and accounting departments were transferred to New Haven last July, a total of 23 worked in the upstate headquarters. It had shrunk recently to seven.

There are industry reports of additional changes in the offing. Ralph Crabil, western district manager, with offices in Elmira, apparently is out.

The WB circuit owned two of the theatres in Elmira and one in Medina. It held the others on loase. Last March, two houses were lopped from the string with the sale of leases on the Babcock and Tenjel in Wellsville to Max Friedman, for 17 years buyer and booker for Warners upstate.

Smakwitz will supervise 10 houses in Albany, Troy and Utica. Transfer of a part of the contact department from New Haven to Newark, N. J., is under way.

Lapinere-Bellfort Tiff Sees Wallman Replacing Former

Paris, July 1.

Replacement of Elias Lapinere by Carl-Gerhard Wallman as RKO's general sales manager for Europe and the Near East climaxed a long-smoldering situation involving a clash of personalities between Lapinere and Joseph Bellfort, company's general manager for the European division. Blowup occurred during the recent Continental visit of international topper Phil Reisman, who decided to sustain Bellfort.

Final decision to shelve Lapinere apparently was handed down only a few days ago since as early as last week Lapinere had been quoted in stories out of Paris on plans for RKO's upcoming European sales drive. Furthermore, a special "Lapinere Week" Sept. 1421 was to spark the general release of top RKO product simultaneously in all countries.

Quick alteration will probably be made, shifting the drive stanz's appellation to "Wallman Week."
Wallman, former general manager for Scandinavia, is a vet of the RKO organization and has the longest service record on the Continent. He began his industry career at RKO's New York exchange, transferring later to the homeoffice where he handled publicity and promotion for RKO films distributed in Sweden. In 1935, he was assigned to organize and manage the RKO office in Sweden, holding that office until his recent appointment.

Lapinere, vet Continental indusstryite, formerly was with Metro and Paramount in Europe. He joined RKO about four years ago, serving as general sales manager
as well as pub-ad topper.

"Neither my organization nor I am averse to the presence of film stars on such fund-raising activities as that of the Olympic games," Berger pointed out. "But it appears strange to us that studios

Martin Gang, attorney for Miss Simmons and Granger, exploded his bombshell demand for a scrutiny of the RKO-Hughes records last week to counter defense contentions that the plaintiffs came into court with "unclean hands" in respect to capital gains provisions of the deal. In an affidavit filed with the motion to inspect, Gang charged that RKO "has been engaging in capital gains transactions. charged that RKO "has been engaging in capital gains transactions as a lure and bait for motion picture stars for a considerable period." Rank U Stock Coin Into Gen'l Fund

London, July 1.

Sterling equivalent of the approximate $2,700,000 which J. Arthur Rank is receiving for his Universal Pictures, stock is going into the treasury of his General Cinema Finance Corp. It will be used for general purposes, which means it will go a considerable way toward reducing the Rank empire's outstanding indebtedness.

Most of the coin is understood already to have been paid, which brought it under the wire to be credited to GCFC's 1951-52 fiscal year accounts. Fiscal period ended last Friday (27). Statement for the year, which should be much improved by the cash resulting from the U deal, will be issued in September or October.

The dollar payment by Decca Records for the U shares automatically goes into the British Treasury's dollar account. Bank of England, in turn, credits Rank with sterling. That's normal procedure, unless any British dollar-earner can demonstrate to the Treasury that expenditure or investment of U, S. receipts will earn a further substantial number of dollars. Rank made no effort along that line.

Rackmil Back From Coast
Milton R. Rackmil, prez of Decca, returned to New York from the Coast last night (Tues.). He had been there about a week, working frequently at the U studio on a TV film project.
His plan is to remain east now until after U's annual stockholders meeting next Tuesday (8) and the company's board meeting during the ensuing week. He's slated to be elected a director and then named prexy of U.

The difficulty that has arisen is not of the making of either the British Broadcasting Corp. or of London legit managements. It is the sequel to a dispute over what should be paid to the artists, which has been initiated by demands submitted by British Equity. They are urging a minimum of $44 for each member as against the normal studio fee of $15. Compromise offer by the BBC of $36 has been rejected by the thespers' union.

Fourre-Cormeray Out as Film Head

The Council of Ministers here approved the replacement of Michel Fourre-Cormeray by Jacques Flaud as the director of the National Center of Clnema this week. This move had been bruited around for weeks and came just when the Franco-American pic accord talks had started into full swing.

The post that Fourre-Cormeray held will not be filled until the talks are over because he is playing an important role in the confabs as head of the French contingent. His ousting primarily stems from the charge that he was unable to handle the Commie elements in the film industry.

One of the last agreements of the NCC under Cormeray was to put into effect the decision of the Syndicat of Cinema Production on the problem of the exhibitors' demands for permitting houses to have two new programs weekly rather than the one now in effect. Groups came to the opinion that the one week minimum would have to be kept in most houses to avoid to be kept in most houses to avoid establishing a buyer's market and creating a need for more pix at a time when the French government was demanding a cut in American product at the accord talks.

With prosecutions pending for quota default on the supporting program, London exhibitors are hitting out against the unrealistic nature of this aspect of the Films Act which requires British theatres to show 25% British-made product in the second feature catagory.

In reviewing defaults by exhibitors in the 1950-51 quota year, the Films Council agreed that most cases of failure to meet the demand on first features were due to reasons beyond the exhibitions on the supporting quots merited prosecution. Among those singled out for legal action was the J. Arthur Rank Organization, with several of its theatres to be brought before the courts.

At the half-yearly meeting of the London and Home Counties branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. Chairman Charles H. V. Certain exhibs, trying to keep on the right side of the law, had been putting in second feature reissues but Brown thought this could be damaging to other theatres, who might be forced to do the same.

The product Paramount has concentrated into the six months starting in July, is, we believe, without precedent in our industry. Every single one of the 13 pictures scheduled is the kind of top box office merchandise that in the past was considered as a "special." Plus values abound—big stars—big production—A MUSICAL A MONTH! AND 9 OUT OF 13 ARE IN COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR!

With these pictures, released one right after another, the months ahead can be the most profitable in the history of exhibition. So we say: "Let the flags wave for the biggest six months line-up of money-making attractions ever—from Paramount or any other company!"

Eight Blue-Chips Pix Within Year Help Big Upswing in Par's Gross Biz

Big upswing in Paramount's gross business was attributable in large part this week to the fact. Lat the company had a total of eight films which went into release over the past 12-month period, and each of these chalked up domestic distribution revenue of over $3, 000,000. That's strictly blue-chips coin, particularly in the current market.

List of big money-makers for the July 1, '51-June 30, '52 season comprised "That's My Boy," "Here Comes the Groom," "Place in the Sun," "Detective Story," "My Favorite Spy," "Sailor Beware," "Red Mountain" and "Greatest Show on Earth."

$10,900,000 Year's Increase In the first half of that full-year business climbed to $49,700,000.

The six months of the previous

Par's other sources of income must be considered, of course, such as Canadian theatre holdings and its stock in DuMont Laboratories. But in any event it's clear, observers say, that a string of eight pix drawing above $3,000,000, in some cases well above that level, in domestic rentals alone, is plenty impressive and contributes greatly to the financial upbeat.

'Fine Films' Fest Prepped by Par In Special Dates

Films which in past won big critical acclaim are shortly to be offered by Paramount under a "Festival of Fine Films" panner—some similar title—to exhibs for midweek and off—time dates. Idea, which already has received notice of some exhib approval, originated with Dick Frank, Par's branch manager of Indianapolis.

with Dick Frank, Far's blanch manager of Indianapolis.

Frank, on his own, sent out a letter to theatremen in his area which suggested booking the pix for the off-time periods which are usually slow at the bo. They'd be aimed at the so-called discriminating audience. Frank's suggested lineup included "Trio," "The Heiress," "Sunset Boulevard," "September Affair," "The Big Carnival" and "Sorry, Wrong Number."

Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana quickly endorsed the plan, for it is "quite logical that such a policy would cater to patronage that are the most vocal in their criticism of the industry and your theatre, that are the formers of public opinion and generally regarded as a major part of the "lost audience."

In an organizational bulletin, ATOI also advised exhibs contemplating the "fine films" policy to study the possibilities in release charts of other distribs. The trade association offered a list comprising "Death of a Salesman," "Pandora and the Frying Dutchman," "Red Badge of Courage," "The Great Caruso," "Rashomon," "KonTiki," "14 Hours," "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Streetcar Named Desire."

Par homeoffice toppers, apprised of Frank's fresh bid for more business, were sufficiently impressed to adapt it to a national basis. However, additional pix will be added to the roster, including "Mating Season," "Encore" and probably others.

Another Pix Group Rebels Vs. MPIC Loyalty Board

Ws. MPIC 'Loyalty Board'

Hollywood, July 1.

Another film group, the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors, has rebelled against the "loyalty board," proposed by the Motion Picture Industry Council. Its members refused to vote on the proposition in its present "indefinite" form. Spokesman for the SMPAD declared the MPIC plan is not specific, and added that "when it is blueprinted so that the present ambiguities are eliminated, then the members will be able to make a decision with sound judgment that is not at present possible."

Meanwhile, the Screen Writers Guild's executive is understood to be generally opposed to the plan and is putting it before the membership for a final vote. The proposal cam be killed by one vcto by any of the 12 MPIC member groups.

III. Ozoner Raps Bidding System Via Open Letter

Chicago, July 1.
In an open letter to general sales managers of the film distributors, a week ago, John Reckas, owner of the Starview Outdoor Theatre, Elgin, Ill., castigated the present bidding system and asked for an immediate throwing open of the companies' books. Claiming that competitive bidding is not, per se, evil, he said the secrecy around the bids and the refusal of the distribs to allow the exhibitor to see the winning offer or offers, is destroying the faith of the operator in the industry.

Beekes indicated that the many companions of the companion bidding system and asked for an Reckas indicated that the motion picture companies were hiding facts to prevent the theatres from knowing how to buy intelligently, and he warned that this attitude would beomerang. Operator, who with his brother built the czoner three years ago, sald his files would be open at all times and he was not ashamed of the business he was doing. He pointed out that several weeks ago he played "Greatest Show On Earth" in Elgin on a first-run basis (Chicago area drive-ins regularly play day-andon a first-run basis (Chicago area drive-ins regularly play day-and-date with the Loop houses, or immediately following), and that for the 12 days he racked up a huge $12,000. Local 839, which recently received a vote of support from the Hollywood AFL Film Council, issued a statement carefully avoiding the word "strike," but announced it will insist on the IATSE formula of 10% or 24c an hour, whichever is the greater raise. It also demands that the increase be retroactive to the expiration date of the old agreement.

that, in one spot, which he converted himself, he is now getting $19,000 a year rent, as against a top

Brandt took his idea to Joseph

Vogel and Schwartz reportedly told Brandt they would consider the idea, although they were dubious about anti-trust angles and other factors. There has already been a wait of more than a month, which may mean their consideration has turned to a nix.

In the meantime, however, Sam Rinzler, head of the Randforce circuit in Brooklyn, was attracted to the plan. He and Brandt are slated to get together shortly to go over Rinzler, head of the Randforce circuit in Brooklyn, was attracted to the plan. He and Brandt are slated to get together shortly to go over their various situations.

Brandt's plan is an aspect of a nationwide move to trim houses that are outmoded either physically or by population shifts. There has been a considerable number of shutterings this spring, and more are anticipated.

Brandt feels that the effects of TV and other competing entertainment forms are only part of the reason for bad biz in some of his situations. More important, he feels, has been the shift in population in New York. Many urban areas have seen declines in population or else inroads of a much lower economic level of dweller. On the other hand, suburbs have been expanding rapidly. Brandt feels that this has left some areas overseated, and it is in these that he thinks the shuttering of houses is feasible in order to make the remainder more profitable.

There's not 100% agreement among exhibs, incidentally, on Brandt's thesis. One of the dissenters is Philly circuit of Jay Emanuel, who's also partnered with Brandt in the Trans-Lux chain. He claims that there's not a situation in the U. S. where, as the result of one house closing, the remainder did any better.

"Fewer houses operating simply means less gross," he declared this week. He pointed to the Philly situation, where three of Paramount's key nabes recently turned out the lights. Other theatres in the area haven't shown a single cent increase, Emanuel said.

He added that the Par closings have cost the distribs some $150,000 a year in film rentals. On a nationwide basis, he declared, this means substantially less take for Hollywood and poorer pix as a result.

In arguing the necessity of continued censorship Brind told of the old days in motion pictures wifen, according to him "Actresses swam in the nude. Off-color refit erences became the rule. Reasoning behind the sions tax. Reasoning benind the idea is that nearby stere-owners stand to profit as long as exhibs remain in business and continue to lure the public out of the homes. If the theatremen are forced to close—as many say they will if the tax relief is not forthcoming—other business enterprises will lose potential patronage.

A Switch In Plan

A Switch In Plan

If the suggestion reaches the stage of formal approval by the COMPO group, it would represent a slight departure from the original overall plan. COMPO committee decided two weeks ago to refrain from asking public support in the anti-tax project. Exhibs, under the approved program, will contact the nation's legislators to impress them with the tough problems facing theatre ops today and impress them with the tough prob-lems facing theatre ops today and with the need for tax relief. Get-ting the merchants into the act it's figured in some quarters, could mean so much more weight behind the industry's push to kill the 20%

Meanwhile, Theatre Owners of America prez Mitchell Wolfson has expressed the fear that success in repealing the levy might be followed by new burdens to take its place imposed by local governments. "We must make sure," said Wolfson, "that if the present Federal amusement tax is eliminated, that we have so educated the American public and its representatives, that this discriminatory tax is not picked up by cities or states. I think this is just as important as any problem with which we are faced."

Wolfson, in a formal press statement, said that TOA will give its full support to the COMPO committee, "and will continue its own local and regional tax elimination effort in coordination with other interested segments of the Industry."

Former exhib, Abraham Young, Former exhib, Abraham Young, who operated in Denver but now lives in Fairfield, Conn., wrote that "Leaflets, or dodgers, should be printed, giving the history of your victory. As an expression of his esteem, Young sent along a dollar "as a token gift, towards meeting your legal ex-penses."

As a result of their fight, Burstyn and London received other accolades last week, being honored at a luncheon by the International Motion Picture Organization, a group of foreign film distribs, and the Metropolitan Committee for Religious Liberty. In accepting a testimonial scroll, Burstyn declared that he had carried the fight to the Supreme Court because he feit that he had "done nothing wrong. Every time I had to submit a film for censorship, I felt I was in an illegitimate business and that being in that business was a crime. So I felt that it was about time to try to restore a little dignity to this business. I think we have now achieved this." As a result of their fight, Burstyn

Par Skipped '45 Eidophor Chance

Eudophor Chance

Washington, July 1.

Evidence was given the FCC yesterday (30) that efforts were made seven years ago to interest Paramount Pictures in the Swiss Eidophor system of theatre TV, currently being demonstrated in New York by 20th-Fox, but that wartime and other circumstances apparently interfered.

Testifying at Commission hearings on Par anti-trust, issues before examiner Leo Resnick, Dr. Adolph Rosenthal, formerly research director for Scophony Corp. of America, said he learned about the Eidophor system early in 1945 and urged that Scophony look into it and provide a laboratory for research Paramount at the time, together with General Precision Equipment Corp., which held 10% of stock of 20th-Fox, were 50% owners of Scophony. Under questioning by Commission counsel Max Paglin, Dr. Rosenthal, who is now veepee in charge of research for Freed Radio Corp., cited a memo to Arthur Levey, head of Scophony, saying he had read technical articles about Eidophor principles and that he believed them susceptible of practical use. His memo further stated: "I would not at all be surprised if some company or group would in the near future introduce this invention to this country for further development and commercial exploitation."

Levey replied in a memo to Dr. Rosenthal that his suggestion to the Scophony board that it provide a laboratory for work on Eidophor and other inventions, brought "the stereotyped reply that it is impossible to engage skilled engineers and secure priorities for equipment during wartime."

In a later entry in the Scophony

a laboratory for work on Eidophor and other inventions, brought "the stereotyped reply that it is impossible to engage skilled engineers and secure priorities for equipment during wartime."

In a later entry in the Scophony file, dated Aug. 10, 1945, Levey suggested that Dr. Rosenthal write to Dr. R. Sanger of the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology in Zurich, where Eidorphor was developed, to determine possibilities of exploitation in the U. S.

The Eidophor episode came at a time when Par and GPE were near the end of their relations with Scophony. In May, 1945, the Justice Dept. started looking into the situation, and Paul Raibourn of Par and Earl G. Hines of GPE resigned from the Scophony board. Par and GPE diverted their interests in Scophony by a consent decree in 1949.

Dr. Rosenthal testified that he saw an Eidophor demonstration for the first time last Friday (27) in New York (his previous information was from technical journals) and that results were beyond his expectations. "At first," he said, "I didn't know whether it was television or color film. It was just as good as color film."

Hearings will be resumed Wednesday for further cross-examination by Par counsel Paul Porter of Levey, who has testified that Par used its interest in Scophony to suppress patents in home and theatre TV. Levey now heads Skiatron Electronic & Television Corp., which acquired Scophony patents and which is developing the Subscriber-Vision system of pay-as-you-see video.

Aside from proving that Eidophor could be the answer electronically to large-screen color tele requirements, the series of 20 demonstrations that started last Wednesday (25) have mostly served only to intensify pro and con arguments on the values of theatre TV.

The pros, led by Sypros Skouras and seconded by his brother, Charles, head of National Theatres, see a tremendous b.o. potential in the spontaneity of vast live shows on the screens of thousands of theatres.

Everyone admits, cons as well as the pros, that early in Eidophor's use it will have a certain curiosity value as a b.o. attraction. When that wears off, however, the ag'iners claim, an old maxim of show biz will take hold. That is, that it's the show that counts, and the public doesn't care about the mechanims by which it receives its entertainment.

Offset Home TV?

Offset Home TV?

In the back of everyone's mind, of course, is whether this can be a successful offset to home TV, especially when the latter is to be seen in color. Going further along that line, the question arises as to the competitive values of Eidophor as against subscription TV, such as Paramount's Telemeter, which will provide a boxoffice for entertainment in the home.

Skouras, in replay to an exhib query, said he didn't know yet how much the equipment would côst for a theatre, but that computations are now being made. Earle I. Sponable, 20th's research chief, explained that the set is about as big as a standard projector and could go in a regular booth. He opined that when RCA, Paramount or anyone else makes its large-screen color system available to exhibs, 20th would undoubtedly get together with them on standards so that a theatre wouldn't have to have a variety of machines in its booth.

Skouras also mentioned the hope that Eldophor would be used for projecting regular 35m black-and-white or color film from a central source so that other projectors with the mode unwessers with the made unwessers.

As impressive as the device itself was 20th's showmanship in demonstrating it. Every prominent exec in films and associated industries was invited to attend one of the demontrations. There was also many newspapers and radio-TV people, as well as opinion-makers in every field. Although exhibitor response to Eldophor was mixed, trade reaction generally was better than that of outsiders. Most of the latter of outsiders. Most of the latter viewed Eidophor as a direct attempt to compete with home tele, and took a dim view on that score. Among them was the Wall St. Journal, but numerous other papers carried more optimistic reports.

Skouras had no positive answer to exhib queries as to "what do we do in the meantime"—meaning the two or three years wait until Eidophor may be in actual fulltime service. "The only thing to do is service. "The only thing to do fight it through until then," 20th prez advised.

Exhibs were also disturbed by the fact that some theatres will have Eidophor and others won't—and those that don't will face not only the competition of home TV but of "TV in the theatre around the corner." Since competing houses obviously couldn't have the same programming, Skouras said he hoped RCA and other systems would develop, in order that numerous shows would be simultaneously available to competitive theatres.

Big Screen TV Tested In London Shows Good But Variable Definition

London, July 1.

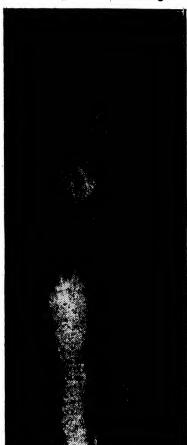

Big screen TV has come to London's West End for a week. This is the first public demonstration of theatrical tele apart from the daily theatrical tele apart from the daily programs featured at the South Bank telekinema at the 1951 Festival of Britain. Programs are being featured nightly at the Odeon, Leicester Square, a J. Arthur Rank theatre, using the organization's Cintel equipment. Screen is 21-by16 feet, and definition is 625 lines. Although only one of the three houses offering large-screen TV of the Robinson-Maxim fight last week was a sellout, the combined audience was the largest ever to view a televised prize fight for pay in this town. Sellout was at the Lincoln Theatre, with Negro clientele, which got $3 for orchestra and boxes and $2.40 for balcony.

Loew's Capitol, in its first experiment with large-screen video, sold 2,500 seats, well short of its 3,400-seat capacity. Keith's fell about 100 tickets short of its 1,900-seat capacity. Twice previously, Keith's had sold out, including standing room. Capitol and Keith's were scaled at $2.40 for the entire theatre.

The telecast received heavy advance plugging. It was advertised in the newspapers and by trailers on all MAC Twin. Cities theatres' screens, starting two weeks before the bout. Also, tickets were placed on sale at all MAC theatres, and cards in the cashier booths advertised that fact. The circuit also put out 1,000 cards and used a sound-truck the day of the fight. Omaha, July 1.
The Robinson-Maxim fight drew a little under 2,000 viewers to the 3,000-seat Orpheum Theatra at $2.40 a head, for approximate $4,800 take. There was no advance reserved seat sale. Boxoffice sale was practically the whole thing. Before the fight went on, the 1,500-seat first floor was nearly filled, only a few scattered side seats being empty. The mezzanine was about four-fifths filled, but the balcony had few tenants.

District manager William Miskell and house manager Stanley Blackburn were well pleased with results. Opposition was the Chico Vejar-Chuck Davies battle on home TV and a wrestling match at the auditorium. Oddity of the evening was the fact that only a handful remained to see the regular film program, to which all were invited. Results were successful enough to presage other such attractions.

Images on the Grand's glass screen were not as clear, sharp and steady as they had been on the two previous telecasts. This was particularly noticeable on longer shots, where a haze draped the upper half of the screen, and when distortions crazy-quilted. The latter apparently came from projection machine trouble, which could not be corrected. The picture went off for a second, midway.

Audiences in competing first-run theatres were rather light. However, managers explained that this was due to the humid weather, and, perhaps, to competition from hometavern telecasting of a bout in Detroit.

Despite Metro's lacklustre experience, there has been an upbeat in reissues this year, with the majority skedded for the summer months. Except for Paramount and Universal, all the majors have a few on their slates, 20th-Fox has six out, having scheduled two for each month, starting with May. RKO, lacking first-run product for some time, has been active resissue-wise. "Kong" has been coupled with "The Leopard Man" in dual situations. Previously it had issued "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Cat People." It has "Body Snatcher" and "I Walk With a Zombie" upcoming. Getting away from the weirdies, it has been weighing such combos as "Top Hat," Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers starrer, with, "Suspicion," starring Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine; "Annie Oakley" with "The Window," and "Look Who's Laughing" with "Too Many Girls."

Warners is currently reissuing two Humphrey Bogart starrers, "High Sierra" and "To Have and Have Not," and has upcoming "George Washington Slept Here" with "You're In the Army Now" and a coupla John Wayne pix. Columbia is planning the re-release of "Holiday in Havana" and "The Fuller Brush Girl." United Artists sent out "Red River" and "Tulsa" again about three weeks ago, and is readying the Alfred Hitchcock thriller, "The Lady Vanishes," for re-presentation. Latter will be pushed mostly for the art house trade, with a New York engagement set at the Trans Lux 60th St. Also on UA's reissue sked are a pair of Jack Skirball productions, "Guest Wife" and "In the Bag." Latter stars Fred Allen and reportedly contains some new sequences.

All house attendance records were broken during the first week's showing of "King Kong" and "The Leopard Man" at the RKO Grand. Nevertheless, in those four days if did a better business than any first-run film the Grand has played in the last few months.

During the first week's run, lines extended for a city block in length until merchants complained the queue blocked their entrances, and police handled the crowds (60% juveniles) from then on.

Of Unmade Properties; Par, U-I Taking Lead

Hollywood, July 1. Hollywood studios are showing a tendency to liquidate story properties for which they have no immediate production plans, a trend at warlance with the old custom of hanging onto scripts indefinitely. While all the studios don't feel that way, Paramount and Universal-In-ternational are putting such prop-erties on the open market.

Paramount is reported offering Laura Hobson's "Celebrity" and Vera Caspany's "Happy Days Are Here Again" for sale. Understood it is also ready to sell George Baker's cartoon character, "Sad Sack," bought for Alan Young, and Soott Flitgerald's "Bablyon Revisited." It recently sold "A Likely Story" to RKO. Also reported on the market are UI's "Song of Norway" "Gus the Great" and "Purple Mask."

Besides "Pat" and "Lydia," there were several other pix which were launched near the end of last month that showed real boxoffice potential

"King Kong" (RKO), out on re-"King Kong" (RKO), out on re-issue for the second time within five years, looked like a boxoffice glant, judging from four key preems last week. It was hot in all four spots, and looks to continue big in subsequent engagements. Pic promises to be a smash profit-maker for RKO, despite a big out-lay for extensive hally and extenlay for extensive bally and adver-tising, since this represents nearly all the expense for the company.

'Lovely' Looks Nice

"Lovely to Look At" (M-G) promises to do well, judging from initial dates. the east is booming and the trend to vidpix won't switch the TV capital from Gotham to the Coast, according to Marion Parsonnet, whose studio is currently the most active in the telefilm field in New York.

whose studio is currently the most active in the telefilm field in New York.

Parsonnet, who was one of Metro's top writers for seven years, is running his studio at full capacity with productions lined up for the next eight months. Shooting started last week on "The Doctor," new series for Procter & Gamble, and in August lensing will resume on the second cycle of 13 pix in the "American Wit and Humor" program which the studio is turning out in partnership with March of Time. Also in the works is a stanza in which Arlene Francis interviews celebs in their homes. Already released is "Hollywood Off-Beat," a Parsonnet production syndicated by United Television Programs.

Reason why Parsonnet is sold on Gotham as a telefilm production centre, aside from the fact that closer liaison with the agencies is possible, is that "a better grade of acting is available in the east." "Too often the performances given in Hollywood are stock," he told YARLETY Monday (30). "On the other hand, in New York we can get artists, trained in legit, radio and in live television, who can really give sensitive full-blown characterization. Similarly with writers, we've found that there is a greater vitality in the scripts written here. It's just a better climate for the creation of ideas. Working with men who've scripted for live TV we've gotten a sounder product."

P&G Sets Unique Pattern on TV Pic 'Doctor' Series

Procter & Gamble has set a novel pattern for "The Doctor," new videfilm series which will go into the Sunday 10 p. m. slot on 'NBC-TV in the fall, permitting the soap outfit of the stabilish sponsor identification with a narrator and also enable it to peddle the films to other bankrollers for subsequent runs. Dramas will be introed by the medico, an urbane philosopher and collector of stories, with a strong interest in people. Framework of the physician-narrator will be kept by P&G, but the dramatic portions will be made available for re-runs by other spenders, who would naturally devise their own host.

Financial setup on the half-hour vidpix stanza has the specific brand, Camay soap, putting up the bulk of the coin, with Procter & Gamble Productions, subsidiary of the soap company, investing the balance. This permits the Camay account to back a more expensive show, with P&G Productions able to hold on to the subsidiary rights. If the brand alone had to foot the bill, it couldn't get a series of the same quality and still hold the re-run rights, from which there is a large coin potential.

Before P&GP was set up, the soap firm got its first and second groups of "Fireside Theatre" telefilms from Gordon LeVoy and Bing Crosby Enterprises for about $4,000-$5,000 less than they cost LeVoy and BCE to make, but those two firms retained subsidiary rights which later proved a bonanza. "Fireside" is now being lensed by P&GP, which keeps the residuals. Filming started last week at Parsonnèt TV Film Studios in N. Y., with Marion Parsonnet as producer and also supervising the scripters. He will get a percentage of subsidiary rights. Supervisor for Benton & Bowles agency is Wilfred (Wiff) Roberts, who was the account exec for Camay at Pedlar & Ryan and who moved over to B&B (Continued on page 38)

From his initial "getting-his-TV-feet-wet" days, some two years back, when he envisioned a bigtime TV film era and proceeded to blue-print the transformation of his "Dangerous Assignment" radio show into a vidpic syndicated property, Sharpe today is involved in a bicycle routine that's practically leaving others breathless just watching.

All told, the Sharpe scorecard on telefilm properties, either through personal representation or as producer and partner, adds up to more production footage per year than any major Hollywood studio boasted in its peak year.

The Sharpe batting order approximates the following:
His multiple NBC-TV tie-ins include the Brian Donlevy-starring "Dangerous Assignment," one of the web's more profitable syndicated shows. On the upcoming NBC-TV syndicated film agenda is another Sharpe radio show, the Joel McCrea "Texas Rangers."

Distribs Squawk N.Y. Vidstations Favored on Pix

Distributors of feature films for television are complaining, in a renewal of an old gripe, that New York City is paying relatively less for celluloid, product than any other market in the country. Some are even suggesting that the reels be withheld from Gotham stations for a few weeks to force up the price.

A few distribs have, said that they are de-emphasizing sales to N. Y. vidstations and concentrating their efforts out of town because of the situation. They say that a second run of a good grade film will get about $250 on a N. Y. channel, while it will bring considerably more on an L. A. outlet, and relatively higher prices—in view of the smaller number of sets in circulation—in other areas.

The Gotham film buyers admit that they are paying relatively less, but they are paying relatively less, but they say that this is because it's one of the few areas where the men purchasing pix have been in the field for some time and know the ins-and-outs of the business. They have a sharper knowledge of the product they are picking up than film buyers in the hinterlands, many of whom are newcomers.

Another aspect is that Manhattan film buyers have direct personal contact with the distribs, and thus can engage in bargaining which is difficult to do by mail or phone. Additionally, they have more firms to deal with and there is greater competition among the sellers, tending to keep prices down. Further, the distribs like the idea of getting a screening in N. Y., which raises their product's prestige in the sticks.

EDUC'L FILMS MAJOR TV PAYOFF IN TOLEDO

Toledo, July 1.

Toledo, July 1.

WSPD-TV, the Storer station here is racking up its second highest daytime rating with educational films on its "summer television school" project. Series, which started a couple of months back, is designed to give young viewers a continuing contact with educational material during the "school's out" season, and is backed three times a week at 9:15-9:30 a.m. by the board of education with the medical society getting credit the other two days.

Pix involved are the library of 100-odd reels of Encyclopedia Britannica Films, distributed through Associated Program Service. Project has gotten hefty plaudits from Parent-Teachers Assn. and other public-minded organizations.

Same films are being used in a twice-weekly evening sclence program, which is sold on a participating basis and currently has a waiting list of sponsors.

Hollywood, July 1.

Following months of negotiations and expiration of its contract with the Screen Actors Guild, the Ailiance of Television Film Producers is near agreement with SAG. A majority of producers within the group has agreed on the most important issue at stake—additional payment to actors for reruns of telepix.

Producers had steadfastly refused to budge in resistance to the repayment issue, but opposition fell apart when it was disclosed that some motion picture studios are near a deal with SAG which would give additional coin to actors on vidpix reruns.

Hint of an approaching deal was given hast week when SAG agreed to a few more days of talks, although the deadline was June 24. Meetings are being held continuously and signing of a pact is expected as soon as details are worked out. SAG is adamant in its refusal to budge on the principle of additional payment to thesps for vidpix returns.

its refusal to budge on the principle of additional payment to thesps for vidpix returns.

An Alliance producer said Sunday (29) that the Alliance is consenting to the principle, with only details left now. Meantime, film studios are continuing talks with SAG for the TV pact. They met Friday and again Monday, with Columbia, RKO, UI, Republic and labor rep Charles Boren, of the Association of Motion Picture Producers participating. They are now seeking an exact formula on the definition of subsequent runs.

'Jewel Theatre's' Telepic Sponsors

Two firms with almost competitive status, Hamilton Watch and International Silver, have signed to bankroll a new series of half-hour vidpix dramas on a spot basis throughout the country. Telefilms, produced by Screen Televideo, will probably be titled "Jewel Theatre."

Distributor: CBS-TV Froducer: James Fenda Director: Charles Barton Writers: Bob Ross, David Schwartz-30 Mins; Thurs, 8:30 p.m. (alternate weeks) BLATZ BEER CBS-TV, from N. Y. (Weintraub) ... With the first 26-week series of "Amos 'n' Andy" vidpix successfully completed the preceding week, CBS-TV and Blatz Beer preemed a new cycle Thursday night (26) which, judging from the initial installment, should grab off just as high ratings as the first batch. With the same standout Negro cast, production crew and filming facilities, the Freeman Gosden-Charles Correll creation embodied most of the same chucklesome characteristics which have made their radio series a winner for 26 years.
While some vociferous, critics, mining racillues, the freeman coosden-Charles Correll creation embodied most of the same chucklesome characteristics which have made their radio series a winner for 26 years:

While some vociferous, critics, among both Negro and non-Negro organizations, blasted the vidfilm series originally as perpetuating the Negro stereotype, the new season's preem demonstrated that it is non-injurious entertainment. It's no more a stereotype production than is "Goldbergs." And despite the hassle over civil rights currently engulfing the nation in this Presidential election year, 'Amos 'n' Andy' isn't going to influence any viewer one way or the other. If anything, the series shrewdly brings out some of the best characteristics of the Negro.

Success of this TV film series probably lies in the hep scripting by Bob Ross and David Schwartz. Last week's staraz was loaded with funny situations, clever dialog and a climax which, though telegraphed, still carried plenty of punch. It revolved about the Kingfish entering the hospital insurance business as an easy way to make a fast buck and his ensuing troubles when he convinced Andy, as his first client, that he had gallstones. Show kept viewer interest all the way.

As in the original series, the cast, personally selected by Gosden and Correll, embodied almost perfectly the various voices used by the team on their radio show. Thus, Tim Moore was a standout Kingfish, and Spencer Williams brought plenty of laughs to his role of Andy. Alvin Childress Splayed Amos, Ernestine Wade was Sapphire, Kingfish's wife; Johnny Lee was Calhoun, the lawyer, and Horace Stewart played Lightnin'. Commercials for the Blatz brew were standard but gained effectiveness via their low-voiced pitching.

Although "Racket Squad" story material is said to be culled from "official files," it's rather hard to account for the guilibility of some of the confidence victims. It would follow that if they're dumb enough to fall for the amateurish lines of the con men, then they deserve to be swindled. At any rate, the series adds up to fair entertainment and some viewers may profit by Hadley's admonition: "Hang on to your wallet the next time you meet a sharpie!"

It's a fast-moving oater, based on a substantial script by Frank Burt, and offers a pleasant change in diet for the televiewer accustomed to more sophisticated entries from the Chevron sweepstakes.

Narrative is centered upon investigation of a Wells-Fargo hold-up in which a man is killed by a masked bandit. Sheriff's son is the prime suspect, and all evidence points his way, right up to dramatic finale where killer is connered in hideout by the sheriff and a w.k. gunslinger on the side of the law. Showdown discloses the killer is not the sheriff's son, and he's gunned down by the law in escape attempt after shooting the sheriff. Script packs far more dynamics than the average oater.

AFFILIATES TO CBS: 'HIKE RATES'

'-They Laughed at Clipp'

This week's crucial meeting of CBS affiliates and the network echelon, which will have a vital bearing on the future economic status of the radio industry as a whole, recalls how, more than two years ago, Roger Clipp, general manager of the WFIL stations (AM-TV) in Philadelphia, initially set the pattern for the "radio rate structure of tomorrow."

At that time Clipp's move toward a downward readjustment of nighttime rates and a recognition of daytime radio's new-found impact was regarded as incredible. Initial broadcasters' reaction was to laugh it off as the gropings of an alarmist. But Clipp, already entrenched in biglime TV, saw the shifting audience and rating trends and proceeded to set WFIL's economic house in order.

Time apparently has justified Clipp's reappraisal of AM in the face of the TV ascendancy. If the broadcasters are no longer "laughing it off" but in turn still nurse those early fears' and resentment, the sweeping CBS rate readjustment, despite affiliate resistance, has virtually "conditioned" the industry to the changes in store for radio.

What happens when the affiliates call in the Columbia brass today (Wed.) for a face-to-face showdown is something else again, however. For it's generally believed that, regardless of how firm the affiliates' stand, CBS is determined to effect saturd, CBS is determined to effect a drastic nighttime rate slash, purported in some quarters to be from 40%-50%. The answer, will be forthdoming by tonight.

It's a move which may have deep significance for the future of AM, since it was CBS' "rape of the rates" last year which had all networks following suit. Meeting, which drew 143 station toppers to the Hotel Ambassador, N. Y., who account for 90% of CBS' dollar volume, was marked by a strong demonstration of solidarity and firmness. This show of unity is expected to have its effect on the web's brass—William S. Paley, Frank Stanton, Adrian Murphy and Herbert V. Akerberg—who will attend the session today (Wed.) to air their side of the case.

"Should the network still push its plant to are the ever the rest to a strong decide."

"Should the network still push its plans to axe rates, we'll decide our own course in an afternoon session," an affiliate spokesman said. The group is a "rump," unofficial body, distinct from the Columbia Affiliates Advisory Board, which does not deal with the financial and business sides of network-affiliate relationships.

Called by 10 key CBS stations "to deal with the current emergency any way we could," the rump group is to be made permanent. "We'll be around as long as there's an emergency, but we hope there's an end to that pretty soon," a spokesman said.

Attendance was a welcome surplies to those who sailed the carry and those who sailed the carry and the sailed the sailed the sailed the carry and the sailed the spokesman said.

Attendance was a welcome surprise to those who called the confab. Delegates not only paid their own way but also a $10 registration fee to cover expenses of the meeting. Stations from as far away as California were represented, with Texas heavily repped. Alaskan and Canadian stations had observers present.

Canadian stations had observers present.

Key point in the resolution was the demand of affiliates that CBS stop its efforts to establish the price affiliates are paid for carrying network shows, and that these should be established bilaterally by the network and stations. CBS has the contractual right in pacts with the majority of stations (about 160) to set rates unilaterally, but not for at least eight key outlets. However, affiliates hope that this declaration will stop the web from exercising its legal right to determine the rate.

As evidence of their strong feeling, the affiliates moved to sign the resolution individually. Many stations which didn't attend sent wires endorsing the purpose of the meeting. Non-attendees are being (Continued on page 36)

Gleason's Billing

Gleason's Billing

Something of a precedent is being established in Jackie Gleason's vaude and presentation house tour this summer, prior to debuting his hour-long Saturday night TV show for CBS in the fall.

It'll mark the first time that a headliner will get marquee billing as a network television star. For a while there were some Loew's managerial squawks, with an attempt made to confine the billing to CBS and eliminate the word "television." However, Gleason won out and the full identity will remain.

have boosted their nighttime rates to a new high, effective this week. Web spokesmen in N. Y. attributed the rate hikes to the fact that the stations have long been underpriced in relation to rates on competing network outlets in the same markets, and in relation to their increased circulation.

Illustrative of the situation is KPRC, Houston, which has not revised its rates since October, 1939. Houston outlet upped its gross Class A hour charge from $234 to $230. NBC 0.&0. outlet is KNBC, San Francisco, which hiked its rate from $414 to $475. Other two affiliates are WOAI, San Antonio, up from $306 to $340, and WKY, Oklahoma City, up from $252 to $280.

Chicago, July 1.

Stearns alleges that the station made him change his format to a mere reading of recipes, thereby causing a severe drop in his ratings, which in turn caused his cancellation.

that won loud praise from the CBS Radio affiliates meeting in N. Y. yesterday (Tues.), Victor A. Sholis, yesterday (Tues.), victor A. Shaw, veepee-director of WHAS and WHAS-TV, Louisville, laid down a five-point plan to save radio.

The Sholis platform is: (1) end the reckless price war by making no further blind rate cut; (2) stop under-the-table deals as of now; (3) take the lead in underwriting and developing, sound research that will measure the value of radio as an advertising medium; (4) halt the use of "pocket piece" ratings and other research of limited and questionable value as AM's principal selling tools; and (5) take the initiative in restoring standards of good broadcasting.

Sholis started out by stressing the affillates' "sincere respect" for the CBS top brass. "For many years a mutually satisfactory relationship has existed between the network and its affiliates," he said. "We earnestly want it to continue." Calling Columbia the "number one network," he said, "we must now accept the responsibility of providing leadership for the industry. In retrospect it is obvious now that this meeting should have been held some two years ago." He recalled that two years ago NBC announced its intention to cut rates, based, on the inroads made by TV in each specific radio market. But the NBC affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night—for the affiliates it was cutting their rates—morning, noon and night cut. The web, Sholis declared, explained that the cut was made to "take us out of the cloak-and-suit business" and it was not an adjustment for TV."

The competition promptly followed suit, Sholls stressed, and today, 16 months later, the "situation is worse. The deals are not only still with us, but they've sunk lower into the sub-basement."

Reviewing NBC's protected "economic plan" to readjust rates, which was abortive, he said CBS followed by rewriting its contract with affiliates: (1) revising the method of computing percentage payment to the affiliate so that both the net and the station would (Continued on page 35)

NBC-TV's 'Money Isn't Everything' Presentation Cops NCAA Grid Bid

NBC-TV, in gaining rights last-week to the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.'s fall football schedule, pulled almost a complete switch on the money-only policy it had previously established in bidding for top sports events—and so managed to win the rights away from competing nets who had bid more in actual coin.

managed to win the rights away from competing nets who had bid more in actual coin.

Web, in its presentation to the NCAA, substituted originality for money and so, for the first time, is not being blamed for setting a dangerous overpay precedent for the rest of the industry, as happened when it got the World Series, Rose Bowl, etc. In terms of money, NBC bid only the minimum asked by the NCAA, or twice its hourly Class A time rate, whereas other nets are reported to have bid two-and-a-half times their Class A rate. Web instead placed major emphasis on what it thought were reasons why it should get the plum instead of its competitors.

History of NBC's successful campangining goes back to mid-April, when prexy Joseph H, McConnell issued a blanket memo to all departments that he wanted the football this year. In 1951, NBC walked into the NCAA with a blank check. Sports chief Tom Gallery, public affairs exec Davidson Taylor and other department heads figured that all webs this year would have access to the same number or stations, the same sponsors and could offer about the same amount of money. As a result, they decided to go ahead with the minimum bid and attempt to work out 2 more comprehensive and original presentation on what the NCAA could gain by granting the rights to NBC. tation on what the NCAA could gain by granting the rights to NBC.

Now that it has won the rights, NBC's next move will be to line up a sponsor or sponsors to bankroll the grid schedule, as revealed in VARIETY several weeks ago, the football package would cost a single advertiser about $4,000,000, or more than twice what any of the network bankrollers are paying for the conventions this year. As a result, the sale to any single sponsor would make it the highest single package deal in advertising history. NBC has its eye on several car companies, but expects finally (Continued on page 38)

Allen Competing With Himself?

There's a possibility that when Fred Allen preems his Tuesday night at 10 television show on NBc in the fall for Old Gold cigarets, the radio version, which OG has also bought, may also go into the Tuesday 10 o'clock segment. That would be accomplished through the simple expedient of taping the sound track of the filmed TV show and giving it a simultaneous sound track of the filmed TV show and giving it a simultaneous spread. Similar process is used on the Groucho Marx show, but in the case of the latter his radio pro-gram is heard on Wednesdays and the TV version on Thursday.

There have been cases, as with Arthur Godfrey, of doing a simultaneous live show, but this would be the first instance of a filmed program competing back-to-back with a sound version of the same personality

Arthur Godfrey, of doing a simultaneous live show, but this would be the first instance of a filmed program competing back-to-back with a sound version of the same personality.

Should Allen wind up Tuesday nights on radio, it would give NBC a triple programming continuity reminiscent of the bigleague wartime days when Tuesday on NBC led the Hooper parade, Dean Martin & Jerry Lewis go in at 90'clock for Chesterfield (Bob Hope's longtime spot); with Fibber & Molly re-slotted for 9:30, and Allen at 10.

Velotta Protests In N.Y. Taxi Hearing Ban On Recording Equipment

Thomas Velotta, ABC news v.p., last week protested to New York's Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri on deputy mayor Charles Horowitz' ordering tape recording equipment of WJZ from the Board of Estimates' hearing on increasing taxifores fares. Velotta called the action "a decided infringement on the freedom of communication and expression as well as an impingement on the efforts of WIZ to carry out its policy of affording maximum public service through coverage and broadcasting of matters of public interest."

WJZ correspondent Julian Anthony was told to get his gear out of the hearing, as a result of which a half-hour show which had been scheduled for that night, Friday (27), was cancelled. Velotta said that the deputy mayor's action was 'm' distinct contrast" to the city's attitude when the outlet recorded and aired the board's hearings on the city budget on three days in April. Anthony asked several of the board members to bring up the question as to whether he could record the session, but all refused to bring the issue to a vote.

Gen. Foods' 175G Splurge on 'Today'

NRC-TV this week moved toward the solution of one of its chief sponsorship problems on its earlybird "Today" show, by wrapping up the sale of a five-minute strip on the show to General Foods. While the 7 to 9 a. m. cross-the-boarder had previously been showing a profit, the web had not been able to crack the top spending advertisers of GF's class. As a result, it hopes that the GF sale will open the gates to a flood of other bigcoin bankrollers.

GF, through Young & Rublcam, bought the strip for an original 13 weeks, at an estimated cost for the cycle of $175,000. On a $2-week basis, that would total well over $500,000. NBC sales execs henceforth will pitch the fact that, if an advertiser like GF, interested only in buying on the best cost-perthousand deal available, purchased "Today," then the show definitely pays off for its sponsors. GF will plug Jell-O Pudding and its cereals. NBC this week also sold a strip

Fitzgeralds Discover 20% U.S. Customs' Tax On Foreign Taped Shows

Ed and Pegeen Fitzgerald discovered that there is a 20% duty, predicated on the value of the commercial radio time, on all taperecordings made abroad shipped back for broadcasting.
U. S. Customs assesses the taped interviews on the commercial value of the time-slots. Accordingly, the Mr. and Mrs. team will only originate one broadcast to-morrow (Thursday) morning from Capt. Manning's quarters aboard the new S.S. United States, and then proceed on the maiden voy-age, essentially as a holiday. If there is a means of getting ship-board taped-interviews back to their WJZ, N.Y., origination point, without that 20% customs rap they will proceed as originally in-tended. It is still in the process of rationalization. only originate one broadcast toof rationalization.

If the taped broadcasts are considered as news they probably can be brought in sans duty. In 1949-50, MBS gabber Cecil Brown fought out the issue with Customs, claiming that tapes which had been impounded pending valuation constituted "extinguishing of the news." He argued that it was like taxing an Associated Press news wire. As a result the ruling was changed and on his round-theworld four-month trip last year, Brown sent back his tapes without any hitch.

B'casters to Congress: 'Keep Hands Off TV': Fetzer in 'Patience' Plea

Washington, July 1.

Keep hands off TV and let audience-conscious broadcasters work out program problems on the medium. This was the appeal which the broadcasting industry made to Congress last week as the House Interstate Commerce subcommittee investigating immor's and offensive programs completed the first phase of its hearings.

At a session last Thursday (26) to hear testimony from the National Assn. of Radio- and TV Broadcasters, John E. Fetzer, chairman of the Television Code Review Board, pleaded for patience with the new and dynamic medium. "After all," he told the Committee, "television is a mirror of the genius and talent and of the thought of the American people. Its level can be no higher than the general level of education and culture of our people."

Petzer, who owns WKZO-Tv in Kalamazoo, Mich., reminded the Committee that TV has "multitudinous problems" in programming and developing program personnel. "Many programs on the air today are only temporary adjuncts to a finer plan of development that will evolve from practical operating experience," he said. "It should be remembered that talent in Tw reaches a high mortality rate."

To illustrate his point, Fetzer noted that the combined output of follywood film studios in 1951 was 432 features or 684 hours of entertainment or only enough for one TV station for six weeks. "In other words," he said, "the entire motion picture yearly output of (Continued on page 38)

CONFUSION AT NET

NBC's current administrative reppraisal and repatterning, sparked by the recent appointment of Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver as veepee in charge of both radio and television operations, with Frank White as general manager for both AM and TV, has served to highlight an existing confusion within the organization in regards to dual veepeeships and duplication of functions among key personnel.

It's anticipated that, in a further expansion of the current executive reshuffling, an attempt will be made to resolve the Siamese complex that appears to find some of the network administrators mired in a state of flux.

Where other networks are content with one finance administrator, NBC actually has two key execs functioning within that area. They are Joseph Heffernan, v.p. in charge of finance, and Joseph McDonald, who was brought over from ABC as veepee-treasurer of the NBC organization.

NBC organization.

NBC employees also see a need for some clarification of the "owned-and-operated" divisional setup, with two veepees now functioning in that area: James Gaines is the network's key o & o man. But. another v.p., Carleton Smith, who was head of NBC's AM-TV station relations before Harry Bannister was brought in, has been moved into the o & o setup as well.

It's to be noted that none of this pertains, as in the case of CBS, to any "split down the middle" technique, which obviously entails the designation of separate veepeeships for both AM and TV. In the case of NBC, the duplications encompass the same areas of operation.

similarly there are two general executives in TV—Davidson Taylor, Jr., and A. A. Schechter. The TV news operators report to Taylor. The operators of the early morning "Today" show (which is basically news) report to Schechter. Slightly confusing the picture is the fact that while TV news chief Bill McAndrew reports to Taylor, the head of AM news—Henry Cassiry—reports to Charles (Bud) Barry, radio programming veepee.

Meanwhile the status of Charles R. Denny, executive vice-president, now that the Weaver-White combo heads up radio-TV, continues to prompt considerable conjecture prompt considerabl around the network.

Minneapolis, July 1.

In one North Dakota town, Litchfield, 340 miles distant from KSTP-TV and WTCN-TV here, there's already one television set. The filling station proprietor, who owns it, has a huge and costly aerial and claims he's able to get, "about an hour a week" of reception. He's a wrestling fan and particularly happy when he's able to receive those shows out of the Twin Cities.

So far the existence of the one TV set hasn't hurt business at the single Litchfield movie theatre, the set owner's two sons being among the regular patrons of the showhouse.

Ford Foundation TV 'Omnibus' Sets Top Talent Array

First network television show to e produced by the Ford Founda-

be produced by the Ford Foundation will be an hour-and-a-half weekly series of varied formats, which will be written, directed and acted in by some of the top U. S. and foreign talent. Titled "Omnibus," the series will be aired Sundays from 4:30 to 8 p. m. via CBS-TV, starting Nov. 9.

As detailed last week in VARIETY, the show is to be available for sponsorship, which will give the Foundation's Radio-TV Vorkshop a chance to recoup its production costs and give CBS a chance to obtain its time revenue. Under plans set this week, the series will be offered to five participating bankrollers, each of which must be acceptable to the Foundation.

Alistair Cooke, chief correspondent in the U. S. for the Manchester Guardian and winner of a Peabody Award this year, is to be emeca. Shows are to be both live and film. Now in the works, according to Workshop director Robert Saudek, are three original plays by Maxwell Anderson; five short French ballets now being produced in Paris; a special video series by maestro Leopold Stokowski; examples of how film is used in medical research and in industry; a series of plays by James Agee, plus occasional films made by the American and foreign institutions. In addition to these, Richard de Rochemont, formerly producer of March, of Time, and Jean Benoit-Levy, will present individual shows on "Omnibus." Besides Saudek, the permanent staff of the show includes John Coburn Turner, Saudek's assistant, and Franklin Heller, now on leave from CBS-TV. Initial "Omnibus" series is planned for a 26-week run.

ERNIE SIMON'S 35G WGN EXCLUSIVE PACT

Chicago, July 1.

Ernie Simon, one of Chi's betterknown disk jockeys and teevee personalities, was signed to an exclusive WGN contract last week, it was announced by the station's general manager Frank P. Schreiber.
Although details of the pact were not revealed, it's reported Simon will get a minimum of $35,000 annually.

Simon was a longtime disk jock on several Windy City radio stations; his five years on WBKB's "Curbstone Cut-Up" on WBKB make him a video veteran. He starts his new activities with a 2 to 3 p. m. d.j. stint on WGN, and the station has tele plans for him in the fall. He'll be available for web programming on both Mutual and DuMont, with which WGN and WGN-TV are affiliated.

Shrewd maneuver by Guy Ga-brielson, Republican national committee chairman, forced the television networks to toss in the towel temporarily today (Tues.) on their attempts to cover the GOP com-attempts to cover the GOP com-mittee hearings at the Hotel Hil-ton here. Barred from the con-tested delegate hearings, conse-quently, the TV webs settled for moving their cameras into a session being held by party bigwigs on the civil rights issue. CBS-TV and NBC-TV both set up their cameras in the committee being held by party bigwigs on the civil rights issue.

CBS-TV and NBC-TV both set up their cameras in the committee hearing room early this morning. CBS went on the air from there at 11 a.m. but NBC, considering the proceedings at that time too dull to televise, didn't bother to do a pickup. Promptly at 11:30 when it looked as though the session might get interesting, Gabrielson called a temporary adjournment. Then, when the session reconvened at 2 p.m., the nets found that the committee chairman had moved into a different room and had locked the door on them.

NBC sneaked a radio mike into the second roor. and attached it to a tape recorder, Through that ruse, the web was able to pick up some of the talk for a playback on its regular news shows. Mike was subtened to the talk for a playback on its regular news shows. Mike was suberequently spotted, though, and disconnected. While newspaper reporters were permitted into the hearing room, meanwhile, all still and newsreel cameras were banned, same as the TV lenses.

Prior to the session's convening this morning, backers of both Sen. Robert A. Taft and Gen. Dwight D. Elsenhower, chief GOP candidates, placed the blame squarely on the other for the nix on TV'ling the hearings. Both said they themselves were in favor of it, but could not go against the wishes of the committee exees. Sub-committee has been formed, meanwhile, to investigate the situation, but it is not expected to act until the meetings are concluded.

Kellogg (Ex-K&E) Biz to Burnett

With Kenyon & Eckhardt having resigned its share of the Kellogg account, the cereal sponsor has put all its brands into the Leo Burnett agency's basket for advertising in the U.S. and Canada, effective Oct. 1.

Move was expected in the trade since Burnett had recently picked off part of the Kellogg's billings. The new brands, including All Bran, Pep, the Variety package, Bran Flakes, Ralsin Bran, Shredded Wheat, Gro-Pup and the company's feed division, will give Burnett an additional $3,000,000 annually in billings. it's estimated. It has been handling Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies.

Move will end snafus such as the Battle Creek outfit battling itself last fall, when a Burnett-placed kidstrip was on Mutual and a K&E-handled kidstrip was on Mutual and a K&E-handled kidstrip was on ABC, both in the same 5:30 p.m. period. The MBS-Burnett entries remained on while the ABC-K&E shows were eventually yanked.

Edward R. Murrow, with a chance to score with a one-two parlay on CBS-TV's "See' it Now". Sunday (29), made only the second half of the show pay off—his coverage of a mock atom bomb attack on N. Y. City. First half of the show, in which he flew out to Denver for an exclusive filmed interview with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, missed fire, mostly because both the questions he fired at the general and the latter's answers were strictly political platitudes. A-bomb segment, however, had all the suspense and thrills of a Hollywood super-production, besides underscoring sharply this country's vulnerability to an enemy air raid, which Murrow blamed mostly on a lack of volunteer civilian spotters.

underscoring snarpiy this country's vulnerability to an enemy air raid, which Murrow blamed mostly on a lack of volunteer civilian spotters.

Murrow and his 'co-producer, Fred W. Friendly, had CBS commentator Hanold K. Smith flying in a B-29 from a European base, with a film cameraman also on board to record the action. Murrow himself was on a jet interceptor, one of several, which caught up with the bomber over Connecticut but which was not able to interfere with its bombing run. Through carefully shrewd editing of the raid last Wednesday (25), the suspense mounted gradually as the B-29 with its two escorts approached Manhattan and finally shmulated dropping its A-bomb just, a block from the Empire State Building, Depiction of how the bomber could escape the Army's radar net and the intricate maneuverings confronting the civilian defense volunteers in tracking its course was effectively projected.

Eisenhower interview was set up at Ike's invitation, with Murrow having flown to Denver Thursday (26) to huddle with the GOP Presidential candidate in the backyard of his in-laws' home. Effictenminute bit served to get across Ike's family personality but, except for a few cracks at Sen. Robert A. Taft, his chief contender for the nomination, he hadn't much to say. The gardener was brought out for a few lines of dialog and Mrs. Ike served them some iced tea, which Murrow and the general apparently enjoyed because the weather was hot. It would seem that Ike missed a good bet to get in some real politicking via the interview.

One of the CBS-TV film projectors, incidentally, broke down during the show, forcing Murrow to deliver the Alcoa commercial live. As usual in such cases, the plug was far more effective that way, Stanza was the Jast of the season, and Murrow tossed in a neat pitch on how nice it had been to work for Alcoa during the season. Show will be back for the same bank-truder in the fall.

The new S.S. United States luxury liner got its TV shakedown Saturday night (28) when 'Your Hit Parade' show made its finale videocast of the season via a live pickup from the ship. With each production number staged in a different part of the liner, the cameras were able to spotlight the richly appointed staterooms, restaurants, bridge and decks. It was a cleverly executed stunt in which the ship's decor served as a lush background for the show's rundown of the hit songs. As a susua, Dorothy Collins, Elleen Wilson and Snooky Lanson (in a commander's uniformably handled the vocals while the ballet troupe performed an attractive number on deck.

Swayze's first news story paradoxically was the fire which swept through the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn Monday afternoon and it seemed slightly strange to have him introduce film clips of the fire 'from the sunny Hollywood streetcorner.' Rest of the show was 'up to the usual "Carayan" standards, including live pickups from Chicago and Washington on current events, and films on Secretary of State Dean Acheson's landing in Berlin and the anti-Syngman Rhee riots in Seoul, Korea. During this time, Swayze spieled from a desk inside the NBC studios. He was supposed to run back outside again to introduce the new Miss Universe for a surprise windup, but his timing was off and there was an embarrassed pause while confused the audio system.

Only reason that he didn't go all the way was the fact that he picked a particularly slow-moving and off-the-beaten-path story, vin his own adaptation of an old legend by Lafcadio Hearn, titled 'The Soul of the Great Bell.' As played by a good cast topped by Boris Karloff and newcomer Raimonda Orselli, the show generated a quiet type of warmth and charm but, overall, failed to register too strongly.

Kickoff topic, "Should There Be a Change in the Political Party in Power?" was raw meat material for Republicans Charles Travers and Roger Lapham, Jr., (son of the ex-Mayor) and Democrats Robert I. McCarthy and Irving Rosenblatt, Jr. Speaking for themselves as active party work horses (but not as spokesmen for candidates nor confined to questions submitted by viewers), they were in a position to knock themselves out with off-the-cuff ad libs. And they did.

On the opener (25), Eddy, a mild-mannered moderator, was almost overwhelmed by the bombastic explosive power of his panelists. He used a buzzer to silence the verbiage when it got out of bounds, but frequently found himself so engrossed in the heated arguments he forgot to apply it.

Show is basically sound betound minister to the total point to apply it.

Show is basically sound because long-range format holds strictly to highly controversial material with qualified locals in free-for-all repartee about topics on which they are authorities. The absence of a national "name" is not a detriment if participants are ardent, eloquent and fortified with factual data as these men were.

Tom Weatherwax slighted the end men, Travers and Rosenblatt, with camera angles limited to profiles; and Lapham, Jr.'s name plate read "Latham, Jr.," but otherwise preem had tip-top verbal voltage that made 30 minutes seem like 10.

Scripted by Margaret Buell Wilder from a Bret Harte original, "Mirage" is the mildly diverting story of a femme miffed by her husband's inattention, and fits smoothly into the pattern established by Frank, Wisbar for his "Fireside Theatre" series for P&G. Unpretentious tale has a desert locale, and weaves about wife of a miner, and her attempt to escape from boredom.

The femme's an ex-circus performer, and when an escaped killer (a circus man) makes his way to the cabin in the desert, she helps him and plans to lam across the border with him, figuring her husband doesn't love her anymore. Then her spouse shoots a cop who is making passes at her, she's aware of his love, and all ends well. It's like making four the hard way.

Initial show had four housewives on hand along with their respective husbands and children. WOR-TV staffer Barbara Welles interviewed the gals while Dan McCullough quizzed the hubbies as to their backgrounds, etc. Miss Welles tried hard to draw out individual preferences as to homemaking and hobbies from the contestants. However, the contestants approach was sound enough, but some of the hausfraus obviously were reticent and ill at ease.

Although it follows that neophytes would be camera-shy by nature, this could be overcome to some extent by some rehearsal in advance. Likewise, McCullough could also profit by some pre-pregram briefing for his inability to remember names created an embarrassing situation. Show preemed on CBS-TV Mon-day (30) with the same writer, Irna Phillips, and the same cast leads and looked as though it will achieve the same mid-high ratings it's obtained on radio. Fact that the video version is to follow the same basic story line as its AM sister, however, indicates that it won't pick up many viewers from the radio side.

Preem had no lead-in to indicate that it was a first, merely picking up the yarn as though viewers had seen a preceding stanza last Friday. Initialer had Joe Roberts separated from his wife, Meta, who's having nightmares over fear of how their daughter, Kathy, will fare in Joe's hands. The "All Star Summer Revue," the hot-weather replacement for the NBC-TV "All Star Revue," has a fairly solid idea that should happily inhabit this time slot and keep the period warm for the fall and winter season. This mixture of lesser-known and recognized talent when properly fused should not only be able to entertain, but do a service to the tele industry by proving that several newcomers can carry the bigtime.

However, the initial session revealed several bugs. Program went onities by failing to show many of its performers up properly and with a lack of suitable writing and production.

For example the things they did to Mr. Ballantine shouldn't happen even to B. S. Pully. This comedy magician has proved his value on the vaude circuits, but failed to show his familiarity with this medium. He was permited to become so tense as to lose his comedy touch. There was also a running gag which would have been better forgotten.

Dave Garroway carried the bulk of the show. The dentist bit that he did on his own stanza was the highlight of his efforts. His emceeing proved effective and he made a generally good impression. His cracks about New York in the summertime shoulant endear him to that portion of the entertainment industry that rely on a heavy tourist trade. It was his only departure from good taste on the show.

Program also integrated its commercials with the comedy routines of Britisher Oliver Wakefield. He did an unfinished sentence routine which embellished the acceptability of the Kellog spiels.

There was only one major attempt at a sketch, a baseball bit that didn't come off for the simple reason that it wasn't essentially funny. The Yankee catcher, Yogi Berra, was completely wasted—but what else could be done with Berra in a situation of this kind?

Variety talent included Georgia Gibbs, who did okay with her two numbers; the Kanazawas, who also registered with risley, and the Acronomiacs with a fine line of fast moving gymnastics.

The Paul Steffin Dancers showed themselves to be skilled dancers. The number obviously in the Jack Cole iddiom was their best. Jose.

"Summer School" is another attempt to inject some educational material into commercial videocasting schedules. This effort, however, is not likely to enhance the future of educational programming. It is too obviously stamped with that self-conscious "this is education"

step in the imaginative utilization the kids, but neither the title nor the format for this series is calculated to hit the mark.

Initial mistake is the setting of

As a TV entrait, "Info" makes practically no concessions to the newer sight-and-sound medium. Nor, for that matter, to the changing tastes since its radio heyday. True, it is literate gab as projected by a group of warm, animated intellectuals who enjoy delving into their craniums.

Their encyclopedic minds and the speed and deftness with which they can articulate their wealth of knowledge is as startling to TV viewing mortals as it was 15 years ago via the AM kilocycles. That Fadiman combines both a personal magnetism and unusual ability is, of course, no surprise to the TV audience. Kleran, with his complete ease, lack of self-consciousness and his ebuillence (not to mention his almost-fabled memory) remains one of "Info's" vital components. F.P.A. is a distinct personality who never projects himself—yet definitely belongs in the charmed circle. Michener, too, fitted into the cerebral pattern as though he were a longtime panelite on the show.

"Info," on the other hand, makes no pretentions of being anything but a showcase for picking the brains of some extraordinarily gifted people. There are no gimmicks, no low-cut femme fatales, no prizes. It retains its intellectual integrity and as such should recapture its audience. But it will be a limited segment of the TV viewers who will content themselves with this non-gimmicked form of entertainment offering little in the way of visual values. "Info" is still an interesting and entertaining show and it would be unfortunate if this limited audience were not to be considered in the scheme of TV patterns.

launched Friday (27) by CBS-TV.

It's a creditable job, as narrated by Don Hollenbeck, a gabber who registers warmly and intelligently, and written and produced by William R. Workman. On the preem the subjects of "Candidate Closeups" were Sen. Robert A. Tatt and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Two intriguing 15-minute documentaries were wrapped up on the leading contenders for the GOP nod. Heavy use of film clips was made; these were well selected and edited, giving some good gilmpses into the characters of the two men. Taft talking to 500 "Belles for Bob" and telling some amusing stories about his father; Ike slogging through the mud and, garbed in cap and gown, speaking at Columbia U. Some of the old footage was used in excellent fashion, as when a sequence on the Senátor fishing was screened with Hollenbeck making analogies to Taft's political angling.

The emphasis is on the personalities. Some material from the aspirants' policy speeches was inconcentrated on the human interest, anecdotal aspects and only touched on the more significant elements of the candidates. Visual aids were lacking; charts could have been effective in showing the scoreboard on delegates. On the whole, though, this was a strong entry.

Hyde In Defense of TV Allocation Assignment Plan to Ease Problems

Fort Monroe, Va., July 1.

The battle between members of the FCC over the wisdom of the lift-freeze TV. allocation plan entered another round here last week when Comr. Rosel Hyde told the Virginia Assn. of Broadcasters that handling of TV applications without the plan would involve insurmountable problems and delay station construction for years. Without an assignment plan, Hyde told the Association, the Commission would wind up, with a proceeding that would be "administratively unfeasible, economically wasteful and so demanding in time as to make the recent freeze appears a brief interfude."

As in the case of a recent speech by Comr. George Sterling, Hyde did not mention the name of his fellow commissioner, Robert Jones, who has been attacking the plan as inequitable in its allocation of channels and unfair to the small cities.

Hyde gave five reasons why an assignment plan was regarded as essential in handling TV applications after the lifting of the freeze. First, he said, was the need for avoiding an "administrative movel of the property of the said. tions after the lifting of the freeze. First, he said, was the need for avoiding an "administrative morass." Second was the importance of making the most efficient use of TV channel space. Third was the desire to protect the interests of the smaller communities through specific assignments for them. Fourth was to assure reservation of channels for noncommercial educational stations. Fifth was to prevent international complications. Maybe the plan isn't perfect, said Hyde, and maybe some "rough spots" are to be expected in "any plan of this magnitude." However, he asserted, the majority of the Commission felt "it was more important to have a good plan immediately... than a more perfect plan sometime in the indefinite future."

First Post-Freeze TV Outlet May Go To KFEL, Denver

Washington, July 1.

Likelihood that radio station KFEL in Denver may get the first TV permit under the new allocation plan and be the first new TV outlet on the air in the post lift-freeze period appeared today as applications filed with the FCC showed no contestants for Gene O'Fallon's, bid for channel 2 in Colorado's capital city.

All other commercial VHF channels assigned to Denver are being contested. Metropolitan Television Co., who recently bought NBC's o and o station KOA, it is understood, will battle KMYR for channel 4. Alf Landon, former Kansas governor, is also expected to file for this channel.

Two applicants have already filed for channel 9. They are Empire Coil Co., which owns WXEL (TV) in Cleveland, and radio station KVOD in Denver.

Statlon KLZ, affiliate of CBS, is expected to lave competition on its bid for channel 9 from Denver Television Co., a new company composed of local business men.

There may be other applicants for channel 7 and 9.

CONTROL ONLY 42% OF SHOWS

FCC fears that the networks are monopolizing production of television programs, at the expense of the independent packagers and advertising agencies, are countered by a study made for the National Assn. of Radio & Television Broadcasters. However, some indie packagers maintain that the webs are wresting control from them and the agencies.

Survey, made by Ross Reports for the NARTB, shows that NBC-TV and CBS-TV control less than half of their commercial shows and only slightly more than 50% of their total programming. ABC-TV and DuMont, according to the Ross data, produce only a "minor per-centage" of the programs they heam

Camel Renewals Pour $10,000,000 Into NBC Coffers

A single bankroller, Camel cigarets, handed NBC a renewal package this week totaling more than $10,000,000. That's the estimated annual billings on the two radio and two TV shows which Camel currently sponsors on NBC and on each of which it picked up its option for an additional year.

Shows are "Grand Ole Opry" and Vaughn Monroe, both aired Saturday nights on radio; the "Camel News Caravan," a quarter-hour cross-the-board show on TV, and "Your Show of Shows," Saturday night video production in which the ciggie firm bankrolls the first half-hour. Camel, of course, also has several other shows on CBS radio and TV. Esty agency handles the entire account.

"News Caravan" represents probably the most expensive single-show outlay by a TV client. In addition to the five quarter-hour segments, Camel buys the package from the actworks.

The stations "over-abundance" and ABC's "scarcity" were neither desirable, Jahncke's letter read. The failure of ABC-TV to get more station clearances than it has obtained, it continued, places a "limit on ABC's ability to compete."

Sustaining
CBS, from N. Y.

Almost a perennial summer feature on CBS Radio, "Strawhat Concerts" returned to the air Tuesday night (24) with Alfredo Antonini leading his staff orch through a nicely-paced repertoire of tunes. Once a listener tuned in, it made for okay listening but the show certainly doesn't present any inducement to swing the dial over to CBS' way. At best, it's an okay filler for the dog-days.

Show presents somewhat of a ripley in that the same results could be obtained far more easily and at less expense via a disk jockey program. No attempt was made on the new season's preem last week to give if'any personality. Announcer Warren Sweeney intoed each number in accepted style and the orch played it. There weren't even any vocalists involved. Ostensible answer is that the musicains, being on staff, get paid anyhow so the web might as well take advantage of their weekly checks by putting them to work.

Show replaces the web's usual Tuesday night dance band remote

Show replaces the web's usual Tuesday night dance band remote in this slot, so it ties in with the program schedule. As such, it won't lose any listeners but it probably won't pick up any either.

Program moves off the beaten path by presenting a news roundup from the Times-Union plant, where Howard Maschmeier, WPTR director, of news and special they write stories for the next morning's editions. A spontaneousorigination, it authentically reflects some of the excitement and drama of the city room. Occasionally listeners eavesdrop on an important story in the making.

Show has a certain unevenness, even to the voices of hurrying staffers, but this is balanced by a naturalness and a novelty which many studio pickups lack. George O. Williams, managing editor of the Hearst daily, is understood to Maschmeier usually starts with Cliff Carroll, who recounts P. 1 positions. He follows with City Editor: Con Heffernan, outlining the assignments on which various men and women are working. Hefernan, incidentally, displays an excellent radio voice. Maschmeier then walks around, chatting with reporters at their typewriters. He gets as many as seven or eight on the mike. They vary in quality of tone and in ad libbing ability, but generally put over the essentials of the yarn compactly. Maschmeier ends with news ticker briefs.

Wisely proceeding on the theory that two-and-a-half hours of a network originated hillibilly program would be too much for metropolitan New York listeners to stomach in the afternoon, ABC flagship WIZ set the "Eddie Dunn Show" for the direct of minutes in lieu of Tennessee Ernie. A disk jockey, Dunn has a facile line of patter which he dishes out betwixt tunes by such platter faves as Perry Como and Dinah Shore.
On Monday's (30) preem Dunn tossed off pleasantries about how his stanza was named, the fact that this is "National Petunia Week" and a variety of quips—some good, some mediocre. But he kept the accent on music. Which was all to the good. Lest New Yorkers be left out in the cold entirely insofar as Tennessee Ernie is concerned,
WIZ pipes him in from 3:30 to 4.
Cal Tinney, also in the bucclic vein, holds down the 4 to 4:30 segment.

Warbler Jean Tighe was a bit pretentious in her gabbing chores but hit nicely in her piping assignments. Miss Tighe has a good blues quality and belted out such tunes as "St. Louis Blues," "What Is This Thing Called Love" and "More Than You Know" with proper feeling. Her workover of "Great Day" was packed with zest. She'll win lots of fans via this series.

Mac Perrin Singers delivered a cute workover of "Play a Simple Melody" and were okay in a choral chore at the opening and closing of the stanza. Topflight orch backing of Sylvan Levin's orch sparked the session and heightened its listening appeal. Orch was standout in an excellently arranged "Darktown Strutter's Ball.", Gros.

Newest entry in this field is Paul Denis, former tradepaper editor, radio and gossip columnist who has a long and varied background in show biz chronicling. He's also authored several tomes, one dealing with the gastronomic taste of celebs. Thus in his present stand, Denis puts to use a major part of his background.

Denis, operating from one of the oldest restaurants in the Times Square area, the Blue Ribbon, indicated that he'll turn this time sector into a studious discussion stanza. In his opening remarks, he dwelt on 'the venerability of this restaurant, segueing into some of its former diners, foremost among whom was Victor Herbert. From this start, he shifted to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, which Herbert helped found. With this precede Otto A. Harbach, Society's prexy, spoke on the collection setup, and composer-performer Mel Torme chimed in.

Denis handles a guest well, getting a good bit of information out of an interview. He's still a green hand at this program, but he's likely to get along in the medium.

Thomas F. O'Nell, Jr.'s, extended power over the Mutual network was further reflected last week when the MBS stockholders elected Ward D. pointing up the trend of soap operas toward dealing with more mature and real problems, CBS' "Second Mrs. Burton" has expanded its "Family Counsellor" feature from a bi-weekly to weekly basis. Segment is a three-and-a-half-minute interview tallpiece on the Wednesday edition of the daytime serial and discusses questions such as the worthy causes, cooking, public service messages and similar subjects of general interest to women. For example, on the July 16 broadcast, Albert Kornfeld, editor of House & Garden mag, will spiel on "life with children."

At first Young & Rubicam agency feared that the distaff dialers might object to having the washboard weeper trimmed for the gab gessions, but the feature has brought favorable audience response as evidenced by a large mailbag.

Radio and television industries last week were kudosed by the American Cancer Society for the plugs they aired on the recent ACS fundraising drive. Walter King, AM-TV director of the society, reports that during the '52 ACS campaign, the broadcasters gave 346 cancer plugs on AM nets, compared with 240 the previous year, and TV webs beamed 208 messages, compared with 135 last year.

These figures don't include special web broadcasts, or plugs and programs aired at the local level.

Philco has established three $1,500 engineering scholarships at Lehigh University. Dr. Martin D. Whitaker, president of the University, said the scholarships will be given annually for the next four years.

The new type of pact was inked, according to Sholis, because the outlets were demonstrating their confidence in Columbia, placing it in a position to compete with NBC. NBC outlets, however, forced the web to abandon its project. "We are not beyoffd learning a lesson from those living on the other side of the tracks," Sholis said. "I propose that we act in a similarly sound and courageous manner."

Sholis cited a story which appeared some weeks ago in Variety on CBS' intention of cutting rates 25% and perhaps up to 50% in certain time periods. Price cutting was not the answer then and is not the answer then and is not the answer now, he declared. "The alarming fact is that NBC and CBS, seem determined to fight this price war to the death—of the last affiliate, If CBS initiates another round of rate cutting, the other networks will follow. before people begin to believe it's only worth 29 cents?" he asked.

Affiliates' keynoter called on CBS board chairman William S. Paley to "tell us tomorrow there will be no rate cut." He said no intelligent broadcaster would overcharge a spender, "but it would be equally stupid and equally suicidal to cut rates out of fear, panic, intimidation, desperation or a misguided desire to keep up with a rate-cutter down the street... The advertiser is as much concerned as we in keeping radio a healthy medium to help him sell his products at a profit."

Paley should announce that Columbia is a "No Deal" network, Sholis argued, "Nothing could be more salutary than an announcement by CBS that henceforth no advertiser can expect any rate contribution or anything else not published on the card and offered to all advertisers... No medium can remain vigorous in a 'fire sale sulting from a rate reduction based'

CONTRIB VIA DAILES

Bob Schmid, Mutual's ad-promotion y.p., has lined up an ambitious project whereby the web on the Presidential conventions will supply daily columns by-lined by MBS personalities, to 150 dailies. The cuffo columns will be sent out by pre-paid wire, special delivery or airmail, will cover behind-the-scenes activities and will be tailored for the individual publications by including items on their local delegates and politicos. Supervising the operations at the convention will be Frank Zuzulo, MBS press director, aided by Hal Gold, Harry Algus and Bill Diehl, who will travel from the web's flackery in N. Y.

Network brought its affiliates in on the plan, and the local outlets made arrangements with papers in their communities. Mats and photos have been provided so that the papers can promote the features, and photos of the commentator-columnists with local personalities will also be sent out from Chi. Among the gabbers taking part are Cecil Brown, Cedric Foster, Frank Edwards, H. R. Baukhage, William Hillman, Les Nichols and Fred Van Deventer.

Detroit—Jerry Crocker, formerly of WERE, Cleveland, WCUE, Akron, and WMOA, Marietta, has joined WJBK and WJBK-TV as an announcer-disk jockey.

If the board approves, the radio union's membership will be canvassed in a mail referendum. Other unions concerned, including American Guild of Wasical Artists, American Guild of Musical Artists and Actors Equity Assn. have not yet moved on the plan.

The college labor relations experts' amended plan calls for the establishment of a one-card union. One local will be established in each city with artists from all fields belonging. Most significant change in the plan is that machinery has been proposed for putting the merger into effect should all five branches accept the plan.

All branches accepting the plan would bind themselves to live up to the result of that convention. However, should only four (or fewer) branches accept the plan, the whole thing would fall through.

Repacting Larry Moore

Best Foods, which had notified CBS-TV that it was pulling out of the Garry Moore daytime show after the July 15 broadcast, has reconsidered and is now taking only a two-month hiatus.

Bankroller will return to the show Sept. 15, picking up a quarter-hour segment of the show once weekly, which is the same schedule it now has. Show at that time will be trimmed from an hour to a half-hour cross-the-board.

WLIB Sets Kid Show For Negro Market

For Negro Market

A kid show for the Negro market is being added to WLIB's (N. Y.) block of programs beamed to Negro dialers. Stanza starts Saturday (5) at 9:30-10 a.m.

It will be handled by Lorenzo Fuller, who left the role of Sportin' Life in "Porgy and Bess" in Dallas to take on the assignment. Stanza will include kidisks, interviews and remotes from the Harlem Y.

(1) That CBS immediately launch a program of sound qualitative re-search, establishing radio's real value;

(2) That the network and affiliates take the initiative to strengthen the standards and practices of good broadcasting;

(3) That CBS should abandon its efforts to set rates unilaterally for the affiliates;

for the affiliates;

(4) That a concerted effort of certain advertisers for further rate cuts should be firmly and finally rejected and that the July (51) rate cut should be rescinded, and (5) that CBS should consider the advisability and necessity of increasing daytime rates at least 20% above the level existing before the 1951 cut.

George B. Storer, head of Storer Stations, opened the meet as chairman. However, because of his sisdio" on TV and DuMont's "Cos-morbilitan Theatre." Designation of the network to carry the show will depend on which bankroller buys it. But only four (or fewer) branches accept the plan, the whole thing would fall through.

If that split eventuates, it's likely that AFRA and TVA would take steps to effect a two-way merger.

Another change made from the first draft proposal of the professors is that the board of the proposed integrated union would be cut from 200 to 100 members. Representation would be on the basis of one delegate for each 200 members, with a total membership-ingood-standing of 20,000 performers envisaged.

Dues Scale Sciup

It was also decided to drop the dues scale as proposed by the Cornell-UCLA team in favor of permitting the convention to determine the specifics. It was recommended that dues, when set up, be keyed to the individual's income, with a floor and ceiling set.

The professors drew up a ballot for the referendum, with the members of the various unions to vote on this specific plan, as is and without qualifications. It is this ballot which AFRA is voting on and which the other unions may also send out.

Technically, TVA wasn't asked to poll its membership on the plan. However, since TVA will be sending delegates, the live video union will probably get its membership to vote on the blueprint.

AFRA' and TVA memberships voted overwhelmingly last March to have a two-party blending by July 1 if a five-branch consolidation wasn't affected. While no action was taken on that wedding, the two groups would probably get fogether if the profs' plan doesn't get accepted all around.

A Happy Fourth of July IT'S "INDEPENDENT'S" DAY

When in the course of human events it becomes nev sary for one method of communication to change and adapt itself to the influence of other methods, it behooves us to ask where is Radio acina?

We hold these truths to be self evident.

Radio is losing its network strength. Network programs are going to television and so are network listeners. (If you can see Jack Benny or Tallulah, or Milton Berle, you'd rather see them than merely hear them.)

But radio is endowed with certain unalienable rights and to secure these rights we submit that It lay its foundation on these principles.

Recognize that radio has left the living room, more than half of all U. S. radio listening (including non-TV homes) is done outside the living room, most of it in the kitchen. In TY homes 77% of radio listening takes place on secondary sets, and even in radio-only homes 51% of radio listening is done outside the living room. (Source: American Research Bureau Survey jointly sponsored by CBS and NRC1.

Recognize that in leaving the living room radio is becoming a companion, a sort of audible wrist watch (CBS says that there are 41 million secondary sets in homes, 23 million in cars, but only 36 million living room sets, and that 100,000 clock radios are sold every month).

Which means that people want to know the time, and want radio to give it to them.

WCCC, an independent, in Central Connecticut (where the ORIGINAL DOCUMENT that formed the basis of the Declaration of Independence was first written and has long since been forgotten) gives them the time, news, and weather every fifteen minutes all day, every day. This feature which we call TNT (time, news, temperature) is building station loyalty, instead of program loyalty. We feel program loyalty is staying right in the living room with that monster. TNT also helped WCCC win last April's Yariety plaque award for Small Station Showmanship.

But not only TNT is building WCCC. Good old fashioned Yankee stubbornness is building it too. We made up our minds that we "love that format". We keep it the same, so as not to confuse the growing number of persons who tell us they turn on WCCC in the morning, and leave it on, because "you can always get music."

Again, since radio is leaving the living room it is becoming "companionate"—an accompanying element to other things....the kitchen, the car, the bedroom, the bar.

What do you tune for when you are doing other things? A background. What makes the best background? MUSIC.

WCCC's music is chosen by a musical director; who is a musician, who can program music in a way mat keeps vou tuned all day.

So Mr. Advertiser, if you want to know what happened to radio, just look outside the living room, and—justlisten to the music!

It's true in Hartford, and in many other markets, large and small. This Fourth of July finds independents stronger than ever, with more, new methods of increasing our audience still further.

And for the support of this Declaration Mr. Advertiser, if you want to reach the audience that is still with radio, use the little music and news firecracker in your city. You'll find that today and every day is independents day.

The industry's position was also supported by Harold E. Fellows, prexy of NARTE, who told the committee that some of the protests regarding TV programs results from pressure campaigns. Some petitions reaching Congress, he said, follow a stereotyped form "and tend to rise and fall in volume as the campaign pressure is "and tend to rise and tail in vol-ume as the campaign pressure is turned on and off from national headquarters."

Regarding the issue of offensive shows, Fellows pointed to the recent Supreme Court decision in the "Miracle" film case. The definition of "offensive," he declared, "may and usually does vary from community to community depending on a wide variety of factors."

Fellows said he was in agreement that there are limits of good taste in programming but he emphasized that station owners are keenly aware "that every receiving set is equipped with the convenient means of turning their program offerings in or out" and are making a sincere effort to meet the problem through self-regulation.

At Fort Worth, a crew of technicians installed a 6 x 8 foot reflector screen approximately 275 feet above the ground on the outlet's 502-foot antenna. The screen will pick up the signal from the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s, Haskell Exchange Bidg., in Dallas, and bounce it to an eight-foot parabolic antenna some 12 feet above the ground located just to the west side of the building. It will channel the signal into WBAP-TV transmitting equipment.

As is the case in several other installations, this is a temporary arrangement. At WBAP-TV, the permanent microwave tower will be located southeast of the building on WBAP-TV property.

Philadelphia, July 1. Offers of $100,000 for the television and radio rights to the Kid Gavilan-Gil Turner welterweight championship bout have been nixed by promoter Herman Taylor, who says he wants to see what the match will draw at the gate on its merits, when the scrappers meet at the Municipal Stadium here. tion with the Philadelphia Inquirer Charities, Inc. Taylor also announced he had thumbsed-down a bid to channel the fight into 70 theatres, via TV. "There will be no home or theatre television, nor any radio broadcast of the fight; said the Philly promoter, announcing his decision was final.

Taylor told interviewers he "was not against progress," but he believed his: fight ("the greatest of the year") will draw more money without the revenue from outside sources. Taylor expects a crowd of more than 40,000 at the Stadium, due to the enormous popularity here of challenger Gil Turner, a local boy. Promoter Taylor wouldn't say how much his blanket refusal of air coverage was due to the ingenious locals, who managed to bring in the telecast of the Walcott-Charles bout in the N. Y. channels when that match was blacked out here early last month.

ASCAP WRITERS' NEW PAYOFF

Kapp Solid at Victor Despite Exit Rumors; 'To Give 'Em What They Want'

Dave Kapp, ex-Decca Recordsveepee and now recording chief for RCA Victor, has a firm contract for two years and the erroneous rumors about him exiting the company have become something of a Tin Pan Alley mystery on both coasts, since the false reports have originated from both the Lindy's and Brown Derby belts. As a matter of record, RCA Victor's chief of artists & repertoire, George Marek, and RCA veepee Manle Sacks, who brought Kapp into the organization, point to his currently releasing and soon-due output as evidence to the contrary.

It is axiomatic in the record business, as with the picture business, for example, that if it's a best seller the distribution organization (along with everybody else) takes bow for merchandising. If it's a flop, it's the "fault" of the producer. In the record business, of course, it reverts to the recording chief. g chief. The RCA Victor pop product, in mapping, waiting singers and the like.

Realistically, of late, Sacks has proffered the idea that "if that's what the public wants, let's give 'em mule cries and holy-roller stuff," but at the same time the entire RCA org adheres to the more orthodox style of diskery, although it also has been producing some of the freak forms of poprecordings which has been so much the vogue of late.

Kapp's experimentation with the Perry Como-Eddie Eisher duet on "Maybe" and "Watermeion Weather," while only a slight departure from the oldline, conventional etchings, has been paying off with over 300,000 disks sold in the last five weeks. A better tipoff on the prevailing wind was, however, Kapp's inking of Lily Ann Carol, ex-Louis Prima vocalist, who is definitely in the "noisy" (Continued on page 46)

VAUGHAN, COLE, KENTON SET FOR FALL PACKAGE

Prepping for a Sept. 19 kickoff, the fall edition of "The Biggest Show of 1952" already has lined up Sarah Vaughan, Nat (King) Cole and Stan Kenton as topliners. Four supporting acts are yet to be set. Package, which was produced by Tim Gale and Cress Courtney, skedded for a 10-week tour with 60% of the dates already set. Unit is being booked on a co-op basis between the Gale Agency and General Artists Corp. "Biggest Show" package idea was launched in 1951 with Duke Ellington, Cole and Miss Yughan. The spring '52 edition featured Frankie Laine, Patti Page and the Billy May orch. The two units racked up more than $2,000,000. The current edition will play seven evenings and four matinees a week.

Field Narrowed In Quest For U.S. Army Song

Execs of the major disk companies and a music biz committee, which have been searching for an "official" U.S. Army song, have currently narrowed down the field to five or six entries which will be "tested in the field." Although Guy Lombardo and his band vocalist, Kenny Gardner, volunteered to cut the demonstration disks, the industry committee feels it would be psychologically better if either Vic Damone or Eddie Fisher, both now serving in the Army, made the demos.

Vie Damone or Eddie Fisher, both now serving in the Army, made the demos.

Search for any Army song is being made at the behest of Frank Pace, Jr., Under-Secretary of the Army, who contacted the top six disk companies along with Otto A. Harbach, American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers prexy; Carl Haverlin, Broadcast Music, Inc., prex, and Irving Caesar, writer and publisher: Pace contended that although other wings of the armed services developed songs into official service themes, the U. S. Army has not come up with one in its 177 years of existence.

Pace pointed to "The Marine Hymn" for the Marines (also "The Caissons Go Rolling Along"); "Anchors Aweigh" for the Navy and the "Air Force Song" for the Air Force. Pace, incidentally, did not mention "Sound Off" which was used widely as an Army marching song in World War II in the category of an "official" song.

Present plans call for circulating the five or six songs under consideration among the troops and if the latter "take" to one number, it will be designated as "official."

Victor to Push Catalog in Britain

In line with RCA Victor's new plans to release the British Grampophone Co.'s His Master's Voice disks in the U. S. on a regular distribution basis, Victor has arranged for heavier distribution of its catalog in Britain. The Gramphone Co. is a part of the Electrical & Musical Industries (EMI) combine with which Victor has a reciprocal deal.

EMI, meantime, is planning to enter the slow speed field for the first time this fall. Victor releases will be marketed on the conventional 78 rpm sheliacs together with the 45 rpm and 33 rpm disks. British Decca was the first English label to switch to the long play platters which have been gaining acceptance rapidly despite the relatively high cost of British LP players.

'Out-of-Town' Mob Bombs Juke Firm In Midwest War

Minneapolis, July I.

Unable to find any clues to the perpetrators, local police advanced the theory that "out-of-town rack-eteers" were responsible for a bomb being set off in the entryway of the Lieberman Music Co., local distributors of jukeboxes and other coin-operated machines.

Detective Inspector Charles Wetherille told newspapers that "conflicts in distributing the coin-operated machines in other cities, perhaps Chicago, may be the cause." He said there is no known friction among local distributors.

The bomb was left in the entryway about midnight by two men who drove away in an automobile, according to witnesses. It blew out the glass front of the pinball and jukebox firm, shattered five large plate glass windows and left a hole in the sidewalk about three feet across and several feet deep. Police said it apparently was dynamite. Pieces of the door frame were blown across the street and pinball machines were damaged or destroyed, but nobody was hurt. Officials of the firm could advance no reason for the bombing. However, it was the second time within a month that a violent attack on the firm had been reported. On the other occasion .45 revolver slugs were shot through all of the windows.

The ban on Rodzinski, who under contract to Remington Records, simply extended the AFM prohibition applied to several other batonists in the last year, including Artie Shaw, Tutti Camarata, Andre Kostelanetz and H. Arthur Brown, conductor of the Tulsa Philhannonic. Motive behind the ban is the fact that European musicians swork at scales far below the U. S. rates and that AFM members have been losing jobs as a result of the competition with lower-paid musicians.

In the past, the AFM put up no objections to U. S. maestros who cut masters abroad. It was part of the union's international cultural exchange program and played an insignificant part in the total American market. The advent of long play records, however, saw a mass influx of European recordings in the U. Col Package Plan, Victor Ad Drive, RIAA Project to Spark Disk Biz

The move to buck the anticipated summer slowdown, major diskers have initiated heavy promotional campaigns and giveaway deals to maintain sales at a steady level. Special merchandising schemes have been utilized successfully for the past couple of years and retailers have been using the hot weather period to pick up bargains on standard merchandise.

Columbia Records has come up with a special merchandise packaging program for its dealers. Under its new plan, retailers will be able to buy selected groups of single platters in both the longhair and pop-hillbilly fields of a "two-for-three" basis. The packages have been preselected by Columbia, and will comprise standard selections. Other diskeries, including Mercury and M-G-M Records, are also using similar deals for sales bait.

Music Execs Again Look to Latin Music To Bail Them Out of Business Slump

It's F&R Music

In order not to cause confusion with the Big.Three, combine (Robbins, Feist & Miller), Jack Robbins, and Leonard Feist will call their new partnership venture, F&R Music. The full names of the partners, however, will be printed on the sheet music. Leonard Feist is the son of the Leo Feist, founder of the Big Three firm which bears his name.

tempting to veer away from disking pacts so that they can cut their own etchings and distribute the platters via an indie label. These bandleaders claim that orchs are still the stepchildren of the disk companies and it's to their advantage to push for themselves.

One bandleader pointed out that an orch pactee still has to shell out his own loot to hypo a platter. Top example of a bandleader digging into his own pocket for disk exploitation-promotion is Ray Anthony's recent drive on "At Last." Anthony kicked in with almost $10,000. The bandleaders feel that if it costs that much coin to plug a platter etched on a major label, they're better off in business for themselves.

Spearheading the move to 'indie orch waxings is Woody Herman. Herman, whose pact with M-G-M Records recently expired, has been holding out on renewing with M-G-M or ankling to another diskery. Meantime, he's been cutting some sides on his own and if the initial run-off, platters make any noise in the market, he'll distribute them on his own label. Orch men on the loose or between pacts are eyeing the outcome of the Herman try. His first platter 'is expected to be out within the next couple of weeks.

to be out within the next couple of weeks.

Disk company execs, however, claim that the drive to indle waxing will be limited to name leaders only. Orchs that've yet to hit the bigtime are dependent on diskers backing and distribution. Only flaw here is that the majors are signing few of the young name leaders. In some cases the newcomers have shelled out their own loot to wax masters on a gamble that the masters and the orch will be picked up by a record company. One such gamble that paid off recently was Tony Aquaviva's who shelled out a hefty sum to wax a couple of masters. Last week M.G.M. Records bought the Aquaviva sides and inked him to a long-term pact. Diskery is also preping a big drive on the initial sides which'll be released next month.

Schwann Infringement

Schwann Intringement

Suit Vs. Goody Settled

W. Schwann, publisher of a long playing record catalog, wrapped up his copyright infringement suit against Sam Goody, N. Y. record retailer, last week in N. Y. Federal Court when Goody agreed to settle the action by agreeing to pay damages and counsel fees. Action, stemming from Goody's distribution of a disk catalog similar to that of Schwann's, was due to come up for trial in October.

Federal Judge Vincent L. Liebell also granted a permanent injunction against Goody, barring the defendant from advertising or distributing his catalog. Although Goody denied pirating Schwann's catalog, the N. Y. retailer discontinued selling his catalog when the suit was initially filed late last year.

execs are looking to Latin-American styled tunes to carry the bix through the summer. In the past through the summer. In the past the opbeat in Latino numbers has developed when the U. S. pop output was at a low ebb and they've managed to instill life into the music industry until the big hit came along. Music men cite the resurgence of south-of-the-border items during the Broadcast Music, inc. - American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers war more than a decade ago as a top example of Latino numbers keeping the music industry moging. It was then that "Frenes!" and "Besame Mucho" broke out.

During the past few months the chile numbers again have been dominating the market. Such: Latino - flavored tunes as "Kiss of Fire," "Delicado," "MI Capital," "Polnciana" and "More Than Love" have been getting a big push on both pub and disker levels. Many of the Latino standardive this summer. E. B. Marks Music, for instance, set new disks on the fave "Peanut Vendor" and are prepping a big campaign. Tune was cut by Dean Martin for Capitol Records and Ralph Marterie's orch on the Mercury label.

Pubs are also getting plenty of play on their Latino catalog in the European market. The chile rhythms are steady clicks in England and the Continent and have been riding high for the past 10 years. In France, for example, "Voyage a Cuba" (French tag for Irving Fields' Miami Beach Rhumba) has been covered by 27 different waxings.

In the drive to get more Latino songs on the U. S. market, pubs are digging into Brazil for Baiaostyled tunes. It's a new Brazilian rhythm with a syncopated quality that fits easily into current pop tastes. Although "Blue Tango" is the work of American composer, Leroy Anderson, it, too, follows the Latino pattern, and has been a solid click for the past four months. The Decca etching of "Blue Tango" recently passed the 1,000,000 mark.

Technicality Results In Dismissal of Mellow 'Try' Infringement Suit

Try' Infringement Suit

Through a technicality, the suit of Mellow Mubic against Central Songs and Capitol Records alleging that the tune, "Try," infringed on "Cry," was dismissed in N. Y. Federal Court last week. Action was dismissed on the ground that Mellow Music, operated by Perry Alexander, failed to annex copies of the sheet music of both songs to the complaint.

With no recent case invloving this point having occurred recently, music industry lawyers were particularly interested to leasn whether the rule—that sheet music in infringement cases must be attached to the complaint—still prevailed in Federal-Court. Federal Judge Thomas F. Murphy gave no opinion in the case but gave a memorandum ruling: that the motion by Capitol to dismiss the complaint for failure to attach the sheet music was granted. Alexander can bring the suit again by amending the complaint by attaching copies of both songs.

"Try" was recorded by Stan Freberg as a gag disk for Capitol after Johnnie Ray's click on Columbia Records with "Cry."

domestic recordings as well.

Petrillo's next move is expected to be in the direction of trying to halt the virtually free importation of foreign recordings. Since these are handled mostly by indie labels who do little or no recordings in the U. S., the AFM will have to make a pitch for Congressional, legislation to block such imports, except under special circumstances.

What the AFM wants to eliminate is the practice of recording expensive symphonies and complete operas through airchecks of European broadcasts. It's known that some platters have been able to buy complete longhair works, running up to two and three hours in length, for as little as $200. All that's involved is paying a radio producer of, longhair program a sum of money for the rights to the broadcast sum of mone the broadcast.

In the Rodzinski instance, the union slapped the ban on his re-cording in Europe last February but the maestro went ahead with but the maestro went ahead with his conducting in a Vienna longhair group despite the prohibition. If the AFM lifts Rodzinski's card and prevents him from conducting the Seattle Symphony next March, it's expected that a court fight will ensue.

Remington Records, meantime, is claiming that the AFM is discriminating against them since it has permitted conductors associated with other labels to wax abroad. Remington pointed out that, like the major labels, it also does extensive recording in this country and pays its 5% to the Music Performance Trust Fund.

Philadelphia, July 1.

Harl McDonald, manager of the Philadelphia Orchestra, has lined up solidly behind Musicians Union president James C. The Philadelphia manager also revealed he was responsible for instigating this latest Petrillo move.

His concern stemmed from a visit to a music shop in which he saw works that the Philadelphia Orch had recorded being offered on foreign waxings that were "dirt cheap."

Honolulu, June 24.

Andy Cummings, one of Hawaii's veteran maestros, has been reinstated by the musician's union. He's resumed as leader of Royal Hawaiian Hotel band.

Cummings was a victim of a strike called by the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union against Matson's three beach hotels. Cummings was leading Reyal Hawaiian Hotel orchestra—until he declined to cross a cullinary workers' picket line. American Federation of Musicians prexy James C. Petrillo personally ordered the suspension and the reinstatement came after three months.

Krupa's Nip Kick

Along with etching several U. S. standards during his tour here last month, Gene Krupa and his trio cut two originals, "Stompin' On the Ginza" and "The Badgers' Party Under the Moon," plus a treatment a two traditional Japanese tunes, "Moon Over Ruined Castle" and "Tokyo Express." Krupa waxed the sides for the Victor Recording Co. of Japan in its Tokyo studies. Sides will be released both in Japan and in the U. S.

Billy May Sees Wax as Factor In Band Buildups

Although the recording field remains dominated by vocalists. there's still plenty of opportunity for an orch to break through on disks-according to Billy May, Capitol Records orch pactee. The re-cordings, May said, was definitely part of the combination of factors that brought about his current that brought about his current prominence in the danceband pic-ture.

May, who headed out on a three-month one-nighter and location trek last week, said that the impact made by his initial Cap waxings about a year ago convinced him that there's still a big dancing market around the country. He pointed out that there are more bands working this summer than in the past five or six years and that the majority of the orchs have wax clicks to their credit. "I don't expect the band hiz to come back wax elleks to their credit. "I don't expect the band biz to come back with the force it had in the 1930s," he added, "but it's healthier this year than it has been in a long time and it's mostly due to the concentrated effort made by the diskeries to build orch properties."

diskeries to build orch properties."

Most of the record companies are now working tie-ins with the band agencies to promote the band's one-niter and location engagements via a hefty plugging attack on the disk jockey, distributor and record retailer level. May believes that his b.o. power has developed strongly through this plugging technique and that a bandleader has to get around to the jockeys and distributors to spark the drive. Another strong promotional out-Another strong promotional out-let, May added, is TV. "I don't be-lieve that a band should take a permanent slot on TV." he said, "but an occasional one-shot has solid promotional values."

Because disks are so important in stimulating interest in a traveling orch, May added the bandleaders should avoid making gimmicked or echo-chamber effect etchings. "It may make an exciting record," he said, "but the orch will be heading for lots of trouble on the road when the public asks for a rendition like the one on the record."

May also pointed to growing crop of new young sidemen as an important factor in revitalizing the band picture. "There are plenty of kids around the country," he added, "who have strong potential to develop into top sidemen." Most of them are off the exhibitionist, undisciplined kick and willing to apprentice and learn. "I've deen a lot of them work," he added, "and it wouldn't surprise me if the majority of them will be out with majority of them will be out with bands of their own in a few years.

nies are veering to the old show biz makim that two names are bet ter than one. In an attempt to pull the disk business out of its spiral, the diskers are steadily coupling their top names for stronger sales impact.

Recent success of the RCA Victor tandem, Ferry Como and Eddie Fisher, on "Maybe" and "Watermelon Weather" is spearheading a further push on the two-name policy. Columbia plans to get Mariene Dietrich, a recent pactee off to a fast start by teaming her with Rosemary Clooney for her Col disk preem. Along the same lines Decca paired Bing Crosby with Peggy Lee shortly after Miss Lee ankled Capitol for a Decca pact. The dual name platters give the diskers plenty of opportunity for promotion and there's plenty of demand from the companies' distribs for the two-name stress. Some of the disk matings being readied for additional sessions are Frankle Laine-Doris Day; Laine-Jo Stafford; Guy Mitchell-Doris Day (Columbia); Tony Martin-Dinah Shore (Victor); Bing Crosby-Jane Wyman; Crosby-Janerews Sisters; Dick Haymes-Andrews Sisters (Decca); and Alan Dale-Connie Haines for Coral.

Clear Sailing On SPA-MPPA Pact

Agreement last week between the Songwriters Protective Assn. and the Music Publishers Protective Assn. on a formula to cover disputed royalty payments is now expected to pave a clear way for SPA's audit of the publishers' books. Although initiated last year, the SPA checkup was partially stymied by squawks from several pubs which led to the SPA-MPPA negotiations.

Inside Orchestras—Music

Although a flock of Nat (King) Cole's Capitol records currently on release gives co-billing to the Billy May orch, orch leader doesn't come in for any share of the royalty take. Platters were cut almost a year ago before May, who then did the orch backings for the Cap artists, broke out as an important band entity. Diskery, however, is cashing in on his recent upsurge, by giving him the co-billing. Most recent Cole-May release is "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" backed by "Funny." Pic. Vic Damone, who recently returned from Germany to wax some recruiting disks for the Army, is moving out fast on the first Mercury Records platter etched since his return. Damone cut "Take My Heart" and "Rosanne" for the diskery and the platter topped 45,000 sales in its first three days on the market.

Opening of the Warner Bros. "Where's Charley?" pic at the Music Hall, N. Y., last week has cued Decca's revival of a tune from the original legit score, "Once In Love With Amy." Ray Bolger, star of both of the legit and pic versions of "Where's Charley?," waxed the tune. At the same time, E. H. Morris, publisher of the legit score, is planning another drive on the "Where's Charley?" tunes, including "My Darling, My Darling," the original plug ballad.

Decca is also reissuing an etching of "Wait "Til the Sun Shines, Nellie." by Bing Crosby and Mary Martin in conjunction with the 20th-fox pic at the same time. Number was sliced by Crosby-Martin in 1942.

Major Diskers Covering Femme Air Force Tune

Record companies are going all out on "The Girls Are Marching," tune which is currently being used in the drive to recruit women into the U. S. Air Force, Song was etched initially for the Air Force by Pfc. Vic Damone who was brought back from Germany a couple of weeks ago for the session.

Since then Damone has cut it for Mercury and the rival diskers have hopped on with covering platters. Already lined up for release on the song are The Mariers for Columbia; Hugo Winterhalter for RCA Victor; and LeRoy Holmes for the M-G-M label; Tune was penned by Jule Styne, Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

"Goodnight Irene," which people back in the U. S. buried 19 months ago after four months of juke box and radio spins, is still a big hit in Japan record sales. Doris Day, meantime, holds the top slot in waxed vocal sales, followed closely by Bing Crosby and Nat ("King") Cole.

Hits last longer here than in the U. S. "Chattanooga Shoeshine Boy," now virtually forgotten by most Americans, is still holding its own in the top brackets of the hit parade. "If," a ballad which came out about a year ago, also is maintaining steady sales pace here.

N.Y. State Sets Third Hearing on 'Aerial' Law

Albany, July 1. The State Board of Standards and Appeals, which held its second hearing here last week on a pro-hearing here, last week on a proposed code to supplement the new Ten Eyck Law requiring safety devices for aerialists working more than 20 feet, will conduct a third hearing July 16. The statute becomes effective today (Thes.).

Industrial Commissioner Edward Corsi can immediately proceed with its enforcement, but there is doubt he will do so. The Labor Dept., according to a statement made at the first hearing, lacks the trained personnel to move at once in this field. There is also sure to be a strong movement by outdoor representatives to have the law repealed at the 1953 session of the Legislature.

WILDWOOD, N. J., BANS 'PEEP SHOW' AS TENTER

Frank Sennes' attempt at being a tent impresario in Wildwood, N. J., faces some serious obstacles which may ultimately force him to abandon the project. Sennes, a Cleveland booker, wants to set up "Peep Show" in a tent, but the city has refused to grant him a license because it might create a "carnival atmosphere." Feeling is that opposition of nitery owners caused the ban on the show.

Deadline for receipt of ballots will be about 30 days thereafter. Honest Ballot Assn. will again supervise the elections.

See Custom-Built Bills as New Lure For Niteries in Headliner Scarcity with the scarcity of headliners, cafemen must bank on individualized, custom-built operations, according to several showmen. Day of buying acts on a hit-or-miss basis with a talk-over rehearsal is over, say bonifaces and talent agency men. Since the star attractions are not easily obtainable for nightclubs, operators feel that every act should be built up in importance so that featured turns can get the benefits of better production trappings.

Talent agency men declare that unless these steps are taken immediately by owners all over the country, the nitery business may be lost by default.

New Haven, July 1.

TO AID SMALLIES

Arenas and auditoriums throughout the country are going through an extremely tough period. A series of crises in many showspots has come about for several reasons, including the severe competition of television, lack of suitable attractions and a deepening depression in many fields of sports.

The large arenas for a time had in many fields of sports.

The large arenas for a time became prosperous early in the television days. Video made roller derbies, wrestling and minor prizefights popular. These activities provided several nights a week at high rentals. However, these sports have declined in popularity, and hockey hasn't been paying off as it should. Basketball scandals of the past two years have also cut into the gate of that sport, with the result that arena ops had to turn to show business events increasingly. However, the major shows can only hit a limited number of cities with the result that many auditoriums in smaller towns hit a paucity of rentals.

This state of affairs has been a costly matter to taxpayers in many (Continued on page 63)

Executive Board of the American Gulld of Variety Artists this week voted to go along with the current one-card blueprint with certain reservations. Vaude union is opposed to the scheme on several counts in the overall merger plan. One major objection by AGVA would be the establishment of locals, which means that organizations in each city could act autonomously. AGVA fayors the branch system whereby all policy matters are controlled by the parent organization. However, AGVA will forego its objections until the merger is discussed in convention.

To further the amalgamation, AGVA at the July 17 meet of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent org of the performer unions, will ask that meetings explaining the merger to the memberships of all 4A branchea, be held in various cities. This series of round-robin confabs were passed upon several months ago, but were never carried out. AGVA will ask that these circuit spiel sessions start as soon as possible.

AGVA prexy Georgie Price appointed himself, Manny Tyler, Dewy Barto, and one of the union counsel to comprise the committee to talk at these meets. Spokesmen for the other 4A branches are still to be appointed.

Spivy, who left her Spivy's Roof in N. Y., has gone underground here in her downstairs nitery off the Champs Elysees on Rue Quentin-Nauchart. Word-of-mouth and relaxed atmosphere have fast made this the after-hours mecca for the American show biz crowd here. Drinks are reasonable and snacks of hamburgers and chile con carne are in evidence. Spivy gladhands with verve and table-filts to give all and sundry a warm welcome. Tourists and regular French clientele are in abundance.

Peter Howard and Ed Stein have a limitless repertoire on the double planos that makes for good listening, Michael Rayhill, young U. S. warbler, is a regular here now after stinting at the Drap d'Or. He has fine presence, looks and a romantico voice in the musicomedy vein. Lad creates a good impression with "Bewitched." "There's Nothing Like A Dame" and "Too Marvelous."

Spivy floats into the limelight to give out with her suggestive lyrics. Her charming, top presentation and gurgling good humor sock over the material for a begoff. She chant's the "Madame's Lament," about a gal who never got upstairs. "The Bearded Lady and the Surrealist" is a solid yockery about the very sad love affair of this weird duo. She pounds out "Satire on Harpers" and "Why Don't You" to general hiliarity. Room is well decorated and lit and was SRO when caught. On walls are a group of paintings done by illustrator Woop depicting the ancestors of Spivy, ranging from a harridan royal madame to a stern Grenadier. Spotlighting them at intervals is good for laughs. Spot is open all night every night.

Assisted by Bill Bradley and George Tomal, they come out equipped with jerseys and football helmets and run the gamut of the various sports as depicted by the newsreels. Mata & Hari return for their almost classic "Carnegie Hall" routine alternately imitating the various members of the orch, the conductor and audience. Stint gets them off with hefty applause. A special nod is rated by Lothar Perl, who not only conducts the band during their number but wrote most of the music.

Rudy Cardenas is one of the most adept jugglers and works at a breathless pace. There's no letup or buildup with the lad rushing into one trick after another. While he works with the ordinary sticks, wands and balls, his dextertly is way above the average. He does running flips to pick up ball with a mouth stick and exhibits some amazing body control to flip the spheres on his anatomy without using his hands. His human pool table with string pockets around his body is a smash.

Flamingo frolics for three frames with the Olsen & Johnson madantics, for solld insurance of capacity biz. Tops in this brand of low comedy, O. & J. string their bits, sketches, solo spots and slapstickery into a 75-minute session. Yocks are peppered all the way, and overall reaction is sock.

Forepart of the bake is intro of quickie routines, slam-bang nonsense and plenty of noise. J. C. Flamingo Starlets, actually excess dressing this show because of Norma Miller group, boogie low-down "Sixty Minute Man," with warbling by Stewart Rose. long bar togged as gorilla. Screams from distaffers accompany this cutie.

Pitchmen fill their alloted time capably with screwball kazzoing. Martha, King takes far too long in her song spot, hitting some off-key notes the while. June & Chic Johnson reprise their slot machine, and gambling dialog from last appearance here. Tag is different, having Chic open suit of armor alongside of stage to extract bottle of coke.

Marty May builds into good laughs with his easygoing monology, mimicry of radio singers, and fidding. Norma Miller zooms on with her gang to wow with a West Indies killer-diller terp fling. Impossibly riotous "Flower Song," deadpanned by Marty May and Chic Johnson, is returned this time around for a peak score.

Nina Varela booms out in attempted song while Chic snatches off bits of her skirt, with payoff windowshade sight gag. Cle Olsen takes over to intro Flamingo. Miles works with his insinuating whispers, wending through his masterful pattern of funny stories and situations. His standby is the track tout arrowing into dissertation on comic strips and taxes, and he hits peaks with warble of "Can't Give You Anything But Love." Second set is the Milestone racebettor and prayer, sequeled by the hilarious Yiddishisms in his classic Autry-sketch. Big yocks dot his turn all the way, with neat ovation capping the works.

Either Miss Green was off form at show caught, or audience gave only moderate enthusiasm to her parodies and impressions to make the deuce spot in the show lack sparkle.

The Green standard opener, "Lady Is a Tramp," moves into her Berle ribbing which encases Richman, Garbo, Cantor and Sophie Tucker. El Rancho, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, June 25.

Hoagy Carmichael, Condos & Brundow, Bill Skipper Dancers (4), El Rancho Gris (5), Bob Morgan, Ted Fio Rito Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Name value of Hoagy Carmichael is potent enough to insure packed rooms for duration of this shebang. Condos & Brandow contribute a fair share in making the whole deal highly diverting.

Carmichael has cleffed enough times to keep him going for a full hour or more. During his 25-minute stint here, he trots out the top faves for surefire reaction. Manner of presentation, however, seems contrived. Wants to impress with his down-to-earth, cornpone on the Wabash gab, but only succeeds in slowing down the show. Drawls in one mike and lazily ankles back to Steinway for his exhibitions. Should remain at the keyboard for everything. Garbincludes a shapeless linen fedora, a prop which seems to get in his way at times when decision to leave it on or take it off consumes effort.

Once started on the keyboard, and backed by small combo for orch plus his own guitarist, Bob Morgan, he makes up for lost time. Big salvos greet every tune, "Buttermilk Sky," "Huggin' and Chalkini," "Rockin' Chair," "Georgia On My Mind," "Little Old Lady," "Lazybones," "Cool Cool Cool of the Evening," "Wouldn't You Like To Be a Whale?," "Hong Kong Blues," and whopping mitrs for "Stardust" at windup.

Condos & Brandow display their usual versatility for top reaction. Casual gab style, contrasted by speedy tapterps, gets duo underway after "Dance Your Cares Away" warble. Condos filicks the parquet with his neat soft-shoe turn, Brandow's lightning miniature stair legmania.

Bill Skipper's foursome augments house line in some interesting modern choreo. Two males, two femmes leap into "Manhattan' theme for starter and bring down curtain with vivid and frantic "Trinidad" stomps. Group should work on ideas in slower tempos within routines to provide more contrast. Otherwise, you and abilities carry them over nicely. Will.

Capitalizing upon success of Xavier Cugat at this same nitery in March, bonifaces booked his exwife Lorraine Allen three months later. Name attracts the curious but at show caught, Miss Allen merely wandered on and off in role of femcee. She didn't even front her orch, that chore being capably handled by Van Alexander. Revisions are currently underway, wherein she will receive Latin fanfare buildup and chirp more so as to establish her presence in the layout. Thus given a reason to be around, comply femme will use her nicely modulated voice and sal, to guide table-sitters through the zippy 60 min. stanza.

Continentals' click here is due to hard work and neat array of times. Four lads clip off numbers at great rate, highlighting "Boutonniere," western medley with Jay Moffet's hopster "Old Cowhand," "Flight of the Bumblebee," calling for Bob Garsen's expert whistling. Boniface Joe Faber must've figured here that if you don't give them too much in the first show they'll stick around for the second and the bar trade will get more mileage out of the tray jugglers. Whether it works out like that is too early to tell for this layout is anchored for six weeks.

Despite the brevity of the acts, it's a well-packed and rounded show, with a diversity of entertainment that should satisfy all moods and tastes. Headlining is Irene Ryan, who has been around show biz a good many years and has a knack for making her mimicry pay off. From an opening note of simulated sadness she segues into rollicking song and buffoonery. She came off to a good round of pawpounding and took three, encores at show caught. Her impressions of young singers is her sock-intrade and she balances these with a run-through of oldies.

Curry, Byrd & Leroy have services of a terrif plant in house to win top favor. Bumbling drunk pulls plenty yocks offstage and sund tastes. Headlining is Irene kyan who has been around show come in one as he aids Curry in tossing Miss Byrd all over the place.

Leonards are spotted within the Jean Devlyn line, grabbing orbs with their adaglo flings in opening "Jungle" spell. Dolores Frazzini doubles from terping in line tos pranoing effectively. New Acts

DOROTHY SARNOFF Souge 15 Mins. Capitol, Washington

This is Dorothy Sarnoff's initial forzy into vaude since her concert and Broadway click (she's played top cafes for about five years). She top cares for about nee years. She is a top-drawer performer with a voice and style suitable for any stage—a class entertainer with plenty appeal for the masses.

Chantoosey wisely avoids the errors of most concert singers and sticks to the pop tunes best suited for this type audience. She makes a handsome entrance well-matched by a' full set of pipes with widerange and an appealing quality of warmth. Her experience in such shows as "Rosalinda" and the more recent "King and F" shows up in her flair for the dramatic and in her ability to bring meaning to lyrics. Wins the audience immediately and holds them throughout, a feat unusual for femme singers in this house.

Sticks to showtunes except for one delightful departure into folk songs via the Scotch, "Laddie." Though not the standout of the act, latter clicks with payees. Best are "Kiss of Fire," which has never been handled more beautifully on the local scene, and her "King and I" show-stopper, "Something Wonderful." Phrasing and feeling are particularly fine in both numbers. Tees off with "So In Love" and winds up with "Something Wonderful."

Songstress adds life to perform-

Songstress adds life to performance by stepping away from mike now and then and adding a few steps and twirls to the orch accompaniment. Actually, with the volume of her pipes, she could well try one number sans mike.

This is no mere song stylist nor current disk vogue. Miss Sarnof is a live, vibrant performer with an innate dignity and a natural style of her own. Capitol stubholders give her unusually hefty reception.

A blend of bright talents make this act a potent bet for the bigtime. Dolores Bouche and Johnny Perri, a former "Our Gang" young-ster, did the remembered "Psychopathic Me and Neurotic You? in "Lend an Ear," and Loren Welch sang in "On the Town" and Menot-ti's "The Medium" and "The Tele-phone"

Youthful act is very smart, immaculately clean, often funny, at all times entertaining. Good-looking performers complement each other neatly. They dance, sing, act, combine on broad comedy and incisive satire alike in expertly staged revue without ho-hum lulls too often found in latter type of production.

From N.Y. Garden Mgt.

The Championship Rodeo at Madison Square Garden, N. Y., this fall will be out an unanticipated $25,200 before the gates open as a result of a "strike" by the cowboys on the purses for each event.

About a month ago, the Rodeo Cowboys Assn., headquartered in Tulsa, Okla, sent word to the Garden hand generated the thing of the management that the $75,600 boodle scheduled was inadequate. Garden weepee Ned Irish and long time rodeo manager Frank Moore hustled out to the oil capital to confer with RCA prexy Bill Linderman, who's also a top contestant.

The hassle was resolved last week when the Garden agreed to add $25,200 to the 1952 purse, making a total of $100,800. The added figure is a compromise, since the cowboy union had held out for fixed $29,200 extra and the Garden had offered $16,800. This gal is a sensation.

Pert'and impudent, but with a ladylike class that proves she's only warm-heartedly kidding, she immediately establishes, from her run-on entrance, why she has been such a meteoric success in recent months. With no desire for freak stylistics, she just stands up and sings, this time without her own piano-accomp. Her gowns are outstanding and she takes a girlish pride in exhibiting them.

In saucer-eyed style, Miss Mackenzie bounces, on for her "I'm in Love with Life," complete in gorgeous golden gown, segues for tempo change into a slow "I'm Yours," then into the lliting "La Flacre", which originally identified her hoopla singing style. She pays neatly-spoken tribute to the courage of Jane Froman in a medley of that star's hits, including "With a Song in My Heart" and "I'll Walk Alone," does a hot rhythm of "Watermelon Weather" and "Silver and Gold" and begs off to her trademarked "Johnny."

In all of these, she retains her and production gloss to furnish first-rank variety values.

Topliner Billy Daniels shows his class by closing this show on a climactic peak after following one of the better ice presentations and comedian Pat Henning. Working with his planist and arranger, Bepny Payne, Daniels socks across a songalog with an impact that few modern-day vocalists can equal.

Daniels sells every second and it makes no difference whether it's a ballad, a rhythm number or an item like "My Yiddishe Mama." He delivers eight numbers, duetting with Payne on a couple, and finishing off with his smash trademark, "Old Black Magic." Latter tune is aided and abetted considerably whe production background in which the whole Roxyette line shadows the Daniels' gesturing. It's a begoff routine.

Shoda gives a superlative demonstration of ice-stepping to a bolero number. It's a dramatic item. A dance duet by a couple of unbilled male skaters to "Walking My Baby Back Home" also hits nicely.

Overall production on the show is excellent from the costuming to the line's choreography. Opening number, "Ragtime Cowboy Joe," in which the line does a western routine, is especially effective.

One of the high spots is the Ciro Rimac turn. Coming up sixth, Rimac switches pace of the show with an exciting Latino routine. He's assisted by two femme lookers and an agile male terper in a set that includes south-of-the-border dancing and singing. It's a colorful and rhythmic quarter-hour good for solid mitts. Rudy Vallee, Dorothy Sarnoff, Paul Gray, Mage & Karr; "Outcasts of Poker Flat" (20th).

This is a class show, and it is luring the carriage trade to the big 'F' St. showcase. Headliners Rudy Vallee and Dorothy Sarnofi (latter new acts) would rate attention in the best niteries. On Capitol stage they garner kudos with routines skillfully tailored for pop tastes.

Rudy Vallee starts a bit slowly with the bobbysoxers of today. However, he gradually wins them with his smooth and easy style and builds for a boff finish. His is certainly not the "family type" entertainment beloved of this house, particularly since he can't resist tossing in a blueish gag here and there, a la his supper-club routine. And style is definitely far more sophisticated than the usual fare here. But Vallee continues to be an entertainer of polish and grace, with a keen sense of timing and showmanship in every inch of his Esquire self.

At show caught, he falled to wear the bright red dinner jacket which set the galleries agog in earlier shows. His bright, blonder than-ever hair and his immaculate attire are well suited to the act. Warms up with his theme song, "My Time is Your Time," and goes on to a comic turn about a two-headed girl, with a nonsense recitation to music. Actually, this is low comedy contrasting effectively with his elegant air, but it falls flat with Capitol payees, who take their humor in less sublefashion. Really gets going with a sample of his virtuosity on the sax, much to delight of the mature section of the galleries.

From here on in, Vallee has the large house with him, and whips them up to top enthusiasm with elapping gimmick added, and wabks off with his cocky nonchalance to tune of much-mitt action.

Comic Paul Gray does fine with a music-hall type of routine. His gags are gently paced and mild, but they register well, and there's a constant accompaniment of audience, giggles. His act is varied with a fusion, and some sentimental tunes, plus a good bit of double talk. Dolores Gray's appearance in "Pygmalion" at the Country Playhouse here was essentially agamble by the shapely tunester for the Theatre Guild's contemplated musical version of the Bernard Shaw play. Although she knows that, Mary Martin is the Guild's first choice, because of her profitable personal following. Miss Gray asked for this chance to show them.

Consensus was that Miss Gray gave a sharp, glowing impersonation that consolidated all of the impressions that her's is a firm talent. It was her first major legit role and, directed with great care by John C. Wilson, she definitely made a strong bid for the musical a year away. Theresa Helburn, codirector of the Guild, monitored the Westport performance, and Frederick Loewe, who will do the book to Alan Jay Lerner's music, was here also.

Miss Gray's Eliza Doolittle contrasts notably with the memorable phonetic heroines of "Pygmalion" the past three decades, bringing a more romantic note to the proceedings than is generally delivered. Lynn Fontanne was more indignant than romantic, and Ruth Chatterton in the late Auriol Lee's excellent production was somewhat stagey. Gertrude Lawrence's more recent Eliza was highly competent, as was to be expected, but with no surprises.

Gondola Hypo For Todd Shows

his two-ply shows at the Marine

In a move to hypo business at his two-ply shows at the Marine Stadium, Jones Beach, L. I., producer Michael Todd is doing what he describes as "bringing the boxoffice to the people." In a deal with George P. Skouras, of Skouras Theatres, he has arranged to use the boxoffice of the closed Rivoll Theatre, N. Y., to sell tickness for his "Night in Venice" operetta and the marine circus. He'll also use the boxoffice of various dark Skouras houses on Long Island for similar sale.

In addition, the producer will send promotion reps by gondola to various Long Island shore towns to ballyhob "Venice" and the swimming show. He's convinced that in good weather there's ample business from what he calls the "captive audience" of regular Jones Beach visitors, including Jourists. But from the first, the headache in the operation has been the possibility of rainy, or even cold and threatening weather. He hopes to counteract that adverse factor by pushing ticket sales at the boxoffices of the Rivoli on Broadway and the other Skouras theatres, plus other special arrangements he hopes to make.

rangements he hopes to make.

Although attendance was large at the Rodgers-Hammerstein night Monday (30), the first of an announced series of weekly concerts at the Maring Stadium, Todd would prefer to present "Venlee" that night, making it a sevennights-a-week show. However, that would require a waiver of Equity's six-night rule, so he will appeal to the union for necessary permission. Even the nightly operation, he notes, would involve only seven performances a week, as "Venice" plays no matinees.

Swim show, which is under American Guild of Variety Artists jurisdiction, will be presented every afternoon at the water stadium, starting tomorrow (Thurs.).

In commenting on the League Equity move, one prominent League member asserted, "Such a policy is essential if the theatre is to continue as an independent art, medium of creative expression or even as a healthy business. Agreement is reportedly all negotiated, with only a few minor technicalities to be worked out by the lawyers for the respective groups. It will probably be signed before the start of the fall production season.

One of the changes in the pact is understood to be a reduction in royalties on top-grossing musicals, which under the upped b.o. scales of the last few years have given authors of such shows an unprecedented financial cleanup. Also, the revised deal is said to simplify the procedure by which the producer of a lesser-draw show can obtain royalty cuts or waivers in order to keep it running.

On the other hand, the new rules reportedly call for increased advance royalties and give additional breaks to playwrights, including payments to the author of a flopshow in return for the management's right to retain his share of subsidiary income without having to play the former three-week minimum, In general, the changes are aimed to improve the position of the young or not-yet-established authors.

Despite the extreme pro and con reports of Broadway kibitzers who saw it during its three and a half weeks of previews, "Wish You Were Here" is neither a wonder musical nor a fiasco. Its a reasonably enjoyable show with a pleasantly atmospheric book, excellent songs, a likable if somewhat lightweight cast and a provocative novelty—an actual onstage swimming pool.

pool. "Wish" rarely builds up much "Wish" rarely builds up much momentum, however; never fully captures the audience, and plainly feels the lack of stars. Although there is potent material in the show, notably in the comedy and the songs, there's no one in the cast who has the necessary combination of talent and personal magnetism to take command of the stage and audience. So "Wish" misses the sort of rousing numbers or scenes that can turn a good show into a smash. It's a doubtful box office bet.

into a smash. It's a doubtful box office bet.

The musical is adapted from "Having Wonderful Time," Arthur Kober's straight comedy, which was a moderate success of the 1936-37 season, getting almost unanimously favorable notices and playing 46 weeks to $8,000-$9,000 grosses. There was also a road company and an RKO film edition. This musical version is primarly a Joshua Logan operation, since he has collaborated with Kober on the book, partnered with Leland Hayward in the production and has not only directed it, but also staged the dances.

Perhaps the most serious draw-back of "Wish" is its under-casting.
With the exception of Sheila Bond, the show, and not even a has the style, authority and personality that suggests potential stardom.

Even so, "Wish" is a moderately diverting and enjoyable show. The Catskllis, resort locale and the tender put uneven romance of the attractive Bronx girl, Teddy Stern, and the proud young law student, Chick "Miller the was a graduate, named Chick Kessler, in the original edition), is accurately and colorfully transferred from the Koberplay. Moreover, Harold Rome has come up with perhaps his best score to date; Logan's staging, including the vivid dancing, is one of the most brilliant jobs he's ever done and Jo Mielziner has contributed appropriately decorative scenery.

Also Jack Cassidy is ingratiating as the juvenile lead (created in the original by the late of John—then Jules—Garfield); Siddeney Armus is acceptable as the social director, the comedy lead; Paul Valentine is okay as a yacastoining Lothario; Harry Clark is satisfactory as the heroine's discarded fiance; Sammy Smith, is believable as the resort owher, and John Perkins is convincing as the spot's muscleman. They're all good enough, but none of them really knocks over the audience. The swimming pool, the most spectacular element in the production, provides a stunning novelty for the first-act finale. But although some attempt has been made to tie the action relating to it into the basic story, it remains pretty much incidental. Chiefly because of the swimming pool, which required elaborate stage (and an increase in the stagehand bill each week) "Wish" couldn't be 'taken on the road for a tryout. Instead, the management substituted the unprecedented series of paid previews, some sold to theatre party organizations and some to indicate the sumprecedented some to indicate the unprecedented series of paid previews, some sold to theatre party organizations and couldn't be taken on the road for a tryout. Instead, the management substituted the unprecedented series of paid previews, some sold to theatre party organizations and some to individuals on Hayward's private mailing list.

The result was anything but satisfactory. In addition to the fact that party audiences are figured usually not typical and thereforeless reliable as to reaction, the intown revisions and cast changes caused endless unfavorable comment from the Shubert Alley Cassandras who attended the preliminary performances, in some cases three and four times.

Although the screen rights to "Having Wonderful Time" were sold years ago, the rights to this musical adaptation should be worth something. For "Wish" appears to be admirable screen material, particularly since it would probably then be cast with stars.

Legit Followups

(SHUBERT, N. Y.)

Eddie Dowling's recent takeover, in "Paint Your Wagon," of the lead role created by James Barton, gives the musical a slightly different but equally pleasant flavor. That's further marked in the contrast of Ann Crowley's ingenue treatment of the role of the miner's daughter to the rowdy playing of Olga San Juan, who originally had the part, and Nola Fairbanks, who followed. Dowling and Miss Crowley combine to give the Frederick Loewe-Alan Jay Lerner show a much gentler quality than in its original conception. Dowling, particularly, provides a wistfulness that is a marked switch from the more robust interpretation of Barton. Notable is the fact that either way the musical's good points and bad points are equally discernible, and the overall effect is one of highly-palatable entertainment.

Highlight in contrast is the second-act drunk scene. It was practically written for Barton, who for years has been noted for his vaude drunk act. He got fremendous roars in his version, while Dowling's stew is a more pleasant, easy-going little man. As far as voices go, there's not much to choose from between the two men. Barton was louder and more easily heard. "Dowling has a small set of pipes that also combline, however, a bit of sweetness.

Show's chief draw is the spectacle angle. It is presented on a concrete offshore stage 104 feet wide, with a circular 76-foot revolving stage in the center, and a 100-foot lagoon separating stage from the stadium customers. Planes flying overhead, blinking autos passing on the viaduct in the background, enhance the unusual water-land setting. Use of the lagoon for the production proper, for gondolas passing back and forth with principals, for a water tableau (that on opening night went askew), heighten the novelty. Add to an oversize operetta of over 100 actors-dancers-singers such extraneous effects as a mammoth fireworks display to close the first act; acrobats, tumblers, and even the dove-fancier, Rosita Royce, for a brief, non-strip moment, and the eye-car appeal is apparent.

Distance of stage from audience militates against any intimacy, which the customers don't expect in this situation. For the precise, there are rented binoculars attached to the seats.

"Venice" isn't a major Strauss work. The music is good, but there are only one or two outstanding numbers (like "Come, My Beloved" and "Don't Speak of Love To Me"), and the new book and lyrics by Ruth and Thomas Martin are trite, corny, and dull. Todd, however, has given "Wenice" a glitteringly lavish production. Raoul Pene BuBois' sets make a full city out of the stage, with streets, houses, towers, balconics and quays, while the revolving stage works m'rac'ce. DuRois' cos-

Edward Caulfield, whose "Bruno and Sidney" had a run of six performances in the season of 1948-49 and was the last play to be done by New Stages, has provided radio actor-announcer Ron Rawson with "Stacey Jones" to open his second season Monday (30) at the Westhampton Playhouse. The farce about the Long Island Railroad is not likely to create any new goodwill for the bowed down commuters' curse.

"Stacey Jones" stars a local resident, Arthur Treacher, and what few laughs the hard-weiting comedian and other such pros as Howard Smith, Russ Brown, Alonzo Bosan, Ralph Bell and Robert Patten get are obtained by Eags recognizable only to the local gentry who are forced to spend much of their time on the Cannon Ball Express.

ten get are obtained by gags recognizable only to the local gentry who are forced to spend much of their time on the Cannon Ball Express.

Caulfield has written with such lack of clarity that he should follow the last curtain with an illustrated lecture with charts, showing the relationships of the various people who drift in and out of his play, and clearing up his plot, which seems more complicated than "Hamlet."

Treacher, flattening out his British accent, does not play the title role. "Stacey Jones," but it has nothing to do with railroads. It is the name of an air-minded 10-year-old orphan about to be adopted by Treacher's daughter. A deal is made with the head of a Southern orphanage by the daughter's husband to exchange an old boxcar, the Phoebe Snow seems to be the collector's item among them.

The British comedian is not found in a butter's role, but as a worker on the LIRR. and heads a household, all employed by the line. There is also a middle-aged Southern belle, but what she was doing in this menage could never be figured out.

The show comes to its senseless and bad taste end with the daughter developed the boy were needless,
Richard Burns designed and executed a bright and sunny set and Ruth Rawson, wife of the producer, directed as though she knew what the play was about.

Treacher showed that he is a witty and humorous man in his curtain speech opening night. His own lines were the only funny ones spoken the whole eventing.

Stacey Jones' will probably be driven off and buried in the sand dunes after its week here, and Treacher can go on his summer theatre tour with "On Approval" feeling he has at least done his civic duty.

though at no time is the kid represented as having the equipment or ability for even a cheer-leader's job.

"Ginger" does deliver a touch-down finally, and in the last minute of play, but it turns out that her team was 64 points ahead anyway, and her would-be opposition interceptors were so convulsed with laughter that they were powerless to stop her.

Polly Rowles, playing the wife, turns in a standout performance, ably seconding Douglas. In fact, the realistic connubial moments, including a final curtain that could be blue without the fast staging provided here, lend the production the entertainment values that sent 'em home happy here. Possibly a further writing-in of this side of the business would strengthen the script, as might the substitution of a non-contact sport tend to bring up the moppet end.

Miss Ross, although okay on size, doesn't convince as the athletically over-ambitious sibling. (Incidentally, the situation is finally resolved by the kid's sudden decision to be a girl and have dates, which normal development saves her father's job, his ethics, the town's equanimity, and may even result her having a little brother later. Her sisters, acted by Gena Rowlands and Nancy Devlin, adequately carry out their limiter chores, while Leora Thatcher, the maid, works a thin role into three dimensions. Others, notably Billy James and Roland Wood as boy teenagers, centry conviction in minor roles. Don Hersey's staging is well-paced, and wrings plenty of laughs out of bits of business worked out without the help of the author. The single set might have been borrowed from the local high-school dramatic society at less expense. A banker never lived in this poverty-stricken interior.

Edward Everett Horton's return this week to the Spa Theatre, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in "Nina," rather than "Springtime for Henry," produced an editorial (27) in the Schenectedy Union-Star. Titled "Divorce, or Just Separation," it said the actor's appearance in a new play, "is news. More than 2,000 times the poker-faced comedian, who at one time was on the way to becoming the most famous summer resident at Lake George, has played, 'Henry'. Chicago Sun-Times, in an editorial last-week, plugged the U. S. State Dept.'s move in helping to send "Porgy and Bess' abroad for the Berlin Festival late in August. A noted Broadway playwright and Hollywood screenwriter and his then-wife, a legit-film actress, are said to be the real-life prototypes of a new play, "Sweet Lorraine," by Abby Mann. and Bernard Drew, to be tried out next week at the Lakeside Theatre, Landing, N. Distributed profit on the No. 2 company of "Moon Is Blue," which closed Saturday night (28) in Chicago, is $155,000 thus far. Figure was incorrectly quoted in last week's issue as $55,000. Broadway hit the seasonal skids last week. The general attendance slump hipped all except the "big three" sellouts. Of the undercapacity draws, the long-run leader, "South Pacific," was affected the least. Business was generally lively Monday and Tuesday nights (23-24) and at the Wednesday matinee (25), but sagged thereafter, with stiffing weather an aggravating factor.

"Wish You. Were Here," drew a generally unfavorable press, but registered a sizable part-week gross, with the advance sale apparently a major factor. Window trade since the opening has been with however.

"Point of No Return" shuttered last Saturday night (28), but reopens in five weeks. "Mrs. McThing" continues through July 18, then goes to Central City, Col., for a short engagement, after which it resumes its Broadway rum. At least one show is a possibility to fold this week.

D. C. Arena Theatre Clicks Despite Competition, 'Darling of Embassy Row'

Washington, July 1.
With the question of whether or not the nation's capital can support two legits still unanswered, a third theatre is winding up its second year of modest but successful existence. Arena Theatre, town's 247-seat theatre-in-the-round, celebrates its second anniversary Aug. 16 with its ledgers firmly in the black and its position in the community's cultural life solidly established.

Started on an investment of $15. Started on an investment of $1,000 raised by popular subscription, at $50 per share, Arena is the brainchild of two former George Washington U. Drama Dept. staffers, Edward Mangum and Zelda ers, Edward Mangum and Zeida Fichandler.

Miss Fichandler, who took over as sole managing director when ill health forced Mangum to set up shop in Hawaii, boasts that, in less than two years, the group has advanced to an all-Equity status, has been in the black for three out of four productions, and has made back its total investment with enough left over to declare a small dividend. Best of all, in a town noted for its tough critical corps, it has won consistent praise for high calibre of its efforts. Current show, John Patrick's "Hasty Heart," directed by Alan Schneider, hit the critical jackpot with four raves and no dissenters.

Diplomatic Advice

Diplomatic Advice

Interesting angle of the growth of the little theatre group is its international aspects. It's the daring of Embassy Row, and numbers the British Ambassador and wife; and Madame Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, as regular customers. Even the Soviet Ambassador came for "inspector General," and at one time or another, it has had reps from every Embassy in town. Foreign diplomats, more accustomed to the idea of repertory theatre than Americans, have shown their enthusiasm by even giving free technical advice for certain plays.

Average run for the first year was two weeks. As theatre grew and audiences expanded, this has been pushed up to four weeks, with an all-time high set by "Three Men On a Horse," which ran for 10 consecutive weeks.

Operation is unique, remaining unaffected by general tenor of show biz or the other legits. With a top take of $2,800 and a weekly nut of about $2,000, this is smalltime stuff, but substantial in its effect on the community.

Scale of house is to be upped from $1.90 to $2.40 for Fridays and Saturdays, starting next week. Week runs from Tuesday through from $1.90 to $2.40 for Fridays and Saturdays, startling next week. Week runs from Tuesday through Sunday, with Saturday matinee. Salary scale is the Equity minimum, a straight $55 for all 16 full-time employees, with a sliding scale for jobbers. Recent additions to get the start of the late of the start of the star scale for jobbers. Recent additions to staff include Catholic U.'s Alan Schneider, director of the current play, who will start full time after his summer of civic repertory in England, and Cody Pfanstiehl, local radio publicist, who is outside press consultant. Theatre is air-conditioned, but takes August off as vacation for the staff.

Arena, modest in size, has caught on as a community institution and seems fast on the way towards a national rep for top-drawer repertory theatre.

Mpls. Choralaires Finally Get European Jaunt Set After Coin, Plane Snarls

Minneapolis, July 1.

Minneapolis, July 1.
By the skin of its teeth, the Minneapolis Choralaires, local 45person singing group, is getting abroad to participate in the Wales international music contest and to give concerts in Scotland and England.

The group's campaign to raise the necessary $22,000 finances ended $7,000 short. It refused a local brewery sponsorship which would have provided the additional sum. Then plane reservations were cancelled and the jaunt called off

However, after local newspapers publicized the situation, additional donors came forward with the $7,000. Then the group found that plane reservations were unavailable.

At the 11th hour, TWA advised that a special plane would be sent across to carry the singers. Northwest Airlines also furnished a special plane to carry them to New York.

The Choralaires are scheduled The Choralaires are scheduled, to give nine concerts in England, Scotland and Wales in 12 days. Bob Mantzke, the director, is the son of Frank Mantzke, former Universal branch manager here and in Milwaukee, and now head of a film buying and booking group and theatre circuit.

Stewart Cruichank presentation of Howard & Wyndiam revue, Staged by Heath Joyce, Dances by Cherry Willoughby, Orch directed by Jack Bolesworth, At Theatre Royal, Glasgow,

This is fairly bright revue fare, with much emphasis on the spectacular. It adds up to entertaining stuff, though some of the sketches could do with crisper taglines. Large cast is extremely versatile, costumes are of high quality, and the dancing of Anton & Yolette is a standout.

Show, however, is heavy-handed in opening half, with poorest sketches making for heavy going and the laughs coming with difficulty. Despite this handleap, Stanley Barker, young Scot comedian making his bow in the bigtime, acquits himself well, particularly in solo spots. He's at his best in silent mime as a young lady bathing herself, and he works well in sketches, With more definite style, he should soon be a leading Scot comedian.

sketches, with more dendre syrches should soon be a leading Scot comedian.

Teaming with Baxter and George Lacy, prominent English comic, is not the best mating, however. Their Dame comedy has too muchof a kinship, Obviously, Lacy is featured as co-star to buttress the new Scot comedian. This timid policy doesn't pay dividends. Starring of Baxter as solo top would have been a bold and much-appreciated move. On his showing, he's fit to head any No. 1 Scot revue.

Bond Rowell, longtime foil to comic Jack Anthony, has now joined the Howard & Wyndham outfit and brings much experience to feeding the new young comic. Cicely Hullett is an experienced comedienne, with a very nice appearance.

George Lacy himself has a good solo spot, revealing that he's as fine an artist as ever. There is harmony from a new English act, the Four in a Chord, and Andrew Macpherson handles the Scottish songs in excellent voice.

With a little more wit and imagination plus better workout of the characters and a few good tunes this could serve as a good plot for a musical comedy. In its present form, as a straight comedy, it rates little more than a few chuckles and is only mildly entertaining. Cleverly adapted and rewritten, it might have moderate U.S. chances. Plot concerns an ambitious chambermaid who poses as her coven employer, a glamorous countess, in order to get acquainted with a baron known as a ladykiller. She doesn't know, though, that the supposed baron is only the latter's butler and that the baron has been carrying on an affair with the countess for some time.

The performance is generally satisfactory and makes the most of the thin material. The "serving" couple, played by Grete Heger and Wolfgang Dauscha, rates top acting honors. Franz Dehler looks suave enough to convince as the baron, while Hedda Ippen, as the genuine countess, is eyefilling. Erhard Siedel's direction is adequate and Hermann Eggmann's one set has style and atmosphere. Mezo.

Glaube, Liebe, Hoffmung (Faith, Love, Hope)

Flay in one act & seenes by Odon von Horvath Froduced by Kleines Theatre in Konzerthaus. Directed by Michael Kemm, sets by Harry Glockner, mer. Klaus Scholz, Lotte Freumbauer, Karl Mittner, and Kleines Theatre in Konzerthaus Vienna.

When the talented Odon von Horvath died, he left behind of, "Faith, Love, Hope." His heirs alve decided what the playwright probably would have denied; that it its a finished play. Seen here in the talented of a powerful and moving drama. But as seen in this excellently mounted and acted performance, this offers no more than some sharply etched character studies against a somber back-ground of the tragedy of the "little people."

A very ordinary girl, effectively portrayed by Trude Poschi, is the play's central figure. The script purports to show how she is enmeshed and dragged to destruction by bureaucracy, the little nasty paragraphs of the law that make life a labyrinth for even the seriototed in the police states. Recause she peddled corsets without a license she has been fined. Because she was fined she cannot get the license she steals. And because she has stolen, the one man of the license she steals. And because she has stolen, the one man for fear of endangering his career. The Kleine's Theatre ensemble, Vlenna's most talented dramatic group offers refreshingly modern performances in contrast to the customary Austrian heaviness, Kehlmann's direction is skillful, the sets effective on the tiny stage. Miss Poschl is superb; the rest of the cast falls a little short. But there's nothing for Broadway.

election, in which the conserva-tive forces won a sweeping victory. In general, the conservatives tend to be against merger, with the progressive element favoring it.

Impractical Plan?

Aside from the financial aspect of the matter (Equity has the largest treasury of any of the performer unions), the conservative resistance to the merger was apparently expressed by Sidney Blackmer in a speech before the Coast chapter last spring. Actor termed the plan impractical, and added that the members of such affilliates as the American Federaaffiliates as the American Federa-tion of Radio Artists and the American Guild of Variety Artists are "performers" rather than ac

AGVA, however, apparently favors the TVA-AFRA merger, provided it can be a party to it. But TVA-AFRA heads, under the leadership of George Heller, TVA executive secretary, are aware of AGVA's numerical strength, and are understood to be fearful of being swallowed up if the vaude-nitery outfit were to become part of a three-way outfit.

That tends to make Equity the key to the problem. But Equity, despite the several-times record vote of its council, is still cautious about merger. This stems from the traditional stand-pat attitude of its veteran members, plus an anxiety to hang on to its substantial bankroll.

By Frank Scully

Though I personally have romped the open ranges of life and letters like an unroped bronco for 40 years, I always feel a cold chill of fear for those who have enjoyed the security of a nice warm box stall and now want out.

like an unroped bronco for works, when a nice warm box stall and for those who have enjoyed the security of a nice warm box stall and now want out.

This feeling resolves into chills and fevers when I read of a picture star who has been on one solvent lot for 10 years or so, and is now using every legal device to break the home ties and try his hand at free enterprise.

It is easy for actors to be beguiled by their press notices and forget that some of the lines they are reading are actually reflections from those in their own faces, and that the skills of makeup men in hidig those lines cannot be carried on forever. It is one of the ironies of their profession that when they are young and handsome they get paid little for knowing less, and when they know more, and are worth more, the lines begin to show, and soon it is time for them to think about running things from behind the camera instead of in front of it.

But now and then one emerges from this complicated network while still young enough to knock off several millions on his own. In this exclusive fraternity Alan Ladd, I suspect, would be head man. After grossing $60,000,000 for Par in a flock of pictures which were mediocre at best, he said said goodbye to all that, and is now freelancing with all the recklessness of a king of England forsaking Buckingham Palace for Windsor.

at best, he said said goodbye to all that, and is now receasing with all the recklessness of a king of England forsaking Buckingham Palace for Windsor.

In all his years at Paramount, he never had an Academy Award picture, but he never starred in a picture that lost money either. I don't know if any other star can make that statement. He has been panned by the critics and has been shortchanged often in co-stars.

This Ladd For Hire

The Ladd who started out at Par as a grip and worked up to $300 a week when his pictures were grossing $3,000,000, now works for $150,000 guarantees against 10% of the world's gross. That's what he got for "The Iron Mistress" at Warnegs. On his next one, called "Desert Legion," which starts July 7 at Universal-International, he is taking no salary but 50% of the profits. That one can bring him a nice piece of change for years.

When he completes "Desert Legion," Ladd is going to England to make a picture, and plans to take his whole family. That means his wife and their four children. They will tour Europe looking for places where the climate approximates what was once sunny California and where they can sop up some culture. For this young man began to work as soon as he finished high school, and worked so hard in the next 20 years that he never had the time to see the melancholy wonders of a dying continent.

He will learn a lot. for he is a singularly graciots, soft-spoken and 20 years that he never had the time to see the melancholy wonders of a dying continent.

He will learn a lot, for he is a singularly gracious, soft-spoken and attentive fellow. The world may look upon him as a glamorous star but he has no illusions about what he is. "Just plain lucky" is his idea of Alan Ladd. Dotted all over Europe he will find a friendly press below hysteria which his fans will release at the sight of this slender, blond, tanned athlete, whose two-fisted activities are confined to the screen. I don't think he's ever been in a nightclub brawl and not much in nightclubs either.

Only the other day, as further proof to his character, if not his success, I made a date to talk with Ladd. I had met him at a few of the nicer social gatherings at the homes of nicer people, but I still wanted to see just what made him tick. Before we could set a place to meet, he fractured his right hand in the last day's shooting of "The Iron Mistress."

nicer social gatherings at the homes of nicer people, but I still wanted to see just what made him tick. Before we could set a place to meet, he fractured his right hand in the last day's shooting of "The Iron Mistress."

By the time he was well enough to move around, I didn't feel so hot, and he immediately offered to come up to Bedside Manor after lunchcon for an hour or two. He arrived as much on time as a radio commercial, with his bandaged and splinted hand sticking in the air.

Of course it was only a coincidence, but the first big thing that happened after Warners signed this hottest property in town was a $1,000,000 fire. He's been pretty hot all his life, because he was born in Hot Springs, Ark., and was raised in North Hollywood before that metropolis of the San Fernando Valley surrendered to the smog, fog, grog and hog-eat-hog that is slowly making it the Pittsburgh of the west. He was a good all-round athlete in high school and holds the 50-yard free-style interscholastic swimming record. He was also the Coast diving champion in 1932 and still looks as if he doesn't weigh an ounce over 150 lbs.

He graduated from high school when the depression was at its worst. He had got a job on a North Hollywood throw-away, dug ditches, and got hired as a studio grip. Not until then did he decide to become an actor, and he starved and studied for several years.

Sue Carol, a former star, who was then an actor's agent, heard him on a radio show. He was playing a dual role, a man of 60 and his son. She sent for him, liked him from the first moment he entered her office, and for the next two years they bucked a mighty strong current, with no luck. Then he got the lead in a little thing called "This Gun For Hire." It made Ladd a star overnight.

One Gun To Riches

Shortly after the picture was completed, he and Sue Carol were married and she turned his contract over to another agency, but has never ceased to be the girl behind the gun. Everybody thinks of him as a screen killer, but for the record, he played a kille

Then somebody with bit sense built a bistro around one of the showy nudes and the Pigalle' of today was on the way.

This was once the swank rendezyous section of Paris but is now more the tourist trap giving the picture of "Gay Olde Paree." Babes, "feelthy" postcards and champagne run riot in the quarter. Place Pigalle houses the Naturistes, a rather seedy nudist nitery with listiess girls. It does not offer enough to be worth the $1.75 cover charge and ensuing tab.

The Pigalls, which is catacorner, and also on Place Pigalle, has a more atmospheric feeling of old Paris, with an offbeat decorated room looking like a lush set from a Tennessee Williams' opus. A raised glass stage with constantly shifting lighting holds a bunch of gyrating gals with breasts bared and managing to keep in time on their pirouettes. Singers are fair and there are some interesting off-beat effects with the lights down. They shuffle out a ludicrous symbolic piece about a man who must choose between a roulette wheel and the chesty chorines. The gals get the nod. This club belongs to Nachat Martini, one of the top street showman, who remodeled this into a fairly successful nude joint. He also has the Sphinx across the street, on Rue Pigalls to get into the act. They gyrate without any terp know-how with some singers who are bearly bearable. Tariff is 3,500 francs ($10) for champagne and starts at 700 ($2) for mixed drinks. Martini is the man who leased Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, N. Y., to transpose it into the French Casino. Martini has taken over a complete Gallic crew and intends to feature the good old French can-can and chantoosies.

Thrushes at Eve

Also on Place Pigalle is the Eve, which is a good few notches above its neighbors.. House is smartly decorated and lit, and the show is well garbed and produced. The gals look better and tastier and the singers sound better. Choreography by Joan Davis is good and raphy by Joan Davis is good ankeeps moving on the small floor-lighted stage. The Nouvelle Eve down the street at 25 Rue Fontaine, is run by Rene Bardy, who also manages the Eve. Club is ultra swank and decorated with finesse. Costumes are lush and gals outstanding. General terping and show numbers are adequate. Atmosphere is rich and cordial with a 1,200 franc ($3.50) admission charge before even getting into the fine fastness, and then the tab tablewise is 4,000 francs ($12). Place has nifty taxi gals. However, they are fine looking but just a gal's company, including only patter and dancing, costs 4,000 francs. They also drink your liquor a lot and are specially, chosen. They look like sorority girls. Extras such as programs, pictures and flowers hawked by winsome lasses mount the tab skyhigh if one is not careful. Surrounding streets house the various Pigalle clip joints which are only worth a look-see for the curious rounding streets house the various Pigalle clip joints which are only worth a look-see for the curious and should be done when soher. A visiting N. Y. producer wandered into one of these clippos in a slightly hazy state one night and soon champagne bottle corks were zipping like firefiles. There are the usual panze and lesbos joints in the belt, the best known being Moune, on Rue Pigalle, Chez Tonton, on Rue De Martyrs, and La Mere Artur. They're worth a curio peek, Tabs are giverage but there is a fendency to clip if you don't watch. Some adroit practices in clippos is to empty part of the champagne while couples are dancing, keeping glasses constantly filled, and gliding in a new one before ordered, depending on tourist tolerance to get away with it.

The Bal Tabarin is one of the staider w.k. cabarets that maintains a steady b.o. Entrance is 600 francs ($1.80) and most tourist Paris-by-night bus trips have the Tabarin on their agenda. The châmpagne is 3,500 francs ($10) and the how is usually interesting. Show changes every few years and is mostly dependent for appeal on the intricate mechanisms and production numbers that surround the show. There are large ceiling lifts which descend with bevies of semiclad lovelies in pretentious symbolic pageantry. There is also a floor elevator for more of same. There are various good acrobatic acts; girls look good and terping is fair.

The Club De L'Opera at 19 Rue Joubert, is a pleasantly animated boite gladhanded by trouper-chantoosey Suzy Solidor. One can dine here reasonably or just drink a nitery tab. Miss Solidor delivers her songs in fine manner, and eye apeal is added by the statuesque O'Dett. Coming up the Avenue de l'Opera, towards Palais Royale, is Chez Gilles, which is a cabaret-O'Dett. Peak age for film attendance is 19. It builds up from about 15 and slants slowly downward after 19 until approximately 30, when a sharper-decline sets in. The over-30 set has long been known in the trade as "the lost audience."

So set has now been known in the trade as "the lost andleince."

The birthrate sank precipitously in about 1932, when the depression began making child-bearing a luxury many couples couldn't afford. In 1936, the rate dropped to a low of 16.7 births per thousand population. Important rise began in 1941, when it went to 18.8. It continued to rise through 1943 (21.5.) but then slumped (to 19.5 in '44) because of the war, until 1946, when the big upturn really came. The rate bounced to 23.3.

All-time record was hit in 1947 with a rate of 25.8 births per thousand population. The figure has hovered within two points of that record ever since.

Interpretation of the figures is sand population. The figure has hovered within two points of that record ever since.

Interpretation of the figures is quite obvious. The crop of babies born—or, rather, not born—between 1930 and 1940 would be in the 12 to 22-year age bracket now. That means that the size of the group in the peak theatregoing years is below normal—and it is being feit at the b.o.

Baby-Sitter Angle

Theatres, however, are unfortunately being hit doubly by the birthrate phenomena. The big harvest since 1946 means the existence of a vast population of parents with children at the age where they require baby-sitters. Ma and pa have to forego altogether going to films or they are at least seriously deterred by the added expense of a sitter.

Ease with which kids can be tossed in a car and allowed to sleep, while their parents watch the show, is part of the explanation, as Wilby pointed out, for current success of the drive-ins.

Looking ahead, however, this new crop of youngsters may mean a brighter future for theatreme—if they live that long. The product of 1941—when the birthrate upturn set in—will be 16 in 1957. The peak—if American habits and modes of entertainment haven't completely changed by then—should be reached theoretically in 1966. That's when the record number of 1947 bables will be at their top filmgoing age.

Now if someone can figure out with the theatremend on the mean-

Same Old Act

Lou Walters, Latin Quarter, N. Y., operator, says that many cafes have been selling the same talent with the same acts for many years. It's little wonder that business in many niteries is falling off, he observes. "Macy's couldn't get away with selling the same num-bers season in and out, and neither can night clubs.

The C&M office has been working on the theory that bands as well as the routines of acts should be order-built for the room, Cabot says that the acoustics of no two rooms are alike, and thus orths must be modulated to meet each room's requirements. Office has been building bands for the Schine chain and doing well.

Cabot also pointed out that the Versailles, N. Nit-ery will again use a similarly tallor-made unit in the fall. last week

Keeling is that more niteries will have to go in for production ideas made to order for their own structions. The Latin Quarter has done well with big shows and foreign talent. The Miami Beach edition of that spot battled top do-mestic names with a big production show and foreign turns, and did better than most clubs at that resort.

The next few months may see a battle between (a) bankrolls able to buy the headliners and (b) ingenuity. Both are potent weapons in a joust of this kind.

It's anticipated that most of the writers that have been working with Berle will be let out. The present scripters have been doubling at being performers. However, it was a known fact that Berle did most of the scripting and had the typewriting squad whip it into shape. Any sketch that the writers turned in would undergo wholesale revisions by Berle. At the same time, Berle did most of the production and direction by himself.

Latest Pay-as-You-See

New facet has been added to Telemeter, pay-as-you-see TV system in which Paramount holds a 50% interest. It's a polling device by which TM subscribers will be able to register an instant "yes" or "no" vote to any proposition put before them via television.

Carl Leserman, who with David Loew is Par's partner in Telemeter, disclosed on his arrival in New York from the Coast this week, that coin receptacles now being manufactured for installation on subscribers' TV sets would have the "yes" "no" buttons. He said the polling device was suggested by a TM engineer and could be added at so little extra cost that it was felt to be worthwhile as a public service gesture.

Actually, unless there's a special reason to hurry, it will normally take four weeks to get all the answers in on any poll. The "yes" or "no" is punched in the tape that records in the coin box what show the subscriber is buying. The coin boxes and tapes will be collected once a month. Each day, 5% of the boxes are collected, so a sampling can be had day following the poll and there would be a 25% sample available at end of a week.

Despite weeks of advance preparation, the radio-TV networks covering the Republican convention here have discovered one important angle was overlooked. That's some means of protecting newsmen conducting corridor interviews, particularly those televised "q. & a." sessions, from being bounced around by the "goon squads" obviously organized to "invade" the telecasts.

As the delegate dogflight between the Taft and Eisenhower forces hit the "no holds barred" stage, the partisans of both camps put the physical squeeze on the TV commentators by a series of planned "invasions" of the various off-thecuff shows picked up by the cameras strategically located in the halls of the Conrad Hilton Hotel, convention headquarters.

With all signs pointing to the 1952-53 season being the best commercially in television history, top execs of both CBS-TV and NBC-TV are asking, "What's all this about a 'soft' market for TV sponsors?" To date, with more than two months of selling still to go before the season officially starts in September, NBC is dusting off its nighttime SRO sign and CBS isn't far behind. And with several top bankrollers known to be shopping for programs and network time, it looks as though ABC and DuMont will also capitalize on the market's bullishness.

Chicago, July 8.

Delegates to the Republican convention are evidently awaiting the return of prosperity—that is, the Republican kind. The politicos aren't spending their money for any entertainment. Instead, they seem to be looking to the various candidates for cuffo drinks, food and acts.

So far, the Taft forces made the only big splash, spending a reported $15,000 for three days of Sammy Kaye and four days of the Vagabonds. Elsenhower backers used Lou Breese's hand at a Blackstone Theatre reception Sunday (6). Hotel managers are getting a financial headache from the free bars scattered around the various headquarters' ante-rooms.

The noise and commotion in the hotels caused one worried manager to remark, "The veteran groups in convention are bad enough, but tame by comparison to these pseudo-playboy politicians." While hotels take unusual precautions during conventions, this one calls for delicacy of handling due to the national interest—and publicity.

Nat'l 'Web' of 84 TV-Equipped Theatres Offered to Big Non-Show Biz Users

Total of 84 important film theatres across the country, with a combined seating capacity of 202,-000, will be made available to king-size corporations, Government agencies or other interests who can adapt the facilities of the houses, all of which are equipped with large-screen television, for their purposes. The TV installations make for the key factor.

United Paramount Theatres, via an elaborate brochure sent to ad agencies, business units and educational groups, declared that theatre TV "combines the impact of dramatic visualization, the intimacy of a personal message, including two-way conversations, and the selectivity of a mailing list." With these features underscored, UPT states that theatres with TV could be used for sales meetings, product showings, stockholders meetings, group training, national conventions, etc.

As one of its series of studies of the principal media of mass communication, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) has just published a 100-page, worldwide analysis of news films. English adaptation is by James Beveridge, European rep of Canada's National Film Board.

In exploring the film as a vehicle for news, book states that the world's 100,000 theatres have a weekly attendance of 215,000,000, and most patrons see newsreels regularly. Holiday Span Ups Borscht Biz But '52 Seen Diving

The generally good weather prevailing over the long July 4 weekend helped resort operators recoup, to some extent, the losses during the long string of rainy weekends. In the Catskill borscht belt, hotelmen hit a temporary siege of prosperity. The large spots did turnaway business and the smaller hotels had comfortable houses. Complaints were at a minimum, businesswise, throughout the area.

However, the bonifaces feel that the season's total will be below that of last year. The desolate weekend biz of prior weeks is only one factor. It's felt that business conditions generally are not conducive to capacity operation.

The operators say this lethargic situation prevails during every presidential election year.

A bill prohibiting exhibition in educational institutions or use by Government agencies of motion pletures based on scripts written by persons with Communist or Communist-front connections was introduced in closing sessions of Congress by Sen. Revolutionary period through which the picture industry is now racing has made the crystal ball a rudimentary appurtenance on any executive's desk. Gazing into this handy instrument, it's easy to see considerable of the future in sharp focus and another hefty portion in at least vague outline.

On one point the crystal is quite clear. That is, as someone put it, "the picture business is not resigning from the world"—there will always be one. It may be on a somewhat different level, but there will be Hollywood to continue to make pictures and theatrest to play them.

That's not Pollyanna-ism, but hardneaded fact. So me where around 45,000,000 people a week are buying tickets to theatres in the United States. The long July 4 weekend is giving most key cities covered by VARIETY a real hypo this session although some localities were hurt, starting Monday (7), by the Republican national convention and interest in it via TV and radio. A few keys had the benefit of a break in the extended heat waves.

"Robin Hood" (RKO-Disney), which hinted unusual promise last stanza, soared to the first spot nationally. The adventure pic, made in England, ranged from fine to terrific in more than seven key cities covered by VARIETY. The ability of the film to hold so strong in its second N.Y. week tipped the type of draw because many straight-films were faring badily there.

"Scaramouche" (M-G), champistraight-films were faring badily there.

"Clash By Night" (RKO), near the top for several weeks, is winding in give fith while "Pat and Mike" (M-G), second a week ago, will be sixth. "Winning Team" (WB), a bit laggard previously, is showing more stamina this round and will take seventh money.

by purchasing Chromatic receivers at very little more than ordinary b-&w sets.

Dr. Ernest O. Laurence, who invented the tube, arrived in New York over the weekend for confabs with Paul Raibourn, v.p. of Paramount. Laurence and three other scientists own a 50% interest in the gadget. They headquarter in Chromatic's lab in Oakland, Cal.

NPA, in lifting the home color ban, laid down as a condition to manufacturers of sets regulations which other rainbowed TV outfits have admitted they can't meet. Par feels it can. Laurence's trip east for laying out of plans is the result.

NPA regulations provide that production of tint equipment not divert defense manpower, that it not delay production of electronic products for the military, that Government contracts not be refused because of color TV production and that no additional allotments of controlled materials will be required.

Chromatic tube is also applicable to large-screen theatre tele and Par's announcement may also include plans for production along that line.

NT would get a 50-year franchise on Telemeter, and would presumably branch out and buy the rights for additional towns if the initial trial proved successful. Telemeter's plan is to offer exhibs throughout the country first crack at buying the franchises, since it's figured (1) that as showmen they'd be logical operators of the devices, be logical operators of the devices, and (2) they'll require another biz to compensate for the dent Tele-meter could put in their theatre

Otherwise, Hope's at Liberty

Itinerary set for Rob Hope, who's just completed his assignment in Paramount's 'Road to Bail,' makes it clear that Hope's on the hop. He planed into Gotham from Hollywood last Wednesday (3), played a benefit (cerebral palsy) golf game in Monticello, N. Y., on Thursday, and another in Philadelphia Friday. At this point he squeezed in some promotional work for Par's "Son of Paleface" and then trekked to Chicago. This week he's, doing a radio-Ty commentator series on the Republican convention in Chi, then to Columbus, O., where he'll visit relatives. Hope follows this with a return to Chi, and coverage of the Democrats' conclave, He'll spend the week of July 27 in Denver (more golf), and then wing back to the Coast to guestar at a veterans' convention on Aug. 4. On the following day Hope heads for Gotham again and boards the United States Aug. 8 for a 10-day tour of France and Italy via auto. He has tentative plans to do a series of one-nighters commencing Aug. 23 in Norway, Sweden and Scotland. He'll be in London, beginning Aug. 30, for two weeks at the Palladium. A flight to Paris comes in about this point to meet Bing Crosby (more golf, presumably) and the two will jump back to London to play another charity tournament. Hope will leave England for the States Sept. 23.

UA Burned Over Pathe Suit; Preps Counter-Action

In the Pathe complaint entered last Thursday (3), it's asserted that UA failed to suit against Pathe. In the Pathe complaint entered last Thursday (3), it's asserted that UA failed to turn over distribution revenue covering the licensing abroad of Eagle Lion Classics pix prior to the take-over by UA of ELC. Latter was a Pathe subsid. Pathe claims $635,-000 is due to it via ELC as distributor of indie product and as outright owner of various pix.

UA acquired ELC on April 28, 1951. Pathe takes the position that deals for licensing pix in foreign territories were set prior to that date, but the distribution coin was forwarded to UA instead of Pathe. Latter wants its share of alleged monies owed it plus other amounts which it, Pathe, wants to send on to the indie producers as their divy.

Particularly vexing the UA-ites was timing of the action, plus fact that Pathe had UA's bank accounts attached in the amount of $230,000. Suit was filed at 4:45 n.m. July 3, on the holiday eve. Attachment factor was completely unnecessary, UA officials said, and Pathe must have been aware of this.

Scramble for Top Product in Philly GITED AS GAUSE Sees Record Advance Guarantees

Philadelphia, July 8.

Pressure for top product in downtown first-runs here has become so acute that bids are including advance guarantees of proportions unprecedented in this area. The U board will meet in New York on July 15 to elect Rackmil to the presidency and Nate J. Blumberg, present prexy, to the board chairmanship. Decca has voting control of U via its purchase of heavy blocks of stock from J. Arthur Rank and various U toppers.

All other candidates for the board were incumbents and were reelected at today's session. Only other business was the defeat of a proposal to hold the annual meetings in N. Y. in the future. This was advanced by Lewis D. Gilbert, minority shareowner, and management asked for a negative vote.

Total of 864,885 shares were represented at the meeting, the greatest amount in many years. John J. O'Connor, v.p., presided.

Among those present was Henry Sugar, Los Angeles investor who, it became known, owns 25,000 U common shares. When Gilbert asked about Blumberg's absence from the session, Sugar rose to say he had two "satisfactory" meetings with Blumberg and he could confirm that the prez is ill, as Gilbert had been told. Sugar held 12,900 shares as of the record date for the meeting but since increased his ownership.

To a question by Gilbert on Rank's status, O'Connor replied simply that Rank is no longer a stockholder. In answer to another query, he stated that U's reissue deal with Realart provides a greater amount of revenue than U could pick up if the corporation itself handled its reissues.

OF B.O. DECLINE

New York may be the first double-feature territory in the country to return to single bills, if a campaign now being staged by circuit operator Harry Brandt bears fruit. The vet theatre op has found even less support for his plan to throw out duals than for shuttering houses. He's found some indies ready to go along with him on closing down competitive theatres — and the idea of converting some of their weekly loss-takers must appear equally attractive to RKO and Loew's — but Brandt has found little sympathy for killing double features at this time.

Story line centers on the 1,200-mile trek up the Missouri from St. Louis to the Blackfoot Indian tribe in the northwest. Expedition is headed by French fur trader, Jourdonnais, excellently played by Steven Geray. The long trip is filled with the usual obstacles, warring Indians, treacherous white men, nature's forces, etc., but the expedition gets through, and Geray is able to trade with the Blackfoot tribe on friendly, profitable terms.

Femme interest is supplied by newcomer Elizabeth Threatt, who plays the daughter of a Blackfoot chief being returned to her tribe by Geray. Miss Threatt, a fashion model in New York, gets little to do but look pretty, an assignment she fulfills handily. Yarn also includes a romantic sidelight between Miss Threatt and Dewey Martin, who's cast as Douglas pard. Martin marries her and remains with the tribe when the others head back to St. Louis.

Troupe is uniformly excellent, with Arthur Hunnicutt a standout as a veteran sout and trader. Hank Worden is also effective as an Indian aide. Douglas turns in another tonfight thesping job and Buddy Baer is okay as Geray's right-hand man.

music and the star teaming of Lana Turner and Fernando Lamas. Its chances appear good.

Zingy, sophisticated humor marks the good-natured handling of a story that could easily have been old-hat, but treatment wisely avoids any burlesquing of the mythical kingdom basis of a plot that has a rich, and merry, widow being pursued under orders by adashing count, who must marry her to save his country from bank-reptcy.

Six songs are featured and all fall soothingly on the ear. Some are given the added value of visual treatment in production numbers. For romance, sweet or with sex, are "Girls, Girls," "Villa," "Night" and the title tune. For lively bounce, also with a full quota of s.a., are "Maxim's" and "Can." The latter is in the hotch groove, elegantly staged. "Maxim's" with lyrics by Paul Francis Webster, is a spirited number, getting the full treatment of girls. Title number is backed by gracefully waltzing couples and beautiful costuming and colors. Most of the vocal chores fall to Lamas and his voice comes over easily and with appeal. He and Miss Turner also are featured in the waltz number and both could be better dancers. Six songs are featured and all fall soothingly on the ear. Miss Turner is gowned to a fetching fare-thee-well as the merry widow lured back to the country of her late husband under belief he is to be honored. She falls easily into the role's demands, and adds her own brand of punch to the romantic passages with Lamas, the pursuing count who is acting under orders of Thomas Gomez, king of the bankrupt Marshovia. Lamas makes a colorful romantic picture in his costumed character. At the same time he keeps it believeably within reason. Screenplay by Sonya Levien and William Ludwig, and Curtis Bernhard's direction, are generously endowed with humor, without overlooking the main objective of romance. Richard Haydn is the high-scorer for chuckles as Baron Popoff, whose duty it is to bring the widow and the count together in Paris. Not far behind him, though, are Una Merkel, as the widow's travelling companion; Gomez and John Abbott, the Marshovian Ambassador.

There's a lot of sly sophistication in a Paris police station scene between Lamas and Marcel Dalio while the former is looking for a girl whom he knows as Fifi, but whom is actually the merry widow. Sujata shows up in the "Villa" number as the gypsy dancer being woode by Lamas. Additional ferme appeal comes from Lisa-Ferraday as one of the Maxim's beauties. Others contribute

Carpenter, a comparative new-comer, appears ideally cast as Pvt. Floyd Hilston, the lion's master. He creates the illusion of having had the beast as a pet and playmate since a boy, being the slightly dumb lad who is too busy with the snimal to take much note of the glamorous Janet Leigh. Even so, a well-defined, if slight, romance is developed between the two, with the girl finally being won over to his belief that Fagan is more than a dumb beast. She's effective as the singer, who visits an Army camp as an entertainer.

The sergeant whom Wynn portrays is more believable because played with restraint. With one of pic's top performances, Wynn gets a full quota of laughs as the baffied non-com. Parley Baer, as the tough animal trainer, makes almost a bit part standout. Wilton Graff is excellent as the colonel, while support is topped by Richard Anderson and Ellen Corby.

Enough plot complications are introduced to take care of several programmers of this type, but they principally boil' down to Charles Starrett's efforts to prevent the murder of a young girl by crooked relatives who want to gain control of her gold mine. Script has the appearance of having been written to order to tie together a series of unrelated sequences, some laid in the story's current period and others flashing back into earlier times. The mixing of footage may be economical, but it's not good motion picture making.

Script, direction and playing plod through 70 minutes of a plot that finds a miner, loaded with gold, and a girl fleeing across Death Valley while pursued by three Arabs mounted on camels. The camels and Arabs were left-overs from those imported by the Government at the time it was figured the hump-backed mounts would be the solution to domestic desert travel.

Wayne Morris and Virginia Grey are the couple being chased. Pursuers are George Tobias, Anthony Caruso and John Doucette, the Arabian heavies. Pursuit and the talk that ensues is never believably staged, nor does it carry much interest. During the lengthy chase, story hax the heavies mistaken by Mission Indians as the Three Wise Men during a Christmas Eve ceremony, but the same redskins aid the couple the next day to wipe out the chasers.

George Blair gave pedestrian direction to the Lindsley Parsons production, on which Morris and Ace Herman served as associate producers. The W. Scott Darling script from the novel by Kenneth Perkins never comes to life. Camera work by William Sickner is very good in showing off outdoor scenery.

Eastern Craft Workers Busy Despite Season; Lab Technicians Sole Sad Note OF PROCESS GEAR

Despite a current slight seasonal slump, generally peak employment is being maintained by eastern film craft workers. The usual hot weather doldrum period hasn't brought any unemployment. With the end of vacation stanzas and formulation of plans for fall production, eastern producers—mainly vidipx. of plans for rail production, easiern producers—mainly vidpix, commercial, educational and documentary filmmakers—are expected to move into high gear and their demands for film technicians and directors are seen reaching a new height.

As result of the contemplated fall activity, some craft unions have indicated that it may be necessary to open their rosters to new members. Launching of a move for construction of a super-vidfilm studio in Manhattan is looked upon by union officials as another plus factor pointing to steady film work in the future. Union execs generally discounted reports of vidpix producers moving out of New York because of the high labor costs in Gotham.

IATSE, which already dominates the film and legit field, has been scrutinizing the tele operation for several years and recently established a separate radio and television department. Original plan for entry into tele called for the organization of projectionists and others who worked behind the cameras. However, plan has been changed and IA has indicated that it will go after all technicians working in video. In tele, the IA intends to organize on an overall basis instead of on the craft system it follows in films and legit.

Reason for the switch is that the Alliance has been on the short end of several National Labor Relations Board decisions involving jurisdiction in the tele field. Although it controlled the video studio projectionists, it found that it was out.

Nothing "Sneak"

The "previews" make for some odd advertising on the final day of the run of the previous picture. There's certainly nothing "sneak" about them. Since the new pic is obviously the attraction, there's, no point plugging the old one.

As a result of the manner in which the "previews" developed, it has become 'established practice that the pic going out is credited with all receipts for the last day, and the incoming one gets no rental. SEG BEEF ON NON-UNION HIRING FOR PAR'S 'PONY'

Hollywood, July 8,
Screen Extras Guild filed a protest with the AFL Film Council against hiring of non-union extras for work in Nat Holt's "Pony Express" (Paramount), on location near Kanab, Utah. SEG has about 50 members in that town and their wage schedule calls for $18.50 daily for general work and $25 for riding.

Complaint is that they were offered $10 and $15 for work in the two classifications. When they turned down the offer, it's claimed, company hired non-union townspeople.

French Studios Turning Out 54 Pix In '52 But Few Look Okay for U.S.

Paris, July 2.

There were 48 pix started in French studios from Jan. 1 to June 25 this year. The next few weeks will see more put on the digor, bringing the total to 54 and making the most prolific production year since the war. This is paradoxical because the French lave cried crisis: all year, and claimed this is the lowpoint in the wavery history of French film production.

The actual fact is that the lower of the production.

The actual fact is that the large number of pix doesn't necessarily mean good films or top boxoffice. One of the difficulties here has been the slow amortization of pix. Production costs are up and the public is shopping for better films before plunking down $1 at the cinema window. The French costumer "Fanfan La Tulipe," has racked up big coin while the Franco-Italo, "The Little World of Don Camillo," is now cleaning up here in spite of the hot weather.

This French backlog has a flock camillo. Is now cleaning up nere in spite of the hot weather. This French backlog has a flock of low budget pix among them that are strictly for the home trade. There are some big ones being held for fall release some of which have the earmarks of being okay for the U. S. "Mad Girl of Dublin" (Hoche), the Yves Allegret pic, shot in English and French versions, concerns the Irish rebellions and its effect on a sensitive young girl. This holds promise for art houses. Maurice Cloche has we und up his "Remoyed From the Living," a tirade against prison conditions and the stigmatizing of ex-cons. Downbeat aspects may militate against his for the American magnet.

ket. Christian-Jaque has finished his clissection of the female in "Adorable Creatures," a comedy-drama on the perfidy of the female. It sports such names as Edwige Feuillere. Martine Carol, Marllyn Buferd, Renee Faure, Gina Lollobrigida and Daniel Gelin. These names should help it in the U. S. Rene Clair has completed "Beauties Of the Night" (Franco-London) which also looks into the mysterious female. This too has a highpowered cast with Gerard Philipe, Martine Carol, Gina Lollobrigida, and Marilyn Bussert. Marcel Pagliero has wound up "The Respectful Prostitute," based on the Jean-Paul Sartre legiter, which may appeal to arty houses.

The big Hoche Technicolor Franco-Italian coproduction, "The Golden Carriage," has been finished by Jean Renoir in Italy, being in English and Italian. H. G. Clouzot is winding up his long pic on fear and its consequences called, "The Wages of Fear." Of the 62 French pix in the current backlog, these are the most interesting.

'Innocents' Looms As New London Success

New London Success

London, July 8.

Outstanding direction by Peter Glenville and a superh cast headed by Flora Robson, makes "The Innocents" the most eerie thriller to hit the West End in some time. The spine-chilling atmosphere is subtly verated by the direction and aided by the excellent setting designed by Jo Mielziner. Play, which is presented by Stephen Mitchell, preemed at Her Majesty's last Thursday (3) and received powerful audience reception. Morning newsyaper crix were almost unanimous in praise and chances of success seem generally good.

Apart from Miss Robson's distinguished portrayal of the governess, the two child roles are impecably played' by Carol Wolveridge and Jeremy Spenser. The former, a 12-year-old schoolgirl, had never previously appeared on the stage. Fourth role was finely filled by Barbara Everest.

Sherek Players brought "The Trap" to the Duke of York's July 1 after a provincial tryout and a change of cast. Coinciding with the hottest night of the year, this domestic triangle of the early ibsen type adapted by Ashley Dukes from the German of Ferdinand Bruckner proved over-weighty for the season.

Full praise goes to Mai Zettering and Herbert Lom for their acting. The play was warmly received, but the outlook is not bright under present conditions.

British Producers Try To Speed Payments From Eady Pool to Save Coin

London, July 8.

British producers are taking the initiative in endeavoring to speed up payments from the Eady pool, and thus prevent large sums lying idle in the bank earning nominal interest while they are paying high bank charges to finance production.

At meeting of the Board of the British Film Production Fund, the company which administers the levy, the producer nominees put forward a proposal that there should be a monthly distribution instead of the present quarterly payments. Subsequently, Sir Henry L. French, director general of the British Film Producers Assn., said that the prospect of this being agreed on by the other trade associations was very good.

Since the extension of the Eady fund, there have been frequent occasions when around $3,000,000 has been lying in the bank awalting distribution. Producers have for casions when around $3,000,000 has been lying in the bank awalting distribution. Producers have for some months been agitating for creation of machinery which would enable them to grab their share with less delay. If monthly payments are agreed on, the fund float would be reduced to a minimum with regular distributions amounting to about $750,000.

From the exhibitor side of the fund directorate has come a request for detailed information of payments from the fund in respect to individual productions and com-payments from the tunt in respect to individual productions and com-panies. It is felt in producer circles that such a procedure would con-travene the normal security of

With the hottest weekend in two years and with the mercury holding in the 80's, the boxoffice wilted this past session. With the exception of "Iyvanhoe" and "Quo Vadis," ace theatres were having an exceptionally lean period and weekend grosses were well below average for this time of year.

At the Empire, "Ivanhoe" stood up to the rising thermometer in spectacular style to click with a resounding $19,800 for its second week, holding up during the third weekend with a powerful $9,500. Statement by reps of Sir Alexander Korda that he had received from James Mason in settlement of their suit the entire amount advanced the actor ($50,000), and Mason's assertion that he had settled for only $40,000 are paradoxically both correct. Actually, Mason is settling for even less. Gimmick is that both payments were figured in sterling and the pound is now worth only $2.80, as against $4 when Korda advanced the coim. Korda gave the actor £12,500 and is getting back £12,500—so he's square. Mason has profited, however, by devaluation. It is only costing him the equivalent of about $35,000 to give back the money now. Mason is paying Sir Alex the coin in sterling out of residuals of some of his English-made pix.

Money was given Mason on his arrival in the U. S. in 1947 as an advance against a film to be made for Korda. Producer complained, however, that Mason rejected every story offered, and so went to court to get his money-back. Mason settled just as the suit was to go to trial. They have enjoyed arbitrary powers for so long that they now refuse to let go of them, even in the face of two decisions by the Supreme Court. . . . Everything the Supreme Court has said and done in its two recent decisions on freedom of the movies has indicated clearly that the law under which the bureau of licenses plans to continue to regulate films here is patently unconstitutional."

TM circuit, determine on times, etc., in his area. That aspect is very indefinite, however, since Telemeter heads David Loew and Carl Leserman admit that they still ad libbing completely us they see how details work out.

Problem with the NT experiment, as well as that of Palm Springs, is the obtaining of pix for the trial. It is assumed that Paramount will help out on that score because of its interest in the device.

Palm Springs trial involves more than just the Telemeter. It includes a special antenna which the company has erected on a mountain top to bring video signals from Los Angeles, 90 miles away. There are also circuits from the mountain peak to a booster station in town and to the local theatre, from which pix will emanate, and from there into each home with a Telemeter. Regular TV programs from L. A. will start going into the town via the special antenna in September, the plan being to give the natives four or five months to get used to tele itself before trying the pay-as-you-see angle. see angle see angle.

The Palm Springs hookup will cost about $500,000 in all. The local exhib is also the franchise-holder there. A similar setup for providing Telemeter shows by wire to the 2,000,000 sets in New York would cost about $60,000,000, it's figured, so Telemeter in big towns will obviously have to wait for Federal Communications Commission approval of a system whereby sion approval of a system whereby the programs can be transmitted the programs can be transmitted via ether.

Aside from the pay-as-you-see, Telemeter is planning to go into the community antenna biz for areas that cannot now receive video. One reason is the experience and knowhew derived from development of the antenna for Palm Springs; another is that it appears likely to be profitable, and, third, Telemeter wants to be assured of room for its channel on these antenna devices.

About $700,000 has been sunk into development of Telemeter, so far. Par has provided $350,000 of that and Loew and Leserman the rest. Of the latter sum, it's mostly Loew's personal coin. There have been no bank loans or other out-

Agreement is unanimous among union toppers that the employment upheat is due mainly to telepix production, encompassing both commercials and shows. According to labor officials, vidpix activity is making the difference between peak and unsteady employment. Part of the upbeat is also attributed to increase in commercial and educational fillm-making.

As a result of some of these elections, the IA contends that some of its projectionists were forced to join other unions.

In drawing an analogy with the entry of boothmen into the union in 1908, the IA official bulletin notes that just as film projection was a "logical extension of traditional stagecraft," so is the video field, "Moving pleture projection and other crafts of the Alliance now are expanding from the theatres to the television studios; and once again steps to protect our jurisdiction are of vital concern," the bulletin points out.

It's figured that the confab will also weigh the problem of mounting unemployment among projectionists, a situation being caused by the closing down of theatres. What action the union will take has not been indicated, but the general feeling is that it will resist any move on the part of exhibs to bring about pay slices or reductions in the number of men running the booths.

Confab will be preceded by a week-long meeting of the general exec board, beginning on July 28. Prior to the main confab there will be a series of palavers of each of the 14 districts on Aug. 1-3.

handling negotiations for the Americans, with industry reps sitting in as advisers and observers. Talks actually are on a governmental level, the French end being handled by reps of the Finance Ministry. American industryites attending the most recent series of huddles were Fayette W. Allport, who heads the London office of the Motion Picture Assn. of America; Eugene Van Dee, of the Rome office, and Alfred W. Crown, sales chief for Samuel Goldwyn Productions, who has been representing the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

Johnston, prexy of the MPAA, and McCarthy, director of the group's international division, participated in the original talks with the French end of April, with Crown also on hand at that time. That conclave came to naught when a number of American majors, SIMPP and the State Dept. all refused to go along on a plan suggested at that time by which U. S. companies would pay a suich the trench producers in order to lift the quantity of imports and remittances.

U. S. companies would pay a subsidy to French producers in order to lift the quantity of imports and remittances.

After that fell through, Allport, Van Dee and Crown picked up negotiations for the Americans. With State Dept, backing, they walked out on talks last week. It's expected that huddles will be resumed in the next week or so. It appeared fairly certain yesterday (Tues.) that McCarthy and Mulvey would go to Paris for the talks, with Johnston's attendance a possibility.

Mulvey, whose presence at French and British negotiating meetings in past years has given considerable strength to the U. S. team, has taken part only indirectly in the current series of Paris powwows. Possibility of his going over for first-hand participation reportedly will be discussed at a session today (Wed.) of, the eastern distribution committee (of which he's chairman) of SIMPP. The disputed subsidy matter has been somewhat lost in the welter of other developments, with the Americans asking unlimited imports and remittances against the Paris demand for a cut to 90 pix. As things stand now, however, still in the backwash of the talks is a Paris request that the Americans give some aid to French producers in the way of helping sale and publicity of their pix in the U. S.

Since 1946 when the filmeries turned out 30 tinted features, there has been more than a 200% increase in the use of color. In 1951, 103 color films were produced and indications are that there will be a considerable upbeat when the final 1952 totals are added up. Idleness of some of the b&w equipment has forced some labs to shift to the processing of 16m film, field in which some expansion has been noted.

Decline in the handling of b&w footage is best illustrated in the experience of one lab whose processing work has dropped from 2,000,000 feet per year to 750,000 feet. The most ardent of the colorites are predicting that within five years one major eastern lab will be able to handle all of Hollywood's

The prophesies of the glass gadget on the new mold that this re-gearing vill bring about are its most interesting. But, first, one more word on that "resigning from the world" business. But, to get back to the soothsayer's ball, here in 1-2-3 order are what's to be seen in it—some of it clear, some of it not so clear, but all of it in at least hazy outline:

1. Some 5,000 fewer theatres in the U. S. Gone will be the fringe theatres, outmoded by either their age or neighborhood population shifts. Plenty of the big firstruns, with their heavy overhead, will also disappear. There will be a "selection of the fittest"—those houses that because of location or houses that because of location or a "selection of the fittest"—those houses that because of location or design are in best position to operate profitably will continue.

2. Drive-ins will continue to flourish and provide an increasing proportion of U. S. theatre income. They are already producing almost 20% of the total theatre take to the distribs and appear to have found a solid place for themselves, filling a demand by the public on wheels and with a sitter problem for taking care of its young 'uns.

3. Admission prices will be a lot lewer. Films are a mass-audience business, built on the proposition of giving the mostest for the leastest in the way of entertainment. When prices got into big numbers, biz began to slip. Now it will take some time to get the ticket tap down—and then to re-educate audiences to the fact it is again within reason for family attendance.

4. Hollywood will be making

4. Hollywood will be making 4. Hollywood will be making fewer pictures for theatres. There will be the big ones and there will be the little ones—and the in-betweeners will have disappeared. They'll even be unprofitable in the new shape of things, and turning them out merely to absorb studio overhead will prove even less likely to be economic than it has already.

Bir Studies Pasca

absorb studio overhead will prove even less likely to be economic than it has already.

Big Studios Passe

5. To meet 'the overhead problem, big studios, each operated by an individual company, may become passe. Instead, two, three or four of the best of the present lots will be sold to a holding company or put on a co-op basis and major producers will use space as they need it, just as indies do now. That will end the need for mass production merely to absorb overhead and keep staffs together.

6. Executive and star salaries will be slashed. And instead of stiff weekly or per-ple stipends to players and creative talent, they'll be on a participating basis, even on major lots '20th-Fox is doing it already). This will mean fewer prima donnas and fewer displays of temperament, since everyone will have an immediate stake in the picture. It's another means of bringing down that murderous weekly overhead that results in mass-production. And the whole move regarding salaries of execs and talent is a reflection again of the retooling for a 45,000,000-admissions-per-week biz.

7. All stucios, big and small alike, will be turning out half-hour telepix. Some of the same stars will be in their features as in their vidfilms. As a matter of fact, some of these stars will have been built by their popularity in the TV product. Studios that do not have to amalgamate their physical resources (as mentioned in No. 5 above) will be those that are able to absorb much of their overhead via the vidpix producton. Lots given up by companies that amalgamate facilities will be snapped up by the video producers.

8. Distribution will be stream-

11. Foggy in the crystal ball, but definitely there, is elimination of film delivery to each house, with theatres receiving their programs over the air from some central point.

Trans-Lux, and by other smaller houses even before the Fox entered the plcture.

William Goldman is the only important midtown operator who's still fighting bidding, refusing to go into it to feed his first-run Goldman, Randolph and Midtown. He reportedly does bid; however, at the nabe Esquire.

Goldman, as a matter of fact, has a suit pending against Par because of the abandonment of product-splitting arrangements. Observers here figure the exhib's suit is considerably weakened by the high Fox guarantees of "Jacks" and "Paleface," since they justify Par's contention that it can get and is entitled to higher prices than under the former split.

Smaller houses really have been most responsible for high guarantees that are prevalent, since they've proved they can get plenty of film rental for distribs via long runs. The 625-seat Arcadia, for instance, has guaranteed Metro $25,000 for "Scaramouche" and even the 500-seat Studio, an art house, is now going into the market for major first-run product and offering substantial front money.

Trans-Lux, however, has been the principal proof of the coin to be thrown off by sureseaters. Par last year got $104,000 out of a 22-week run of "Detective Story"—the highest the distrib ever received from a Philly first-run except possibility on some of its DeMille specials. T-L has just bought 20th's "Diplomatic Courier" for a minimum 10-week engagement and a guarantee of $10,000.

Subsequently it's expected that the buying of product will be assigned to the theatre management headed by Dave Katz.

Although the divorcement from 20th-Fox has yet to be formally completed—some legal technicalities remain to be cleared—20th is now called upon to sell its pix to all theatres on a competitive basis. This has the effect of divorcement so far as the Roxy's operations are concerned.

Ohio's censorship statute, much broader than that of New York, permits the board to nix a pic "if the film is not of a moral, educational or amusing and harmles character." Film, okayed by the New York censor board, has already played dates in the Empire State.

MPAA's contest is aimed at eliminating the prior-restraint of newsreels on the ground that it violates the Constitutional guarantees of free press and speech. Ohio is one of the few states that requires the reels to have the censor's olway. Plan of the MPAA to test the legality of the Buckeye statute is to have several exhibs show newsreels without submitting the footage in advance to the Ohio board for approval. MPAA is currently lining up the exhibs and expects to announce shortly the date for the showing of the uncensored newsreels. Further moves will depend on the action taken by the Ohio censorship body.

This new vidfilm series, which bowed in on NBC-TV Tuesday night (1) as a 13-week replacement for "Fireside Theatre," rates more than this summer filler business. Well cast and directed, excellently produced and neatly scripted, it's one of the better telepix shows to be introduced to network viewers in recent months. Procter & Gamble is presently filming other "Fireside" stanzas for that show's return in the fall, but for any other bankroller looking for a good vidfilm series, "Boss Lady" may fill the bill.

Show has Lynn Barl for marquee value, a factor which apparently has become a must for any national advertiser wishing to attract viewers in the sticks to his product. Miss Barl, who had a slight fling at live video several summers ago on another summer replacement, scored solidly as a beauteous young business exec, who couldn't find a general manager to keep his mind on business and not on her and who also had to keep her bumbling father, chairman of her board, from attempting to run the biz. Situation comedy available is easily apparent and scripter Robert Mann took good advantage of it on the initialer.

Every man has his own particular moment of glory before his time runs out, and while the degree of that moment may vary it's always of utmost importance to the one involved. This is the theme of George and Gertrude Fass' "Moment of Glory," and it's excellently presented in a touching drama given bright, light overtones of humor.

Forrest Taylor is the Spanish-American war vet whose days are near an end—long, empty days insofar as glory is concerned. But his moment of glory is near—he's to lead the Fourth of July parade in his hometown and this is his hour. At the last minute a muchlionized general arrives for a visit in his hometown, and it's decided he should lead the parade. Disappointment sends the old man to bed, sick at heart.

But his grandson goes to the general, tells him the story, and the brass understands the situation immediately, and bows out as parade leader. By this time, however, the old man is too ill to lead the parade at the vets' home to build him before the townspeople, thereby giving him his moment of glory. The fact most of the happenings were telegraphed long beforehand does not deter from end result of its being a heart-waarming half hour.

Forrest Taylor is fine as the old vet. Joel Davis turns in a good job as his grandson, and Thomas Browne Henry is effective as the general with a rich sense of humor. Mary Field is competent as the daughter.

tion Dick Merriwell-Rover Boy is on the juvenile rather than adult level.

Initial yarn had Nelson steal into Romania to silence an American Communist propagandist spieling on Radio Bucharest. The Romanian intelligence allowed him to enter, hoping to catch Nelson, but weren't a match for Yankee derring-do. He overpowered a Russian officer, donned his uniform, outwitted a Romanian lady lieutenant, tricked and bullied his way into the radio station and abducted the propagandist. Then, as three successive groups of Romanian soldiers fired rifles and tomny guns at him at almost point-blank range, he made his way across the Yugoslav border, prodding his captive in front of him.

Romanians were portrayed as such cowed, impotent pushovers that suspense was weak and realism lost. Depiction of life behind the Iron Curtain was heavy-handed and cliched, marring what drama the adventure tale might have had. Attempts at humor, such as Nelson's forcing Comrade Smith, the propagandist, to bite into a record and "eat his words," were out of place.

Nelson, who has done considerable live tele (and who is in "Moon Is Blue" on Broadway), cuts a dashing figure, but gives the, heroics a smug and cute quality. Production-wise, the telefilm is above average, and uses a good amount of location shooting (a railroad station, front of a radio studio, jeep-chase on the road, etc.). Commercials for Cavaller, kingsize cigaret, stress the extra length and mildness theme.

This vidfilm series underscores the economy me as ures being adopted by television sponsors to take advantage of rate discounts on the networks by sticking through the summer. Titled "Footlights Theatre," the series includes half-hour pix aired previously on video under different labels. Situation might be okay for viewers if the reissues were of top quality, but "Footlight," judging from the initialer (4), has nothing in it to lure setsiders to tune in a second time.

Preem starred Victor Jory in a wordy, uninteresting yarn about the methods undertaken by a professor in an "honor" school to de-

Alix Talton as the fiancee. Louise Currie is convincing as the frustrated femme, and Robert Paige okay in the male lead. Frank Wisbar's direction is off on this one.

A crudely put together variety program localed in Paris, "Holiday chiefly by its absence. Only saving grace in this made-in-Paris pic are a few acts tossed into the halfhour without any semblance of continuity, but managing nevertheless to be entertaining strictly on their own.

Edith Piaf's rich warbling of "Hymn of Love," first in French, then in English, is the sole mark of distinction, but that comes at the finale when most of the viewers have long since faded away.
Dolores Gray, as the American girl

Acts are thrown in without any intro, no cohesion, incongruously giving a professional touch to a basically amateurish operation. Four fat blurbs by Thrifty Drug didn't help matters. Technical work by the French crew is subnar.

"Zululand." would cost $1,000,000 if anybody wanted to buy it, according to NBC execs.

Web, which envisages the library as a potentially lucrative new source of revenue, has set up a price scale covering leasing of the film to vidfilm producers; producers of motion picture and TV commercials, and producers of theatrical pix. Minimum charge to any client is $20, which doesn't include processing charges. On any order exceeding that, a vidfilm producer is to be charged 7c per foot (black-and-white), or 10c for a fine grain master positive and 15c for a dupe negative. On film usable without extra processing, clients are to be charged $1 per 35m foot, or $2.50 per 16m foot. Producers of TV commercials are charged $2.50 per foot of 35m stock, or $6.25 for 10m, and producers of theatrical films are charged $2.50 per foot of 35m, or $12.50 for 10m.

Library's index contains 2,200 main subjects, each of which is catalogued under various subheadings. Unit was established by the web in 1936, and still contains footage lensed for NBC's pioneer TV shows in those days. Current total of 15,000,000 feet is being added to at the rate of about 50,000 feet weekly, or some 2,500,000 feet each year. Film comes mostly from NBC's cameramen, stationed throughout the world, and from film lensed by the web for special shows or for inclusion in live shows.

Hollywood, July 8.

Because of various complex factors unfavorable to such a move, major motion picture studios may never sell their backlog of old pix to television, it's predicted here by Toby Anguish, one of Hollywood's earliest pix-to-TV distributors. Anguish has stopped handling features because, he asserts, the demand for film is far less than the supply, result being the prices on pix for TV are rapidly shrinking. Another pix-to-TV distributor, Robert L. Lippert, echoed the latter observation recently.

Anguish declares that when and Anguish declares that when and if the majors cull their backlogs for consideration of releasing films to television, it's only logical to assume the better pix will be reissued theatrically, while lesser pix which might be released would only crowd a market already surfeited.

One of Hollywood's pioneer distributors of pix-to-TV, Angulsh was the first to bring British pix to the telescreens. One of the first to sell blocks to pix to stations across the country, he agented sales of Bill (Hopalong Cassidy) Boyd's pix to video when Hoppy was hottest, and is reported to have reaped a hefty profit from those negotiations. His ankling of the field, where he made his first real mark, is the first sumove by a top tele distributor.

Anguish contends another factor which will deter the majors from selling their old pix to video is that

Convention Is Mother of Invention: Nets Devise 'Buck Rogers' Gimmicks

Chicago, July 8. Interesting angle of this year's politics-by-television is unusual concentration on gadgets and video gimmicks. Each of the major networks has been secretly developing new devices for speedier, smoother coverage, with each proudly boasting exclusives in the engineering field. Just how long these devices will remain exclusive, or to what extent they overlap and duplicate each other, the ensuing days of the Big Show at Chicago's International Amphiteatre will tell.

NBC is debuting four new gadgets:

1. A walkie-talkie-lookie, also tabbed a "creepie-peepie." This is a new type of portable camera and transmitter, designed to get into places impossible to reach by the more bulky type of standard equipment.

2. Crash Truck—This 40-passenger white studio-on-wheels is already a familiar part of the convention scene. Impressive in size and appearance, it is an air-conditioned traveling studio manned by a staff of 11, plus commentators from the NBC staff, who work on a rotating basis. Truck has its own generating plant, short wave radio, police pickup, etc. It will add breadth and mobility to the medium.

and breadth and modifies to the medium.

3. Hot developer for film—Built for NBC by two Massachusetts Institute of Technology professors, this is said to be capable of developing 100 feet of film in eight seconds, so that the reel can be spliced and ready for the screen in less than 10 minutes. Eventually, this is to be used in the crash truck. Initial test of the new device was on the day of Eisenhower's arrival, when over 200 feet of film for video newsreels was developed in less than half a minute.

This permits a completely flexible type of superimposed picture which can be expanded to any size, and can handle two subjects at a time on the viewer's screen without interrupting the running story from the convention floor, CBS engineers claim that they have made possible a montage affect whereby three stories can appear simultaneously on the TV screen, with a fine white line dividing one from the other.

Tele Benefits as Daily Photogs Get GOP Heave

Chicago, July 8.
Although generally played down, newspaper photogs were also chased out of the hearing rooms by the Republican national committee's ruling barring radio and TV equipment from the contested delegations sessions during the delegations sessions during the opening rounds of the GOP convention. This too, worked to teevee's advantage of the publicity front.

Squeezed out of the chambers, the daily lensmen were left with little to do but take pot shots of the dislodged radio and TV lads. Beware! Live TV
Chicago, July 8.
An official acknowledgement of the power of the TV screen was made by the Republican National Committee in the form of a letter alerting delegates to the omnipotent eye of the video camera. Each delegate was warned that the eyes of the country are upon him, and that the party expected decorum and dignity. Such offenses of '48 as drinking beer on floor of the convention, reading newspapers during the sessions, and general rowdyism and bad manners were warned against.

WOR-TV Extends Repeat Plan With Variety Show Add

Repeat performance concept of On Educ'l TV Next Month WOR-TV, N. Y., in which the same play is beamed cross-the-board for five showings, is being extended. Ahead of "Broadway TV Theatre," the program which presents former legit plays in minute versions at 7:30 p.m., WOR-TV will insert a 60-minute musical variety show at 6:30 p.m., sometime in August.

The concept is to give viewers a' solid, two-and-a-half hours of a night out at the theatre. Thus, on any of five nights of the week a family will be able to get the big spread on the local station. Or viewers could catch the variety show on one night and the drama on another. on another.

Idea for the new repeat stanza came from Warren Wade, who produces "Broadway," and he will also handle the reins on the variety layout. Format has not yet been set, but the airer will include singers, instrumental soloists, a comic, etc. Fact that shows are repeated, cutting down on rehearsal time and getting the five performances for three times the one-shot rate (according to the Television Authority Code), will enable the outlet to get a bigger talent outlay for the weekly nut.

Chi Convention Chatter

Chicago, July 8.

Race for cuffo talent is on, with groups vying with each other to lure audience bait in form of name talent... Most successful in preliminary stages was GOP Women's Committee, which added to the free soft drinks, TV receivers and easy chairs in its tower retreat atop the Conrad Hilton such musical groups as Arthur Godfrey's Vagabonds and a choir of spiritual singers from the current "Porgy and Bess"... Most elaborate set up being run by Eisenhower partisans, who have leased the Blackstone legit for free shows on a three-a-day schedule, headlining top politicos and highly-touted "stage, screen and TV stars"... Pre-convention show biz names confined to recruits from local yaude and nitery boards, with such acts as Ben Yost's Guards, comic Bert Lynn and Arren and Broderick giving their all for Ike... The red-white-and-blue identification buttons worn by ABC staffers The red-white-and-blue identification buttons worn by ABC staffers are arousing much comment from bystanders, who seem puzzled by the company letters... Slickest trick was pulled by local NBC reps who hired vacationing Chicago cops to act as drivers and messengers... Something new has been added to the usual earsplitting fanfare of campaign tunes and state songs—a small, all-electronic organ at the International Ampitheatre, with the volume of 3,000 radio receivers ... Straight from the primitive technique of show biz is the round-the-clock Elsenhower calliope and the live Taft elephant... Over 800 people crowded into the Studebaker Theatre to watch "Meet the Press" telecast Sunday afternoon... And such wily news-hens as Ruth Montgomery of the New York Daily News are piling up prestige and extra coin with one and two stints per day on the numerous TV interview shows.

Chi Highlights & Sidelights

Unique among the TV stations covering the national conventions is Paramount's KTLA in Los Angeles. Station pacted its own sponsor for complete convention coverage of both the Republican and Democonclaves.

It is buying the regular pooled feed of the convention and wiring it to L.A., where the local sponsorship messages are cut in on behalf of Richfield Oil, which is paying the tab.

Richfield Oil, which is paying the tab.

However, just like the nationwide nets, KTLA stands to lose a substantial fortune if the conventions should run beyond the minimum scheduled periods. Richfield is paying a flat fee for the entire coverage of the two conventions, whether they go the minimum four days or whether they get into a snarl and run overtime by a day or two, or more. In that event, KTLA would be required to cancel out regular commercial shows, paying the pre-emption fees. Additionally, it would bear the expense of added wire tolls, plus the expense of maintaining people in Chicago.

RADIO NO 'SHRINKING VIOLET'

Despite the hubbub and drumbeating for television, sound radio is refusing to act the shrinking violet in this Republican convention. It is covering the affair more aggressively and more expensively than ever before.

Large and small stations alike are competing for the best possible service for their clients and some are covering as thoroughly as though they were miniature networks.

Leading the parade are the powerful clear-channel stations

The Clear Channel Broadcast Service, under Ward L. Qusaal, is established here with a high-powered staff offering tapes and spot feed, roving reporter service on the convention floor, air conditioned interview rooms, etc., to the 15 stations pro-rating the cost.

Stations are KFI, L.A.; WSM, Nashville; WLW, Cincinnati; WSB, Atlanta; WJR, Detroit; WGN, Chicago; WBAP, Fort Worth; WFA, Dallas; WOAI, San Antonio; WWL, New Orleans; WLS, Chicago; WHO, Des Moines; WHAM, Rochester; WCAU, Philadelphia; and WHAS, Louisville.

Engineering service is supplied for all members through Thomas L. Howe, chief engineer for WLS, and Carl J, Meyers, chief engineer for WGN, both Chicago host stations.

WGN, WJR and WLS have also pooled three mobile units for roving reporters at the convention.

Glear Channel Broadcasting Service is also coming to the aid of other indie stations covering the convention. Without charge, it is providing its convention feed for the non-commercial FM outlet, WFJL, owned by the Catholic diocese in Chicago, which wants only certain specialized portions of the coverage.

When another indie station had line trouble, the service cut the station in with a live feed of first day convention activities. Through WFAA, the Texas Quality Network, not covering the convention, is getting the convention program. Beneficiaries of this service include KRS, Corpus Christi; KGNC, Amarillo; and KPRC, Houston.

WLW has brought along its own crew of eight newsmen and two engineers under Bill Bobinson to cover its AM and TV outlets. Big station is doing several shows daily, plus short cut-ins of news highlights.

WINS REPORTS FOR BASEBALL FANS

New York's WINS is represented here by prexy Harry Folts, John Bosman, its news director; Josephine Halpin, women's commentator; and Lew Fisher. Station is buying the pooled feed from the convention floor and feeding out news and color shots in several shows.

One interesting gimmick is a special news coverage for baseball fans. In between the odd-numbered innings, one-minute news spots are cut in on the Yankee games. This means that the fans get the highlights without interfering with their enjoyment of the baseball games. Plan is to provide longer reports on the Yankee ballgame broadcasts, only where there is news of special significance:

KTRH'S TEXAS ANGLES

KTRH, CBS outlet in Houston, is represented here by Lester A. Mullin, Tom Jacobs and Everett Collier. Station is taking regular national convention coverage from CBS and receiving special reports on the doings of the Texas delegation, complete with wired interviews, from its staffers here. There is a live show nightly on the doings of the delegation.

DELEGATES DOUBLE AS STRINGERS

One outfit doing a substantial job is Magnecord, which is monitoring the entire convention. It sells bits of this to small stations with special interests and also makes special recordings for local stations. It has studios both at the convention hall and at the Courad Hilton.

One unusual feature, it discovers, is that a number of small local stations have arranged for convention delegates from their communities to serve as "stringers," making tape reports of special doings of their delegations to be flown to the various interested cities.

SEATTLE AFRA WINS 4% LIVING-COST HIKE

Seattle, July 8. Seattle local of American Feder seatule local of American Federation of Radio Artists has okayed, and negotiators for three local network stations have accepted, a new contract calling for a cost of living wage increase of 4.1%, retroactive to Feb. 16, tive to Feb. 16,

New contract, when signed, also will allow stations to "assign additional duties to announcers" with a corresponding premium rate of pay. Additional duties are understood to include the handling of platters, making announcers, in effect, combination men. This section of the contract does not go into effect, however, until the next construction permit for a TV station here is allocated.

Thinking behind this qualification here is allocated.

Thinking behind this qualification is that when a new TV station begins construction here there will be jobs available for any announcers and/or engineers who are laid off at the network radio stations. Three stations covered in the agreement are KIRO (CBS), KJR (ABC) and KOMO (NBC). Former rate for announcers was $92.40 a week,

More and more of the country's television stations are falling in line to support the industry's pro-NARTB's strong defense of the code before recent sessions of the House Interstate Commerce subcommittee investigating radio and TV for immoral and offensive programs is expected to bring additional subscribers. Association's "keep hands off TV" plea to Congress to give industry chance to regulate itself is believed to have made a good impression on stations, particularly those who are still struggling to get into the black.

GOP Relents on TV Credentials Ban After Nets 'Stole' Earlier Coverage

Radio, TV and newsreels, barred from earlier meetings of the GOP credentials committee, had virtual-ly the run of the place today

As the committee returned to rehearse cases under the new convention rule, officials opened the doors on the basis of an arrangement worked out late last night with the media. Under the deal, radio and TV coverage must be pooled. Two TV cameras were permitted in the balcony of the Congress Hotel ball room in which the hearings were conducted. NBC is handling cameras and sound for the pool.

News commentators were barred

News commentators were barred News commentators were harred from the floor but network reporters were permitted at the press tables on the floor. While a lastminute okay permitted commentators to work in the extreme rear of the ballroom balcony, most of today's commentary was cut in from the web auxiliary studios in the Conrad Hilton Hotel. Radio coverage was similarly pooled and worked along the same line. The newsreels were permitted to set up large cameras and lights in the balcony and were allowed one hand-held camera on the floor on a pooled basis. Chicago, July 8.
With radio forced to play a stepchild role in this all-out "TV convention," the AM boys are doing everything in their power to vest their coverage with that "something different" that will distinguish the sound-only medium from the more glamorous video.

FAR CRY FROM RADIO-ONLY ERA

There is evidence everywhere that this is a "TV convention." For the first time, there are approximately as many representatives of mately as many representatives of the broadcasting industry (about 1,200 in all) as there are official politico delegates, who number 1,206. The transplanting of complete TV plants at the Chi amphitheatre by the major networks is hailed as one of the engineering wonders of the day.

This is a far cry from the radioonly days when the Johnny Johnstones, the Bill Brookses, the Abe Schechters and the Paul Whites were on hand to mastermind a mere handful of AM faithfuls who devised the initial coverage pat-devised the initial coverage pat-terns. In contrast, the jobs con-fronting the Sig Mickelsons, the Bill McAndrews and the Tommy Velottas are herculean indeed, involving whole regiments of workers as new concepts in coverage are being established.

The skirmishes seem to multiply daily. Last week it was a case of literally dodging blows from the rival Ike-Taft factions as the webs cornered them for interviews.

when the Dems meet on July 21. Both Fry and Reinsch hint at "TV surprises" but they're not tipping what they are. The Dems, based on past experience, have a penchant for injecting more color and dramatic values into their conventions. There was little in evidence on the floor of the amphitheatre as the Ike-Taft battle broke out in all its fury. From a show biz standpoint, this is strictly a conservative show. Even the betting is at a minimum.

Network Brass To Chi En Masse Eyeing TV's Role

Chicago, July 8.
The Conrad Hilton (ex-Stevens) hotel here, one of the major "nerve centers" of the radio-TV contingents covering the Chi convention, is a familiar spot to the broadcasting fraternity, being the almost perennial site for the annual NAB conventions. screens.

TV viewers are not confined to spectators and casual onlookers. Newsmen assigned to report and interpret the story to the American people are doing so via video. This doesn't mean, of course that the working press sections at the International Amphitheatre are empty while reporters sit in front of TV receivers. But with a working space that can accommodate only a fraction of the 1,500 accredited newspaper, periodical, radio, TV and newsreel reps, the TV screen is a boon to harrassed correspondents. spondents.

Even after the gavel pounded yesterday for opening of the convention, the lounge in the press centre at the Conrad Hilton Hotel was filled with seriously working reporters making notes as the story unfolded. Ten receivers, spotted at three different places, brought the story to the press corps who remained at the hotel hendquarters. This does not include video receivers in wire service offices and large news bureaus. In these, staffers checked the TV picture with the ticker reports.

At International Amplithearte, the number of video receivers staggered even GOP national committee members. The networks ran into a heap of trouble at the opening session of the GOP convention when Guy George Gabrielson, chairman of the National Republican Committee, who chaired the initial semester, ganged up on the assorted "walkie-talkies" (AM) and "walkie-talkies" (TV) that were paraded through the amphitheatre for some supplementary color and sideline pickups.

Gabrielson, anxious to clear the congested aisles midst the confusion attending the resolutions wrangling, repeatedly told the boys with the portable equipment to scram.

Some heeded his warning. Others, more courageous, sneaked back and resumed their vox-pop-

Chicago, July 8.

For Ed Murrow, one of CBS' key spielers in the Chi convention wrap-up, the GOP conclave added up to a double-pronged embarrassment. On Sunday (6), in sparking a full hour pre-convention gab session on TV, the sound conked out on him and the ace gabber found himself doing a marathon pantomime.

At the opening session on Monday, Murrow couldn't get on the convention floor. The doormen weren't satisfied with his badge credentials. It took "politics" to appease them.

H. V. Kaltenborn was similarly embarrassed upon checking in at the Conrad Hilton Hotel yesterday (Mon.) On entering the lobby, the distinguished-looking H. V., attired in white suit and spotless Panama, found himself surrounded by a huge crowd welcoming him as "chief of the Georgia delegation." Kaltenborn finally convinced them of his real identity and the crowd sheepishly backed off.

RWG Pickets, Shipped to Chi, Disrupt Several TV Net Convention Remotes

Radio Writers Guild, last week-extended its strike from New York to Chicago, with 30 pickets from Gotham shipped to the seene of the Republican convention. According to a union spokesman, presence of pickets in the Windy City hit the CBS-Westinghouse show on Sunday (6), when the placard-bearing strikers appeared before the pickup-point for the Eisenhower parade and the web then cancelled that remote segment.

Bergen-Hudnut deal, incidentally, also means that ABC must now find a new bankroller for Walter Winchell's Sunday night show. Winchell is definitely prepared to resume in the fall, either on radio alone or on both radio and TV, and it has been presumed that Hudnut would be back as his sponsor. It's believed the cosmetic firm's budget, however, won't permit for sponsorship of two top-coin AM shows, especially if they're both on Sunday nights.

Cowan, although headquartering in N, Y., has long been high on Chi personalities and production facilities. Mac's 'Who Needs Prompting?'

Chicago, July 8. The Teleprompter came of age as a force for public speaking in the realm of TV and it looks as though its owner, Irving B. Kahn, has parlayed his device into a permanent Congressional ride. Just as practically all other facets of the GOP convention were geared to video, the Teleprompter occupied a place of honor in front of the speaker rostrum with 19 (count 'em) of the major haranguers contracting for use of the giant-size hidden text. So impressed was Speaker of the House Joe Martin that he took time out to talk facts and figures with Kahn on making the Teleprompter a Congress fixture in anticipation of the day when the House and Senate "go TV."

Kahn's move-in on the politico brass, however, wasn't all easy salling. Major holdout on the use of the Teleprompter was keynoter Douglas MacArthur who, by refusing to release his address in advance, also stymied the newsreel boys who had pleaded for the conventional "full dress rehearsal" as a deadline expediency. Kahn pleaded and cajoled for an advance text, since a couple hours are required to give it the giant-size treatment, but MacArthur was adamant.

Doubting Thomas on Commercials

An attack on propaganda in commercials was made over NBC-TV last week (2) by Norman Thomas, vet Socialist leader. Thomas objected to attacks on socialism made in the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corp. commercials on "American Forum of the Air," and NBC granted him time to answer the Bohn arguments and to comment on the practice of making political pitches in commercial time.

Bohn, Thomas charged, "has steadily used the commercial period to preach dogmatically the corporation's fear and hate of something it calls 'socialism,' but which evidently also includes the welfare state. This abuse of fair or free speech is largely paid for by us, the taxpayers, because every corporation deducts advertising expenses before computing its income taxes. This means that you and I pay from one-half to two-thirds of the cost of this indoctrination-by-propaganda."

Thomas stressed that Bohn isn't the only outfit on the air "frightening Americans with the 'fate worse than death' of socialism." He mentioned the privately owned electric power companies which tout private ownership of utilities on "Meet Corliss Archer."

panies which tout private ownership of utilities on "Meet Corilis Archer."

"The whole purpose of 'American Forum' is to have issues discussed; not to have them prejudiced by a hired announcer in a commercial," Thomas said. "In 1946, the FCC criticized propagand in commercials very sharply. It held that there should be no place for commercials to propagandize for a point of view or one side of a debated issue, rather than to sell goods or services."

Thomas said that unless he can reach an agreement with NBC regarding deletion of propaganda from AM and TV commercials, "I intend to besiege every Government agency, the FCC, Income Tax Bureau and Congress." He said that the head of the brass company has a right to his views "as I have a right to mine," and added, "The difference is worth serious discussion. But no corporation has a right to turn its hucksters into political propagandists over TV at our expense."

NBC announced that it had made the time available to the Socialist Party leader "in the interests of fairness."

While final pacts have not been signed yet, it looks as though Burns & Allen will continue in their present Thursday night at 8 slot on CBS-TV in the fall, when they switch from an alternate week to a weekly showcasing. There had ben some talk that the comedy team would move over to Sunday nights at 10, based on the fact that Goodrich, which now has the Sunday night period with its 'Celebrity Time,' picked up the alternate week schedule on B&A.

'Let's Tell 'Em Off' Mood

Mood of the CBS Radio affiliates who met to forestall a network

Mood of the CBS Radio affiliates who met to forestall a network rate-slashing party last week was a fighting one. The station operators, almost to a man, reported good local and national spot business and couldn't see why the web wanted to push through a cut—which inevitably would undermine their local and spot rate, structure. Their "let's tell 'em off" attitude was expressed in comments voiced aloud at the parley.

At one point, after CBS prez Frank Stanton had spoken for an hour and board chairman William S. Paley had gabbed for a quarter-hour, it was announced that Stanton had to leave "to see a client." From the floor came the caustic query: "AM or TY?"

At the afternoon cocktail party Wednesday (2), after the network had screened its "More Than Meets the Eye" radio-promoting film, one of the affiliates button-holed CBS veepee Lou Hausman, one of the guiding lights behind the animated color cartoon. Station man told Hausman, it was a terrific picture and that the affiliates were greatly impressed with the job it does in socking across radio's effectiveness as an ad medium. Hausman beamed. Then the station operator said, "Lou, will you do me a favor? Let your salesmen see it."

The industry this week was trying to assess last week's dramatic meeting of CBS Radio affiliates, which brought almost 150 toppers from stations across the country to protest the network's expected rate cut and to demand, instead, a rate bile.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee of the affiliates' committee met with CBS' top echelon yesterday (Tues.) afternoon to hammer out differences that apparently couldn't be settled with so large a body.

Some segments of the industry were disappointed at the outcome, when, after the affiliates had shown striking determination and unanimity, they agreed to a tabling action—having a committee meet with the CBS brass "at an early date for further discussion of our mutual problems." However, those stations which signed the invitation to last week's confab felt that the two-day parley had a salutary effect.

For one thing, they pointed out, the network upper echelon—board chairman William S. Paley and prexy Frank Stanton—who presented the chain's side of the story with some "disturbing, unshakable facts," did not unfold any rate revision plan. In short, there is no rate slashing in the immediate future. Commenting on the Paley-Stanton talks, one affiliate observed, "They bled—and bled." "Comedy Hour" lineup will be virtually the same as last season, with Eddie Cantor, Martin & Lewis Rob Hope, Donald O'Connor and Abbott & Costello having been inked. Under the program's operating procedure, none of the comics will do more than 11 shows during the year. Possibility exists that other NBC contract comics may do occasional one-shots to pad out the schedule, if they're needed. On "All Star," Jimmy Durante and Martha Raye are the only two already inked. Final talent roster was held up pending the signing of a third sponsor for the show, which occurred this week when California Packing came in. From Last year's "All Star" lineup, Ed Wynn, Danny Thomas and Olsen & Johnson have either quit or been dropped. Web is currently dickering with Ben Blue, Ritz Bros., Tallulah Bankhead, Phil Harris, Maurice Chevaller and Harold Lloyd, among others, to rotate with Durante and Miss Raye.

COIN SPOTLIGHT

Lennen & Mitchell's acquisition last week of the Bromo Seltzer billings, totalling upwards of $2,000,000 annually, spotlights the almost frantic activity in recent weeks among agencies and clients in the continuing shuffling of major accounts. In the case of some agencies, it projects them into new spheres of importance, while others, stripped of multi-million dollar accounts, have been involved in heavy retrenchment schedules. With its takeover of the Bromo in heavy retrenchment schedules. With its takeover of the Bromo Seltzer biz, Lennen & Mitchell achieves its peak mark. Only a few weeks back the agency was notified by the "Schlitz Brewing Co., of Milwaukee, that it was falling heir to $3,000,000 in radio-TV billings (another $3,000,000 for other media going to the Leo Burnett agency in Chicago).

The Burnett ascendancy will undoubtedly go down as the most fabulous agency success story of '52. Only last week, the Chi operation was designated for the Kellogg billings plum lost by Kenyon & Eckhardt. Amount involved is in excess of $3,000,000.

Overall, Burnett has swelled its billings to $35,000,000, giving it a status comparable to the bigleague Madison Ave. boys in New York. It's estimated that only a year ago the Burnett agency was riding along with approximately half the biz it enjoys today.

Kenyon & Eckhardt, on the other hand, has wound up as one of the biz it enjoys foday.

Kenyon & Eckhardt, on the other hand, has wound up as one of the year's major casualties, second only to the billings recession encountered a couple months back by Young & Rubicam, which not only lost the $6,000,000 Schlitz biz, but also the Packard billings as well.

In addition to the Kellogg loss, K & E also found itself minus the Piel's beer account, totalling $1,250,000. Latter billings shifted over to Y & R, contributing toward a partial assuagement in the face of the Schlitz loss.

Just as Y & R went on a firing binge in its radio-TV department as result of the double-barrelled Schlitz-Packard defections, K & E last week also inaugurated a retrenchment campaign.

Weintraub is another agency that took it on the chin recently, the loss of the Babbitt Co. biz representing a $3,000,000 billings rap.

Recently the Ted Bates agency grabbed itself a $1,500,000 plum, winning the CBS Television set manufacturing account in the competitive agency bidding.

What's in a Name?

What's in a Name?

Danger in labeling a television show with the name of a sponsor is currently being underscored by the difficulties confronting ABC-TV in selling "Celanese Theatre". Show, a William Morris agency package, won a number of citations and awards last season, but Celanese cancelled out in the spring. Despite its merits, however, the dramatic series is so closely associated in the minds of viewers with the Celanese name, that few other advertisers want to touch it.

Other networks, for that reason, have established a strict rule against permitting any of their house packages to carry the name of a sponsor, NBC has "Texaco Star Theatre," "Kraft TV Theatre," etc., but these are outside productions which came into the web under those tags.

Pickford, Hope Crosby, Stewart Seek TV Outlets

Washington, July 8.
Several motion picture stars, past and present, are investing in companies which filed applications with the FCC last week for TV stations. They are Mary Pickford Rogers, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and James Stewart.

Mrs. Rogers has filed an application for a station in Winston-Salem, N. C. and will compete against two other applicants for the only VHF channel assigned to the city. The one-time "sweetheart of the silents" had originally filed two other applications—for Asheville and Durham—but has not yet advised whether she will press these bids.

Hope has a substantial interest in Metropolitan Television Co., which has applied for TV in Denver. Metropolitan recently purchased the NBC key 50 kw radio station KOA in Denver for $2.250,000, subject to FCC approval.

Crosby holds a 47% interest in KXLY-TV, Inc., which has filed for TV in Spokane, Wash. The crooner, whose name is given in the application as Harry L. Stewart has a 20% interest in Denver Television Co., which applied for a TV license in the Colorado capital. Theatre and oil money are also financing this company.

As the measure neared final action, efforts were made to tack on a provision to protect radio and TV stations against libel suits resulting from remarks made in political broadcasts. Such a provision was voted by the House, but was dropped by the conferences appointed to iron out differences in the Senate and House bills. Thus, broadcasters are still faced with the problem of complying with libel laws of various states and at the same time obeying FCC policy which prevents them from censoring political speeches.

Sen. Ernest McFarland (D-Ariz.), chairman of the communications subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and a state Commerce Committee and a member of the conference committee in charge of the bill, told Variety the libel provision was dropped because the conferees felt that the subject should be given further study, through hearings, before legislative action is taken. years of its existence.

While the total is far from the 1,000 applications the agency had expected, it's still plenty to handle. And there will be more filed in the weeks to come. Many prospective applicants are taking their time, inasmuch as the system of priorities established for processing gives first consideration to non-TV cities and doesn't reach TV areas for some months. for some months.

The nearly 500 applications filed The nearly 500 applications filed revealed some surprising developments, chief of which is the willingness of applicants to establish stations in the new ultra high frequencies. Over one-third of the applications are for UHF channels, And these are not only for cities where only UHF is available but also for cities with both UHF and VHF assignments and even for cities with near saturation of VHF sets.

In view of these applications, it's expected that manufacture of all-channel TV sets will be considerably stimulated and that new models will be on the market sooner than was anticipated. Since many of the UHF applications are for cities without TV, it's likely that a number of permits can be issued in short order and that station construction can begin soon. Prospective set owners in these areas will want either UHF or all-channel receivers.

Another big surprise was the number of applications for non-commercial educational TV stations —seven in all. Considering that the channels for such stations are reserved for at least a year, the fact that seven applications were filed appears to provide concrete evidence that the educators mean business, if not profits.

The applications came from 43 states, from Hawaii and Puerto Rico. They came from big metropolitan centers and small cities and towns with only a few thousand population. They showed that the high cost of building and operating a TV station holds no fears to those with faith in the medium.

The city with most applications was Wichita, Kan., with nine. Seven of the applicants filed for the two VHF channels available and two VHF channels assigned to Denver, largest non-TV city and first in processing priority. But in Portland, Ore., second largest non-TV city, there were applications for each of the two UHF channels available, as well as for the three VHF channels. The reason may be that Denver has four VHF channels and there are four TV networks.

Smooth TV Convention Work Makes '48 Pickups Seem Like a Rehearsal

Chicago, July 8.
Complete, smooth and polished TV coverage of the opening day of the GOP convention proclaimed video's coming of age. They said that in '48, too, and they called the political pow-wow in Philadelphia the world's first television convention. But that trail blazer now shapes as rehearsal for the big time performance currently unfolding on the nation's TV screens.

The inevitable comparison with V coverage in '48 begins with the TV coverage in '48 begins with the technical progress and engineering developments of the past four years. These have come gradually — improved and larger picture tube, the increase in screen size, the development of better photographic techniques, the expanded studio techniques. But they hit with the allocated through the property of the property graphic techniques, the expanded studio techniques. But they hit with an almost dramatic impact when compared with the initial effort in '48. Above all, the improved know-how of both interviewer and subject and the obvious confidence which permeates the screen contrasts vividly with the jerky, nervous performances that the country's voters avidly watched four years ago.

The convention floor story is largely a pool effort, and it's in the cooperative smoothness of all the nets working together that the improvement is first evident. The initial day's coverage in Philadelphia was indicated to the convention in the convention of the convention is the convention of the convention of the convention is a convention of the co initial day's coverage in Philadelphia was a jerky, sometimes incoherent affair. It took hours for the carefully laid advance work to start operating. In contrast, even with an hour-and-a-half's delay in schedule, due to last minute huddles of the GOP national committee, the story came to the screen with meaning and clarity.

Summer television picture, which has been rather gloomy because of some weak program fillers, got a bright new entry Thursday night (3) with the preem of the new Wally Cox starrer, "Mister Peep-ers." A whimsical situation comedy show about a tyro highschool science teacher, it's a new, novel idea in TV comedy and, on the basis of the preem, may rate a passs of the preem, may rate a sponsor for a regular season slotting. (Show replaces the cancelled James Melton program, and will give way in the fall to the new vidpix series inked by Ford, which is to be produced by Screen Gems.) is to be produced by Screen Gems.)

Initialer, as scripted by David Switt and Jim Fritzell, laid a neat groundwork for succeeding stanzas. Cox, who's established a rep in TV and nitery comedy work and also in some video dramatic shows, was the ugly duckling schoolteacher of the title, out to make a name for himself in his first mentoring assignment. With his new classroom still under construction, he ran into trouble from the start via the incumbent teacher, a jealous, stuffed-shirtish individual. Through his own bumbling, Cox forced the other teacher to take to the hills and moved into his classroom at the finale.

Story presented some new twists to established situations and also provided Cox and the rest of the

Story presented some new twists to established situations and also provided Cox and the rest of the cast with some okay dialog, to keep the humor perking at a warm, chucklesome rate. That the show was scripted for Cox was obvious, and he made the most of it with his unique, slow-tempoed delivery. Leonard Elliott was okay as the jealous school-teacher, and Joseph Foley turned in a competent performance as the school principal. Norma Crane hadn't much to do as the femme teacher who befriended Cox, but she'll undoubtedly be around for the romantic interest on future stanzas.

Fred Coe, producer of NBC's Sunday night "TV Playhouse," is doubling into this and endowed the preem edition with some standout accoutrements. Sets, camera work and Bernie Green's music backing reflected a higher-than-average summer budget. Show plays before an unseen studio audience, which helps both the cast and set-siders in the laugh department. Ford commercials were good, with Dr. Roy K. Marshall, as usual, delivering a solid pseudo-scientific selling job in the midway blurb.

With NBC-TV's Red Skelton

afternoon time, with Sarah Churchaill returning as program hostess and occasional star.)

Preem show on the summer cycle was an imaginative original by Harold Callen, titled "Legend of Josiah Blow." It was the story of an American private in the Continental army of 1776, who was blown into Times Square of 1952 by a king-sized firecracker he had made to celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Naturally, nobody believed his tale and the calloused, inept immigration authorities sought to deport him. Not knowling his origin, they gave him his choice of countries and he picked Korea, so as to find the fiance of a young French girl also awaiting deportation. He accomplished his mission and then, when he disappeared in a Korean battle, presumably was returned to "76. As Josiah Blow, of course, he turned out to be "Joe Blow" for modern times.

Biff McGuire turned in a solid job in the title role, scoring particularly in a dramatic reading of the Declaration for the benefit of the immigration authorities. Christine White was appealing and capable as the French gal. Supporting cast was good, with Monte Banks, Jr., son of the late comedian, showing to advantage in a small role.

Star of the show, however, continues to be McCleery's staging technique. With his constant emphasis on closeups, combined with only a few props in place of sets, he managed to convey completely the various moods of the show—and at a low budget. With good scripts, this could be one of the best summer replacements Stal.

Fisher acquitted himself extremely well. He's an engaging personality, with a young, natural approach, masculine delivery and fair pipes. His fresh, clean-cut handling of ballads is solid lure for the younger crowd, both male and female, and his wearing of the army khaki adds a glamor touch. He tackles the intros in relaxed style.

Entry was given effective, if modest, production trappings. One item had Fisher miming to "Maybe," his duetting disk with Perry Como, while on stage with three Wacs. Cute windup had the gals clustered around a photo of Como, then flipping it to reveal Fisher's pic on the other side. Elaine Dunn, a colorful tapster. did a sock job on "Get Happy" and provided dramatic background terping for another number. Camerawork was topnotch.

Idea of having Fisher intro the commercials was, perhaps, not too smart, in view of his being in uniform. Pitches are for Shadow Wave and Chlorodent. Gleason is slated to star in his own hour vaudeo presentation Saturday nights on CBS in the fall).

Producer Milton Douglas, who's set each of the "Cavalcade" emces off on their video reputations, gave Storch plenty of opportunity to demonstrate his value. There was an okay lineup of guest talent but none of sufficient calibre to detract from the comic's initial impression. Metopera soprano Roberta Peters did a nice job on the Jewel Song from "Faust," Maurice Rocco, accomped by tapster Derby Wilson, impressed with his standup '88'ing, and Trin Reyes registered with her flamenco dancing. Otherwise, it was Storch all the way.

Comic's initial impersonations of how various men-in-the-street are reacting to the current political conventions served to set off his apeing ability, but suffered from weak writing. Takeoff on a femme drunk was better, but could have used more production backing. Best of his work was a sketch satirizing 'Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," in which he played a Good Humor vendor. While the material was good for only sporadic laughs and had a telegraphed ending, it gave Storch a good chance to show off his versatility in thesping.

Don Russell handled his announcing chores competently and did as good a selling job as possible on that long list of drug products plugged on the show.

Members of Gleason's supporting cast, including Art Carney and Pert Kelton, were absent from the Storch debut, incidentally, indicating that CBS is the winner in its feud with DuMont over whether they would accompany Gleason in his switch of networks. Stal.

Tele Follow-Ups

The second session of NBC-TV's 'All Star Summer Revue" Saturday night (5) indicates that some progress has been made, but there are some rough spots that still need ironing out. The production isn't quite finished as yet. The show has yet to make up its mind whether it wants to be classified as a revue or a straight vaude show. The revue aspects are ex-tremely limited, since there aren't enough colletive efforts in the sketch department to warrant the revue label.

The highlight of the second show was the appearance of Paul Winchell, who again displayed his extellence in the video medium. Winchell is an actor as well as a highly-skilled ventriloquy technician. He endowed his dummy with considerable animation and showed his skill. in one bit which required a bit of acting. There was one sequence, a highly gimmicked routine, in which the dummy performed a dance. It amazed viewers as well as the studio audience. Another comedy highlight was by Betty & Jane Kean, who did well in one routine. CBS has got hold of a solid

Scripter Philo Higley has plenty of material to choose from for future stanzas, so the slow start of the preem can't be considered a true indication of things to come.
However, it set the stage for the Series, made in England by Harry Alan Towers, was produced on a lavish scale, employing British preemed on NBC Tuesday (1) with a stanza that was loosely adapted from the exploits of Baroness Orczy's fiction hero. The adventures- of the Pimpernel usually make for exciting material (several pix already have been made) and there's little any adaptor can do to dissipate the intrigue. Joel Murcott, who penned this series, knows his radio values, and the initial half-hour came across in slick meller fashion. Series is a good bet to pick up a solld summer following.

Opening program got under way fast with a tale that had the Pimpernel rescuing a French noblewoman and her young son from the guillotine. Through some artful disguises and hairbreadth escapes, the Pimpernel outwitted the heavy ship to England and safety.

Dialog moved at a clicko pace and stanza bogged down only in spots where the crowd scenes and dueling sequences were emphasized. In these portions, session became a little too hectic and most of the action was entirely lost on

STEVE ALLEN SHOW With Allen, Bobby Sherwood Trie; Teresa Brewer, The Continental, guests

Producer-director:Al Span 36 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 9:30 p.::: Sustaining CBS, from N. Y. (transcribed)

On the second show of his new cross-board series last Wednesday (2) Steve Allen served up his own critique of the transcribed block oy calling it "30 solid minutes of nothing." He was not far off the beam. The first quarter-hour fit beam. The first quarter-hour fit his zero characterization, consisting largely of puns, jokes and chitchat revolving around GI's and other members of studio audience. A good deal of it sounded strangely unspontaneous.

Last half picked up a bit via a "Them There Eyes" vocal by Coral waver Teresa Brewer and an interview with The Continental (Renzo Cesana). Allen got a big bang out of playing around with the fact that Miss Brewer's husband is a "road contractor." The jokes were almost endless. The Continental was quizzed on the femme angle with Allen playing it smart by giving his guest the laugh lines. Boby Sherwood Trio did a quickie in the forepart and backed the Brewer song.

On the teeoff stanza, Stuart Foster registered strongly with his big-voiced rendition of such standards as "All Through The Night" and "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes." Concert planist Earl Wild delivered impressive keyboard solos on some Chopin selections. Bernard Green, conducting the ABC Symphony Orchestra, batoned a couple of instrumental ballads and backed up Foster's vocals in rich style.

"Meet Your Match."

Format-wise, this show has little to commend it. Only plus note is Murray's presence. Questions are thrown at a pair of audience selectees. The one remaining chooses another opponent, and the one standing at bell-time has a chance at the jackpot.

Murray showed a nice brand of chatter. He bantered with the selectees engagingly and ad libbed a nice line of chatter. These programs are taped and showed a good quality of recording.

"Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar," which returned to the air Wednesday (2), got away to only a fair start with "The Amella Harwell-Case." Half-hour mystery show followed the private-eye story pattern familiar to most listeners. An insurance investigator, Dollar speedly solved a case in which a husband poisoned his wife.

ily solved a case in which a husband poisoned his wife.

Dollar, of course, had the crime
all wrapped up before the cops were remotely aware that anything amiss was going on. Script was also lacking in suspense, since suspicion pointed toward the husband almost from the start. His motive, it developed, stemmed from a belief that he could help the children by ellminating a dominating mother.
Edmond O'Brien, who handled the title role, laconically read his lines as per custom of radio sleuths. Good support was provided by Victor Perrin, John Mc.
Intire, Herb Butterfield, Jeanette
Nolan, Virginia Gregg and Peter Leeds. Producer Jaime del Valle

"Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar" is a cut above the average radio whodunit, however, and will likely cull a fair-sized audience from warmweather dialers. Use of snappier scripts that don't telegraph the denouement will result in a better show and rating.

Dennis. James stepped in Sunday night (6) as emcee on ABC's "Stop The Music," to give Bert Parks chance to take a five-week vacation. James was quite colloquial and effective, bringing a brisk, punchy and business-like quality to his emceeing. There was a certain lack of warmth that Parks exudes, but James made up for it in breeziness. He handled studio and home contestants capably, joshing them on their names, home life, wedded or single status, etc., and though a bit heavy-handed in his tries at humor, kept contestants and studio audience amused.

"Invitation to Learning," CBS Radio's weekly cultural stanza, on Sunday (6) kicked off a new series devoted to books of great adventures. Initial subject was Kenophon's "Anabasis," the epic of 10,000 Greek mercenaries who fought their way out of Persia, where they had gone to help Cyrus. Chairman Lyman Bryson and his guests, military analyst Maj. George Fielding Eliot and Andre Michalopoulos, adviser to the Greek embassy here, discussed the story of that determined rearguard action in which the Greeks fought their way to the sea, four centuries B.C.

B.C.

Program, a worthwhile series, shouldn't have kicked off with this particular opus, or should have developed more meat from the account. True, Maj. Eliot noted that the Greeks had lost a number of mea when they entered a defile, and that the Yanks fighting in Korea had similarly suffered casualties in mountainous battles. But the fact that Xenophon makes good reading for present day tacticians isn't too important.

Situation came to light last week with news that a well-heeled bankroller, who had his choice of a number of top-budgeted vidpay packages produced on both coasts, gave the nod to a Hollywood series for the simple reason that it spotlighted several big-name film personalities in starring roles. Significance of the move was seen in the fact that one of roles. Significance of the move was seen in the fact that one of the packages turned down by the sponsor featured a group of legit names, just as big in their field as the Hollywood stars in theirs.

Cost Angle

Cost Angle

Costs, of course, enter into the situation in a big way. In addition to the claim of eastern producers that they can turn out vidpix on a lower budget because they aren't faced with such high labor charges and studio overhead fees as the Hollywood filmmakers, there's also the basic fact that a sponsor seeking Hollywood names will ncessarily pay extra for those names. But bankrollers feel that the added audience they'll get by relying on film names is well worth the extra cost. In terms of cost-per-thousand, they claim, they'll be ahead.

As one of the newest phases of show biz, consequently, the vidpix situation is echoing that played earlier by both films and radio. Several attempts to lure a portion of major theatrical film production back to the east coast, where it originated, have proved abortive. Radio, too, started in the east but then moved west when AM stars began doubling into films and got a taste of that Hollywood living. From all indications, vidpix may wind up the same way.

Sen. Frisco's Mount Sutro (a la Empire State Bldg.) As Transmitter Summit

San Francisco, July 8.

KPIX here is moving its transmitter from the Mark Hopkins hotel to Mount Sutro, site of KGO-TV, the ABC owned-and-operated outlet, and Frank Marx, ABC web engineering v.p. in N. Y., is pushing plans to make "another Empire State Bullding" of Mount Sutro.

ing plans to make "another Empire State Building" of Mount Sutro.

ABC owns the Adolph Sutro mansion and six acres of land on the highest point in the middle of the city. Mount Sutro, one of the famous twin peaks in 'Frisco, dominates the entire area, and KPIX elected to join KGO atop the summit after studying reception of KGO and KRON-TV, the S. F. Chronicle station, which has its transmitters situated on Mount Bruno, five miles south of town. It's claimed by KPIX and KGO that reception of KRON-TV's signal is not as good in some areas behind Mount Sutro. KPIX is expected to be sending from its new site by Aug. I.

Marx hopes that the majority of the two VHF and four UHF stations slated for S. F. will decide to join the KGO-KPIX set up on Sutro, when the bulk of antennas are oriented to that point. Situation could be analagous to that in Gotham, where six stations have moved to the Empire State site, leaving only WOR-TV beaming from its own tower.

ABC has patterned its leasing arrangements aftgr the Empire State setup. It's not anticipated that there will be any problems of interference, but if any should arise, it's up to the "last man on the totem pole" to make engineering adjustments, or move out.

KGO has been using the manse for studios, but it has taken other space to make room for transmitter equipment of other stations. Outlet is converting the Eagles lodge building into AM and TV facilities, which will make the old mansion completely, available for additional outlets, Marx said.

NEW REMOTE COVERAGE ON MIDWEST BASEBALL

Topeka, July 8.

Topeka, July 8.

New method of securing remote coverage of baseball games for recreating play-by-play accounts has been developed by several stations reporting games of Western Assn. teams. System is to have a gameside reporter who records action as it occurs, then furnishes it to station taking the remote via a long distance call. Reporter waits until he has action for a complete inning, or several innings if the action goes swiftly, before reporting home.

System requires only a few long distance calls per game; and brings cost of coverage considerably under what it has been by telegraphic reports. Method was developed during the recent wire strike, and now is in use with several stations carrying games of the Western Assn. and Texas League.

New method cuts Western Union out of a valuable source of daily revenue in many towns. Eeague officials favor the wire method, but option is in the hands of the stations and telephone system is expected to continue in use.

Network ingenuity partly beat the ban on radio, TV and newsreels at the hearings of the Republican credentials committee here last week.

Both NBC and CBS "stole" part of the proceedings on tape and put them out for web consumption while GOP politicos fumed.

It was last Tuesday (1) that the credentials committee ruled that equipment would not be allowed into the hearings on the bitter contests over opposing delegations. At the time of the ruling, NBC had already set up its full equipment including all cables for live telesating and broadcasting of the sessions.

casting and broadcasting of the sessions.

In the words of Bill McAndrew, in charge of NBC coverage, "it was the first time we ever had the ball room pulled from under our feet. Before the ruling they let us set up all our equipment, and we had to rip out cables and everything else we had there."

However, an hour later, NBC had the equipment reassembled outside the hearing room to buttonhole committee members and give interviews on the doings inside. In addition, a network rep carried a concealed miniature recorder inside the room and caught some of the scrappy hearing. A Republican party official spotted the recorder and confiscated the tape.

CBS Eyes on Texas

On Friday (4), CBS stole the entire Texas proceedings on a recorder, without the Republicans being any the wiser. That was the most important of any of the state contests. Highlights of the session were aired as a part of the Ed Murrow show. Later, a full half-hour show, made up of the best of the recording with short explanational insert, was put on the air as a special network program. "It proved we could cover the sessions without making any disturbance," said a CBS spokesman.

Roughest treatment, as a result of the ban, was suffered by the newsreels. Up to this year, there has never been any question about the rights of the reels to cover hearings on contested delegations. Reelers claimed they were victims of the television ban.

"Doorway to Danger" is a live thriller series replacing vidfilms' with Rolland Wilhers Cast jernanently as John Randolph, "The Chief."

The preem covered the rather incredible activities of special agent Hugh Wilson, played skillfully by Steve Elliott, in a mining plant behind the Iron Curtain. The agent assumed the identity of a blind Czech, whom he resembled. Latter had been "drafted" into the plant and was friendly to anti-USSR sources. The agent managed to steal secret papers through the help of a sightless girl (all the workers except a plant were blind, to prevent their casing the place, etc.), who killed a couple of Commie characters inside the mine in order to pave the way for the operative's success.

Play built suspense but was choppy in spots. Best sequences were the movements of the blind persons, and especially the incidents with the operative feigning blindness. Credit was given to the Lighthouse for the Blind for its technical aid in this conference ton.

The video-tested elements are there. In fact, as indicated on the initialer (3), other than the sports background of the mystery guests and the panel itself, there's little to distinguish the show from a swelling list of similarly striped ventures. Panel is asked to identify a trio of guests who have made-their mark in the sports world. Visitors this round were Fred Merkle, who cost the N. Y. Giants a pennant when he forgot to touch second base in a game against the Cubs in the 1908 race, for one of baseball's biggest boners; Gertrude Ederle, first gal to swim the English Channel, and Ezzard Charles, ex-heavyweight ehamp. Latter was seen only in silhouette, demonstrating one of his hobbies—bass thumping. It was a nice effect but the panel, as was the case with the other two guests, quickly pegged the pug.

Spivak package (the former moderating) was that they devoted the first half to two Presidential candidates (Stassen and Warren) and wound with men behind the scenes (John D. M. Alternation or complete reverse would have provided better programming, particularly since former Minnesota Governor Stassen is one of the more able extempore speakers among all aspirants for White House residence.

Pitching the questions with no holds barred, were scribes Richard Wilson, Mrs. May Craig and Tom Reynolds, and Spivak. Stassen was mostly forthright. Gov. Warren did a bit of charming hedging. ing session in the face of belowaverage sequencing.

Les Paul and Mary Ford, subbing for Patti Page on NBC's "Music Hall" Thursday (3), turned in a competent job. Paul lacked sparkle in his gab, which was only a minor portion of the show, but demonstrated fine musiclanship and showmanship in his guitaring. His wife, a pleasant-voiced looker who also can twang a guitar, projected nicely. Musically they've got a good beat, an ability to invent catchy phrases or borrow them from folk songs, and generally they have a sure finger on the popular pulse.

They opened with the jazz theme, "How High the Moon," and on some items used the echo chamber effect to lend a haunting quality to the femme voice. Section probably involved Miss Ford's duetting with a pre-recorded sound track. In any case, it was effectively done.

Production was on a high level for a simple layout. Most of the effects were achieved by topflight lighting. In one number Miss Ford's face was spotlighted in a dark stage, which got over the blue mood, and a male dancer—lit in a similarly low-key manner—added a bit of emotion-in-motion in the background. Cameras were deftly handled.

Louis Prima, the orch leader, slammed across his special lyrics about his overweight sweetie's figure to the tune of Figaro's aria from "Barber of Seville." Prima has a winning style and the words were cute, although they didn't hold up for the full distance. All in all, however, the Prima-Ford-Paul combo made a pretty potent lineup for a 15-minute opus.

Vets of the '48 fracas look back laughingly at the clumsy efforts with make-up, the clumsy efforts with make-up, the clumsh faces of respected politicos leering at viewers. Close-ups are particularly sharp and natural, and the scope of the camera has been noticeably expanded.

The highly-touted gadgets developed by the webs showed up at the convention preem. Several times, Chairman Guy Gabrielson shouted for removal of the new CBS miniature walkie-talkies, which his sharp eyes spotted. But the boys kept appearing again and again, obviously smuggling the little device back onto the floor.

CBS' Montage

CBS' Montage

On the novelty side, CBS scored with its new montage effect. The superimposed picture, carrying a side story, is sharp, without interfering with definition of the main picture. Walter Cronkite, who carried the CBS ball opening day, seemed to be overdoing it, however, like a child with a new toy. Despite the pleasant Cronkite personality, it was frequently annoying to have attention diverted from a self-explanatory story to a side picture. On the other hand, the pickup interviews from the floor added considerable interest to the running story.

With the pool cameras grinding out the running story, there isn't tell to a minimum, as the drama of the tirst day's floor fight told its own story. Actually, this type of on-the-same a tell to a minimum, as a pleasant relief from the deluge of feature stories, hotel demonstrations and the press conferences which marked the preconvention days. The one thing this year's steppedup, hep coverage shares with the green year of '48, is the problem of the preconvention to green year of '48, is the problem of the preconvention to green year of '48, is the problem of the preconvention to green year of '48, is the problem of the preconvention on the viewers. The capturing of the pre-convention hubbub and excitement, requiring plenty of off-the-cuff ingenuity, demonstrated, for one, that the webs were alerted to the great and colorful show ahead. There were some snafus, as was to be expected, but overall it represented a triumph in establishing a variety of video "firsts."

be expected, but overall it represented a triumph in establishing a variety of video "firsts."

This is a GOP convention, too, being sparked by various elements from radio-TV's creative braintrusters, as evidenced, for example, in the campaign of Gen. Dwight D. Elsenhower for the Republican Presidential nomination. The manner in which these radio-TV aides (taking personal affront at the Taft-supported TV blackout last week) capitalized on the video ban by arousing a pro-Eisenhower sentiment and actually swaying some delegate switchovers (through the simple expedient of capturing on the cameras the conflicting facial reactions of the opposing factions, will be remembered as one of the unique contributions of TV showmen to the political arena.

Chiefly comprising these "creative aides" were a host of Young and Rubicam agency exces, headed by president Sigurd Larmon and Ken Dyke, exce assistant to the president. Plotting the pro-Eisenhower TV tactics in eliciting national sympathy were such other Y&R aides as Joseph Scibetta, producer; Richard Dana, programming aide; Bob Fenton, producer; Ken Woods, producer and Tony Zaghi and Woodrow Renoit, in the Y&R administration. Cecil Arney, ex-Y&R, has been a key aide to Al Hollander, Eisenhower's radio-TV director, along-with Pete Levathes, 20th-Fox's radio-TV exec.

ASCAP Qtr. Melon Near $3,000,000

Second quarterly dividend of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, which was mailed out last week to publishers and writers, was slightly under the $3,000,000 m arker. Melon slice was about 2% higher than the first quarter dividend. At the current pace, ASCAP will probably distribute about $12,000,000 this year or about the same as it did in 1951. It's expected that total network radio billings and ASCAP's income from this source will drop this year with the hike from television compensating for the loss.

Musical Parls, still reeling from impact of "Masterpleese of the 20th Century," now finds itself in the midst of still another monthlong cycle of concerts. Latest festival is "Les Nuits Musicales" sponsored officially by City of Parls Commite des Fetes at the Palais de Chaillot.

Cycle kicked off July 2 with Philadelphia Orch's batoneer Eugene Ormandy getting more music out of Radio Diffusion Francaise, a national orchestra, than anybody else has succeeded in achieving all year.

Balance of series brings in orchestras from Munich and Hamburg with local groups, Pasdeloup and Colonne, also participating.

Piece de resistance of festival would appear to be first French appearance of Yugoslav State ballet troupe and symphony orchestra which come in for three days July 15-17.

Bring Back the Bands' Campaign Gets Top Disk Jock Push From WNEW, N. Y.

Decca Pacts Raitt

John Raitt, singer who was starred in "Three Wishes for Jamie" on Broadway this season and was lead in "Carousel" some years ago, has been inked to a regular term pact by Decca Recorders

On his kickoff platters, he'll be teamed with Tutti Camarata's orch.

M-G-M Plugging Disks, Pic Via Cuffo TV Show

Importance of TV as an outlet for diskery promotion was further pointed up last week when Metro, parent company of M-G-M Records, released a four-minute short plugging its new plc, "Love-ly to Look At," and the record company's release of the soundtrack album. Studio has printed 100 of these TV shorts and is currently distributing them cuffo around the country.

Short, which was conceived by Les Peterson, studio's radio-TV contactman, features an interview session between Coast disk jockey Gene Norman and Marge & Gower Champion who are featured in the Gene Norman and Marge & Gower Champion who are featured in the pic and on the album. Pic was made so that an M-G-M disk of the Champions singing "I Won't Dance" could be inserted in between the gab fest by the local TV station announcer. A copy of the platter is being shipped out with each print.

Short was preemed recently on KECA-TV, outlet of the American Broadcasting Co. in Hollywood.

Decca Catalog Format Change to Aid Listings

Decca Records has come up with a new format for its disk catalog which is aimed at simplifying the retailer problem of keeping the company's listing up-to-date. Under the new setup, Decca will issue cumulative numerical supplements every second month, which will "contain all new releases and deletions after the publication date of the main catalog. New catalogs, moreover, will be issued every six months instead of the former annual schedule.

Catalog service is being made available to retailers at $5 per annum.

Toledo, July 8.
John (Dizzy) Gilliesple, New York minutes of indecision, he decided to plead guilty, because "God told is due for a major boost from New York's pop music in radio outlet, WNEW. The indie is planning a major plugging drive around the band revival theme and will enlist its top jockeys, Martin Block and Art Ford, in the air campaign.

Under the aegis of the station's program director, Bill Kaland, WNEW already has slotted a "Bring Back the Band" 60-minute show for Saturdays. Kaland is dickering for Sy Oliver, vet band arranger and currently a Decca Records musical director, to emcee the show. The band show has been formatted to showcase the older bands along with such new crews as Ray Anthony, Ralph Flanagan, Buddy Morrow, Billy May and others.

The "Bring Back the Bands" idea will also be imbedded in the Block and Ford stanzas. Both deejays will probably-block out 15-minute stanzas in which they will plug bands. Along with the band comeback campaign, station will also pitch for a revival of dane-

Harbach Stays As ASCAP Prexy

Otto A. Harbach, prexy of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, will remain in that post at least until next spring as a result of the standoff on the ASCAP board on the naming of a new president. Harbach's term acutally ran out on June 1 but he agreed to remain until such time as the board comes up with a successor.

Current feeling on the board.

Current feeling on the board is that no progress will be made in reaching an agreement on the next ASCAP prez until a new board is elected early next year. At the present time, the body is split between the publishers, who want to retain Harbach, and a group of writers who have been pushing for Jack Yellen or Stanley Adams. Since a two-thirds vote is needed for the election of a new prez, the split on the board has resulted in a stalemate.

Juke Licensing

they voted in favor of reporting a compromise bill to the full committee in order to bring the subject up for consideration. The statement continued, however, with a declaration that "we do not believe the compromise bill meets the problem of compensating the creators of the musical composition for its, public performance for profit by the segment of industry presently exempt from such payment. In fact, that segment of industry (the jukehox industry) is the group of public users now getting such a free ride."

ting such a free ride."

The minority statement ended with a hope that "during the interval between the adjournment of this Congress and the convening of the next, the various segments of the music industry—creators, producers and users—will arrive at an equitable solution to lay before the next Congress early in its session." Industry-wide talks have in fact already been broached by the disk companies' trade group, the . Record Industry Assn. of America.

The original bill to amend the

The original bill to amend the Copyright Act would have given licensing organizations the right to charge lc-per-side-per-week on jukebox ops. This would have given an estimated added annual income of $5,000,000 to publishers and writers. The raise in the statutory rate, however, will produce nowhere near this income since the disk companies will be able to get substantial reductions in the statutory rates from the publishers in return for their cutting of publishers' tunes. Only publishers with substantial catalogs of standards will be able to command the full 3c rate.

Vs. Frizzell Postponed

Beaumont, Tex., July 8.
Scheduled hearing on breach-ofcontract suit brought by Jack Starnes, Jr., against William Orville "Lefty" Frizzell, folk entertainer, was postponed indefinitely here.
Judge Harold Clayton, before whom the hearing was scheduled in Federal court ordered the postponment after conferring with the

Starnes had requested a temporary injunction to prevent Frizzell from collecting royalties from songs and records and from appearing at any occasion not arranged by Starnes. Starnes contended he had a contract as Frizzell's agent and the entertainer has repudiated the contract.

cently displayed in "Of Thee I Sing," is a topdrawer rhythm item which should do well on the juke level.

Johnny Desmond: "It's Meant To Be That Way"."One Way Heart" (Coral). Johnny Desmond, one of the few of the younger crop of male vocalists who has been avoiding the big-voiced, echo-chambered attack on his etchings, has a pleasant and mildly commercial platter here. Desmond's got a neat style and a convincing technique; especially on ballads, and could be a beful platter entity if the market trend ever reverses field. He gives it rend ever reverses field. He gives in ordinary ballad, a topflight reading. One Way Heart," a cute rhythm offering, is belted out with spirit and should nab a good portion of the spins.

Bing Crosby-Jane Wyman: "Zing one of Guadalupe" (Decca). Bing Crosby and Jane Wyman, on "Zong," one of the brightest novelty items to hit the market in some time, should make this side a click commercial bet this summer. Tune, from the forthcoming Paramount pic, "Just For You," has a light rhythmic beat and a cute lyric. Both Miss Wyman and Crosby deliver for top impact. Miss Wyman solos the reverse, a mild novelty attempt, but even her okay warbling effort never brings it to life.

Percy Faith Orch: "Jamaican Rhumba" "Da - Du" (Columbia). Percy Faith Orch wide. The provided and the provided in the previously released etchings. Percy Faith Orch: "Jamaican Rhumba" "Da - Du" (Columbia). Percy Faith Orch: "Jamaican Rhumba" "Da - Du" (Columbia). Percy Faith orch has come up with another silck instrumental that is a sure bet to follow on the heels of its click "Delicado" side. On "Jamaican Rhumba," the orch hits with an ingratiating beat giving the Latino-flavored melody a sock car-arresting quality. With instrumental waxing steadily developing a strong following, this side is due for big returns on all levels. "Dadd" is a cute instrumental that deserves some play.

Benny Lee: "Pretty Bride"-"Can You Whistle, Johanna" (London).

Accents Big Record Sellers in England

Editor, Variery:

Read with interest in your issue of June 11 an article by Jimmy of June 11 an article by Jimmy Kennedy.

I just want to say that firstly I did not meet Mr. Kennedy whilst he was in London and therefore had little opportunity of correcting some of the facts which he gives in regards to records. Perhaps I should tell you, if you don't already know, that for some very considerable time we are pleased to say that Columbia records in Great Brittain have been by far the best-selling line in the disk industry, and many of the figures have been quite phenomenal. In this, we claim that not only have we promoted many well-known American artists, but also we have made a great number of British and Continental artists. The sales figures on quite a number of records have run from 200,000 to 400,000, and I say on quite a number of records because we have exceeded the beling of 150,000 records mentioned by Mr. Kennedy on many of our releases.

It is mentioned in an early paragraph the names of many British artists, practically all of which, with the exception of one name, record for one company, but in no case is a Columbia-European artist mentioned. mentioned.

mentioned.

May I bring to your notice, and I hope you will be good enough to print something to this effect in your paper, which I always read with great interest, that Teddy Johnson, a Columbia artist, was responsible with his first record for making the title, "Beloved, Be Faithful," which in fact started of an American publishing company in England.

an American publishing company in England.

Then we have Ronnie Ronalde, Josef Locke, the late Steve Conway, Les Compagnons de la Chanson, Eddie Calvert, Georges Guetary, Flanagan & Allen, the Ray Martin and Norris Paramor Orchestras.

Please do not feel that I am in any way critical of what has been written by Mr. Kennedy, but I feel that a full picture should be given of the British record industry.

You will, of course, realize that I have omitted such big selling American artists on Columbia here as Doris Day, Jo Stafford, Frankie Laine, Guy Mitchell, Mitch Miller, Johnnie Ray, all of which he had the pleasure of promoting and achieving success with their records in this country.

Under the new system, the sustained performance fund, heretofore based on a five-year average, has been revised to give writers the option of selecting a 10-year base for their rating. Cleffers who served in the armed forces during World War II have also been priviliged to select their best five years out of any 10 years as the base for their performance rating. The rate of promotions for these cleffers has also been raised to the maximum 250 points even if they are under the 500-point class.

Break for Lower End

Writers in the lower classes will also get a break in that their performance and availability ratings will be pegged at the level of October, 1950, when the 60-20-20 plan went into effect. Many of year, depending upon activity, the availability rating for any elefter will not be reduced for the next five years even if his performances drop. If, however, a cleffer's performance rating goes up, his availability will rise by 40% of his performance rating promotion.

The system will act as an insurance policy against drastic fluctuations in individual incomes since 30% of the total writers' fund will remain on a more or less even keel for a five-year period. Under the 60-20-20 system, a bad fall in performances meant a violent drop in ASCAP income.

The promotion and demotion processing value of the previous 20% of the sustained performances meant a violent drop in ASCAP income. of years.

New plan also modifies the amount of money which the writers classification committee can allot to works which have a unique prestige value not reflected in the number of performances which they receive. Plan limits this fund to $35,000 each quarter instead of the previous 20% of the sustained performance fund. At the same time, however, the new plan sharply raises the performance point value of symphonic and concert works. A work from 36 to 40 minutes, for instance, now gets a 44-point rating instead of the previous 16.

The preem of the French Casino on the site of the defunct Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe marks the first authentic Gallic invasion of an entire nitery show in some years. This combination should spell success for the current venture, although the spot will be following lines established by Lou Walters at the nearby Latin Quarter, to this date the most successful cafe on the Broadway scene. The opening show last Friday (4) demonstrates that there is much to offer in this version of the French nightclub show. Martini has imported one of the most elaborate sets of costumes seen in anitary. One particular sequence of Mme. Pompadour raiment inclicates the costs of reproduction in the U. There is much that can be cut to make this layout more compact. The editing shouldn't be too difficult inabmuch as the points of least interest are easily spotted.

In the two years that have alapsed since she made her London cabaret debut, Julie Wilson has played in two West End muslcals and his built up a following for her stylized, sophisticated vocalizings. Unless the heat wave beats the forecasts, the cumulative result of these two years of spadework should pay off handsomely in this farewell engagement before returning to New York.

Throughout the time she was working in legit Miss Wilson resolutely refused to double in cabaret, claiming the strain would be too great and the resultant performances inferior. That was a wise policy because, while doing just a little over the standard half hour, she puts everything she's got in the act to make sure it goes with more than the conventional zing.

There are clear signs, too, of careful planning and rehearsing. To eliminate any doubt on the backgrounding, Phil Moore came over specially from Hollywood to accompany her on the ivories, and in some of the deft arrangements. The resulting routine is smartly fashioned by mixing a few new tunes with some of the hits associated with her previous performances. AGVA's Deejay Ban 'Unenforceable,' Sez Union Administrator Irving

Jack Irving, national administrator of the American Gulld of Variety Artists, has declared that the recent AGVA ruling forbidding performers to appear on disk jookey shows emanating from cafes is unenforceable. Irving declared that the rule, passed despite his recommendations, is primarily a bad plece of legislation. He feels that it's improper to forbid a performer to appear on a show which may get publicity for him as well as the spot in which he's appearing, unless the performer does his act. If the remarks are impromptu and do not touch on regular routines, Irving said, there's no reason to prohibit appearances on cafe disk jockey shows.

AGVA Set to Hike Benefit Minimums

The American Guild of Variety Artists will move to hike the benefit rates of performers from one-seventh of the weekly salary, with $285 as the highest minimum, to one-fifth of the weekly wage with low upped to $400. Motion to that effect will be introduced at the next executive board meeting, date of which is still to be set.

New legislation indicates that the union is seeking to make bene-fit terms stiffer than previously in an effort to steer what have been benefit shows into straight paid shows.

Union's national administrator Jack Irving stated that he'll recommend nixing the annual police benefit at Miami Beach this season. This affair had been getting its talent gratis, according to Irving. He said that he expected some Miami Beach delegations shortly in order to make arrangements to have the gendarmes get the acts for free. He'll ask that the performers get the prevailing benefit rates.

AGVA Bans 'Rewards' For Bd. Members on Insurance

Motion was made necessary because of prolonged wrangling on the plans being solicited by the union. One board member, Murray White, has been working on the plan for some time. Murray, a singer, is also an insurance broker.

Nancy Andrews caroms from recent Stem musical, "Touch and Go," and as standby for Ethel Merman in "Call Me Madam," to make a pleasing impression in her Vegas debut. Instead of bleating "Bill," as followup, chirp should have stuck to her forte of light comedy tunes. Tendency to flat shows up noticeably in the ballad, but can be covered during frilly ditties. Miss Morrissey, who was recently at La Vie En Rose, N. Y., is a platinum blonde, so round and fully packed, with a hoydenish manner of selling songs. Sex smolders, but without the slightest offensiveness. Via vocal nuances and arch looks and gestures she kept house's attention riveted on her opening night—no mean feat in this well-groomed grogshop. She left the crowd yammering for more and a 15-minute intermission was inserted to cool the environs because topining is another singer, Champ Butler, and following Miss Morrissey without a lapse would have been to ugh, considering his straightaway styling.
Butler, rising off the rep he's gained from Columbia diskings over past two years, made a typical opening night mistake by doing at least three too many songs. Consequently he dissipated his peak effectiveness to a degree. Best received were "Them There Eyes," "Down Yonder" and "Because Of You." He's effective on such ballads as "Younger Than Springtime" and "Indian Summer," but should drop such melodramatic posturing as "Dry Land," Butler has a freshead, boyish appearance and relaxed delivery.

Cues during Miss Morrissey's routines are difficult, but Gross' combo flawlessly executes 'em, adding a lot of color and verve to act. Butler, in disking, is accustomed to big orchestral framing, replete with gimmicking. Gross and boys give an amazing facsimile of same. Gatineau Club gives its customers an integrated revue this week, blending acts, girls and band in a compact, smoothflowing unit with maximum punch and drawing plenty of palms. Produced and staged by June Oliver, "The Black Magic Revue" stars Jerry Cooper who emcess, sings, plays trombone and mugs with a verve that draws begoffs even from the youngsters who know him only as a disk voice. Cooper's solo work (he's on several times) has him using an Irish collection, including the inevitable "McNamara's Band," and some nostalgia with "Red Red Robin," "Way Down Yonder," "Kiss of Fire" and "Old Black Magic" a la Daniels.

Return of Gracie Barrie to this big hotel's Driftwood Room proves that when the spot books in an act that's known hereabouts, the business will be there. In recent weeks, patronage has been sparse, but with advent of Miss Barrie they began to come in enough numbers to bring the black side of the ledger into view again.

Easy working, sure in her approach to her special-material lineup of laugh-lined lyrie ideas, Miss Barrie holds them all the way with her song-tales of "Sunday Kind Of Love;" a smart satirization on effect of TV on Tennessee mountaineers; her standard "Tm a Litvak and He's a Gallitz," version of "Feudin," a topical "When A Republican Loves A Democrat," and for the encore, "Galitzlaner Rhumba." Ted Lewis, Geraldine Du Bois, Manor & Mignon, Meribeth Old, Elroy Peace, Tung Pin Soo, The Ben Yost Colleens (4), Riverside Starlets (12), Ted Lewis Orch; no cover or minimum.

The seasonal high at the Riverside is Ted Lewis. His show usually means the beginning of the big name parade for the summer in this showcase, and the yearly event is accorded the reception of a fave son just back from the wars. Everybody turns out.

The sparkler in this Fourth of July package is still the old high-natter. Moving through the routines as an emcee or barker, kibit-zer or heckler, Lewis never detracts from the headliners but points up their act, enhances them with gestures and song-talk.

"My Hat, My Hands, and My Cane" nostalgically recalls his 48 years in show biz for opener. He's brought on by George Moro's starlets in an extravagant dance done in tophats, white ties and canesand little else.

A production salad with French Cressing follows. The Four Colleens, Manor & Mignon, Geraldine Du Bois and Elroy Peace cavort to "Pigalle." With Apache dance and a semi-Can Can thrown in, show is off to a fast start. Quick follow-up is "Leader of the Band" with baton-twirling Lewis prancing through the bit and Four Colleens singing.

by is Leader of the Band with laton-twirling Lewis prancing through the bit and Four Colleens singing.

In a sideshow barker spiel, Lewis brings on Meribeth Old who pretzels atop a table. She contorts beautifully into a variety of knots, climaxed by drapling her legs over the edge of the table.

"Let's Be Buddies" is a suggestive little piece with Du Bois and Lewis exchanging lyrics. "I'm the Face and I'm the Body" is next, with the obvious roles taken by each. This frank duet is best for laughs.

In a charm sequence with Lewis, talking the lyrics of "You're Such a Pretty Thing," Mignon floats prettily through a dance, folding like a flower at the end of the number. Manor & Mignon duet begins from here, spot picking up Mignon from floor into the arms of partner for a thrilling ballroom dance, then a paso doble whirl.

Inevitable "Me and My Shadow" is next frame with Elroy Peace following him through a flawless walk and gesture, while Four Colleens lend lyrics. Sequel to this is Lewis and clarinet with "Tiger Rag."

usual hassles, but operation is sailing smoothly now with excellent biz forecast all summer. Entertainment policy has been changed to allow three full shows nightly instead of continuous and alternating—all for the better.

Martha Davis & Spouse (Calvin Ponder) are a cinch to pack the Supper Club Room every show. Warbling and hosting of Donald Novis is pleasing contrast, satisfying rounders who like their music on the dulcet side.

Miss Davis, a sepia shouter and 88-er, is a vet of Coast bistros. Her frequent stops in Vegas have resulted in the accumulation of a sizable clientele who rush to her openings and keep rooms filled for, duration. A woman of extralarge proportions, she has attributes of high humor, lusty songfare, flashy pianistics and bassist spouse who gives some spectacular rhythm touches.

Bouncy opener, "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone," segues quickly into medley of "Dinah" and "Down Yonder." Spreading into blues, Miss Davis warbles and bongs "Hongkong Blues," and crowd-pleasing "Honky Tok Train." Switches for a terrif mood piece, "Back Street," accomping herself on celeste as well as the spinet.

Ray English, the other newcomer to present bill, has little to give this setup. He relies too much on gabbing (with some pretty thin material) for overall impact and the only time he draws attention is when he goes into one of his various pratfalls. However, the injection of such an obvious gimmick, even in this saloon, is larding of the most questionable sort. Despite apparent talent for a smaller spot, English suffers from the fact that a patter comedian of this type has never taken in the Bellevue.

Holdovers, the Cleff Dwellers, continue to look very good but sing the same complicated numbers. If it weren't for the femme side of the act and the tricky patterns outfit perform during each song (due obviously to the demands of TV) they would leave a lot to be desired in the over-arranged combo chirping department.

With the town gone western for the Fourth of July Reno Rodeo, show has a yippee tint. Programming will bring it better than average success.

Bob Howard, star of "Sing It Again" radio program, leads this procession. In his quavering highs and blasting middle register, the rotund singer-pianist is fun to watch. "I Never See Maggie Alone," "It's Magic" and "Tm in the Mood For Love" are comically displayed in the honky-tonk vein. Howard gets away from song briefly for a "player piano" bit (which gets stuck) and "Tea For Two" business.

The Rio Bros., slapstick trio, get most of their, laughs with action. Words and music, or lines, seem incidental to the stanza, although some clever material shows through on occasion. A slow-motion robbery gets good returns. A comic dance in scarecrow fashion with galloping, skipping and shuffling, is great to watch. Encore is a "Cisco Kid" takeoff. The action gets belly-laughs.

Leo Diamond is a harmonica player who puffs entertainingly on some elaborate arrangements like "Jealousy," "You're Just in Love" (both parts) and "St. Louis Blues." He achieves some nice effects. "Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy" is done on an electric harmonica.

Terry True Dancers open and close this show. Pleked for their full-length profiles, the girls do little other than look good, and that's fine with just about everybody. A soloist usually dances with the beats for a backdrop.

Paul Pendarvis' orch sounds good on show and dancing. The Rounders spell the band. Bass, piano, guitar, clarinet and vibes make up the crew for fine intermission music.

Joel Grey, who breaks into this talent showcase after a run in "Borscht Capades" and his first nitery at the Chez Paree, Chicago, in May, has a clearly marked big-time potential. Only, 19 and looking three years younger, Grey has a juve virtuoso touch which still has to be leavened with more experience before his potential can be fulfilled. He's the son, incidentally, of Mickey Katz, the Yiddish dialect bandleader.
Grey is a better-than-average hoofer in the ballet genre; he's also a fair singer and good mimic. He parlays all his talents for a strong and immediate impact, but there's a somewhat mechanical quality to his performance which blocks that needed communications link with the customers.
Grey has evidently been coached in the Danny Kaye school of comedics. He's a lean, nervous, graceful type with a flair for the spectacular antic. He comes on fast with a "Zip-a-dee-do-dah" vocal-terping whirl and neatly segues into a mock nostalgic number which capitalizes on his youth via a series of gag reminiscences about the last five years.

It's a wow. He's no stranger to effective on this return.

Ex-champ employs a couple of stooges working among the customers to pan his acting efforts for plenty laughs. It's all well-timed

Rosenbloom also sings a song or

DOMINIQUE Magic

French Casino, N. Y.
Dominique, a singularly named youngster, has an act that combines som: of the more salient features of several wk, turns in the U. S. He does card manipulations, various magle tricks, but the greater strength of his turn lies in his thievery. He's an expert pickpocket and during the course of his act winds up with enough watches to put several fences into business.

He works rapidly and expertly. Most of his tricks have been seen before. He makes off with suspenders, wallets, purses, and even an undershirt. He's sufficiently strong to hold up in most media.

Comedy Acro
3 Mins.
French Casino, N. Y.
The Dassie Bros. have been around for some time on the theatre circuits, but have been unreported until now in Varitary's New Act files. Duo work expertly at knockabout acrobatics. Imports are dressed in gob garb and work rapidly to show well-routined line of comedy tricks.

The lads take a goodly amount of corporeal punishment whether it's in the pratfall or slapping department. There are really no outstanding tricks in their catalog, but the individual antics are strung together so expertly that they give the impression of doing feats of greater prodigiousness than they can really provide.

LES BAXTER & CHORUS (13) BONNIE & BROOKS NOTABLES (5) Choral Songs and Dance 32 Mins. Thunderbird, Las Vegas

Thunderbird, Las Veras
Les Baxter assembled his polished singers, used to such outstanding success on Capitol Records, added dance duo of Bonnie & Brooks, and spotted the Notables for a package that is distinctive and musically superior. For his preem, he is fortunate in having the production aid of Thunderbird producer Hal Braudis, in presentation of two big specials. These, with Bonnie & Brooks and & Asthryn Duffy Dansations house line, stack up to socko aural and visual delights.

tion of two big specials. Inesc, with Bonnie & Brooks and Kathryn Duffy Dansations house line, stack up to socko aural and visual delights.

Baxter's song group, consisting of six males, six femmes — all lookers—uncorks a honey right at the start. This is 'Brazil,' with Bonnie & Brooks' exciting Latin flavoring and Dansations the added dressing. Baxter is at the keyboard throughout and patters all intros to various tunes. Tribute to Capitol artists for whom choraleers backgrounded on many platters is next on agenda, with "My Heart Cries," and "Beautiful Brown Eyes," for Jimmy Wakely; "Mona Lisa" and "Too Young" for Nat (King) Cole.

Baxter brings out the Notables from his choristers for a brief spell. Combo, known for turns on Dinah Shore AM cycle, consists of three guys and two willowy blonde femmes. Warble "If You Feel Like Singing, Sing" and "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," latter with extra eyeful provided by cute Kathy Phillips.

Entire group joins in "Temptation," shighlighting Bonnie & Brooks' sexy terping. Brilliant wardrobing of this pair, incidentally, was designed by Baxter himself. Big salvos greet the chorus reprise of their "Blue Tango" click, Baxter pianos a novelty "Chopsticks" which turns into a fandy and flashy "Mambo Cuba."

For "Blues," from "An American in Paris," Baxter has devises some intricate thrushing by the chorus, plus moderne terping by Bonnie & Brooks and augmented color from Dansations. This forms show's finale and receives an ovation.

Although Baxter has quite an en-Although Baxter has quite an en-dependence of present, he has made something unusual which could hit theatres and hotel circuits. It's a class act worthy of top spots. Will.

GINETTE WANDER Songs 10 Mins. French Casino, N. Y.

Trench Casino, N. Y.

Ginette Wander, who does production as well as solo spots in the French Casino session, shows well-developed pipes and good projection in her U. S. debut. Tunes she has selected in her brief solo turn aren't the type usual with French chanteuses.

Songs are brief and relatively free of heavy dramatics. She has a good melodic accent and could do well on the cafe circuits or production numbers in theatres.

THREE HOLLY GIRLS

Palace, N. Y.

Radio trio out of Bridgeport is a conventional harmony group with no special attack that sets it apart. It's an attractive unit, however, with a nice flair for the rhythm idiom.

With more experience, unit should be ready for wider spottings.

French Casino, N. Y.

Joan Laste is one of the more accomplished nitery ballerinas. This French import has a high degree of technical know-how, routines punctuated with applause-winning spins, and a personable projection.

Miss Laste shows up well in the classic as well as the more modern ballet terps. She spins in and out of the show in production as well as solo spots and makes a deep audience impression in all her endeavors.

ESTELLE & ALPHONSO Acrodance 5 Mins. Apollo, N. Y.

Apollo, N. Y.

Estelle & Alphonso, acroterp team with a Latino flavoring, impress as an okay bet for filler vaude and TV assignments. Duo, only ofay turn on the Apollo bill, has a neatly paced routine the builds to clicko closing.

Estelle does all of the acroterping as her male pard beats out exotic rhythms on the bongo drum. Gal projects plenty of excitement as she taps, twirls and twists. She nabs big windup mitt for a fast-paced series of precision somersaults.

Paul White has played Harlem

Palace, N. Y.

Ed & Sandy, 3 Holly Girls, Sis & Sonny Arthurs, Paul White, Three Arnauts; Yvonne, Clavel & Farrar; Benson & Mann, Leon & Eleanas Circus, Jo Lombardi houserch; "The Half-Breed" (RKO), reviewed in Variety April 16, '52.

recients of vaude-robbed outlanders must have invaded the Palace for the bill opening on the holiday (4), because every act was generously received and some of them were accoladed beyond their actual strength. Nevertheless, layout as a whole is a better than fair collection.

The biggest mitt when caught went to Paul White, Negro comedy singer (New Acts). Hight along-side him in favor were Sis & Sonny Arthurs, in their sizzling eccentric terps and knockabouts.

Another standard, the Three Arnauts, rack up a fine score with their instrumentals and birdcalls, always good for chuckles. Ball-roomology is taken care of nicely in the sixth slot via Yvonne, Clavel & Farrar. The male lifts and spins two gals and they wind up a three-part stanza with a neat flamenco. In next to closing, Irving Benson - Jack Mann start off leisurely and look like a dud until the diminutive Benson gets going with his jokes and lunacies as Mann foils unobstrusively. Some of the material is n.s.h., but Mann suddenly makes a save midway with a straight song, "Prisoner of Love," that surprises the mob with its okay crooning. From there on they're in.

There are three other turns in the teeing off Ed & Sandy, trampoline; Three Holly Girls, singers, and the closing Leon & Eleanas Circus (all New Acts). Jo Lombardi's orch is effective, as always.

Casino, Toronto
Toronto, July 4.
Jack Smith, Paul Rich, Ann Russell, Day & Babs, Pauline Thorne & Escorts (3), Jimmie Cameron, Archie Stone House Orch; "3 Steps North" (UA).

Every act on this bill stays on too long, stretching the stage stanza to 32 minutes, with Jack Smith taking a lengthy 27. All the turns are excellent but they should know when to bow off, judging from customer mutters.

With Jimmie Cameron as singing m.c. commendably skippering, proceedings, bill gets underway with the snappy terp-taps and eccentries of Bobby Day & Babs. Charming Ann Russell can drop her Louella Parsons fight broadcast, which nobody up here gets and is an inept waste of time. Her travesty on femmen hierry singers is penetrating and funny; ditto her standard Gloria Swanson as Norma Desmond, an uncanny and successful takeoff.

Highlight of the bill is Pauline mond, an uncanny and successful takeoff.

Highlight of the bill is Pauline Thorne & Escorts for their triple knockabouts, with the two men and a woman in tails and tophats on for an adagio plus triple slow-motion mayhem for tangles. Paul Rich still socks with his harmonica playing, notably his "1812 Overture" and a segue into "St. Louis Blues," with bagpipe effects and a wham "Tuxedo Junction."

What the customers are waiting for, however, is smilin' Jack Smith, who bounces onstage with his "I Want to be Happy." The ebullient singer switches to "I'll Walk Alone" for tempo change, then into a melange of Scots, Irish and Lating American medley, and a click travesty on Johnnie Ray that begs him off. Nice, diversified bill but needs cutting.

Johnnie Ray (2), Gary Morton,
Four Lads, Bud & Cece Robinson,
Wells & Four Fays, Joe Reisman
Radio City Orch (17); "California Conquest" (Col).

Conquesty (Col).

Events are repeating themselves in this 4,000-seater. A few months ago, Martin & Lewis opened here to a screaming, shrieking audience comprised mostly of teenagers. Now another sensation, emotion-ripping Johnnie Ray, is turning the same riotous trick.

The previous script was repeated at the first of five opening day 4th of July shows. There was the same Martin & Lewis pandemonium let loose on Ray as nearshysterical feminine eruptions greethed him and punctuated his every trobbing outburst. July 4th firecrackers seemed soothing in comparison to the noise generated by his appearance and efforts.

The more Ray exploded vocal temotion and the more he sobbed in his songs, the louder the fans out front screamed. The gentler sex teenagers in particular apparently went through pleasant emotional anguish during the shenanigans that accompanied his songology.

At show caught, Ray, at the plano and away from it, excitedly sledgehammered his warbling way through such of his disk clued. "Walkin" My Baby Back Home," "Mr. Sum," "Broken Hearted" and "Cry" in his excitement-arousing, distinctive style. Each number registered socko and had much of the audience in a frenzy. When away from the plano, he had his own accompanist.

It's a fast-moving, lively stage show from start to finish. Ray has been surrounded by four pleasing acts, each top-drawer of its kind. Played in front of a local pickup band fronted by Ray's own conductor, Joe Reisman, and emceed by filp and amusing Gary Morton, whose own brashness provides an added fillip, the layout never sputchers or drags.

On his own, Morton has a whirl at laugh-loaded impressions, gags and yarns, and emerges clicko. Youthful steppers Bud & Cece Robinson, local faves as the result of numerous previous visits, again hit the applause jackpot. Harmonizing of the Four Lads, Okeh recording group, is endowed with added ear appeal by distinctive arrangements and pleces of business, and the boys land solidly. The tumbling of Wells and the 4 Fay girls gets the show off to a dashing start.

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, July 4.

Billy Eckstine, Paul Gilbert,
Stan Kramer Co. (3), 4 Evans,
Louis Basil Orch; "Winning Team"
(WB).

This one-weeker has a potent asset in Billy Eckstine, always a strong boxoffice lute here. Rest of the bill has been aimed at the family audience and should please all factions. Long holiday weekend should make this one of the better grossers of the past few months.

Eckstine in his yearly visit seems even more relaxed than months.

Eckstine in his yearly visit seems even more relaxed than usual and gets off well with his standard starter, "Everything I Have Is Yours," and punches over the offibeat tune, "Song of Songs." Stylist rings the bell with "I Apologize" and follows even more strongly with his latest, "Hold Me Close." For a current offering he does "Kiss of Fire," but as always, his singing of "Caravan" with expert voice control is the wrapper-upper.

Paul Gilbert, with the exception of his opening back flip, seems to have abandoned his physical type of humor and switch by the young comedian registers better. He anchors some traffic jokes pegged around the local situation and gets some yocks with a crying and laughing jag tied in with some marital quips. There are some video jokes which lead into his clincher of a doctor operating on television, really cornball stuff that hits.

Stan Kramer, with the aid of his clincher of a doctor operating on television, really cornball stuff that hits.

Stan Kramer, with the aid of his parents, displays some unusual puppets in a magician who can actually do some tricks and a drunk who keeps tumbling all over the platform. His strob Bill Robinson in his famous stair dance is a remarkable replica and his Betty Hutton doll is also a strong piece of business. All three handlers work the final cakewalk strob number for a hefty hand.

The Four Evans is a standard act which is always well received in this family house. Brother and sister start off with some jive and then bring on mom and dad for some nostalgic softshoe. Younger femme does some neat acrodancing as a break and then males team up for some bright buck and wing. All four get together for some tandem taps before shuffling off to brisk applause. Louis Basil keeps things together tightly through the hour.

Apollo, N. Y.

Duke Ellington Orch (15) with Betty Roche, Jimmy Grissom; Roll & Tapp, Pigmeat & Co. (3), Estelle & Alphonso, Jackie Mabley; "The Nevadan" (Col).

With Duke Ellington heading up the bill at the Apollo this sesh, house has a slick revue format that's excellently pegged for the holiday trade. Ellington his this Harlem flagship about once a year and in each trip purveys his class showmanship and expert musicianship for clicko results. Although the orch dominates the proceedings, the supporting acts get plenty of opportunity to show (Continued on page 49)

That means that the price will be about 10% lower than the market as of approximately July 21. If Decca's current 8½ price holds firm, Decca stockholders will be able to pick up their additional shares at about $8 each.

Stockholders will have 15 or 16 days from the date of mailing notices to make up their mind on whether they want to buy. It is expected that the options will expire about Aug. 8. Whatever is not purchased by present stockholders will be picked up by two Wall St. underwriting firms in an arrangement with Decca. They are Reynolds & Co. and Laurence M. Marks & Co.

Reappraise Telethons

Berle marathoned for the past few years, collected half the amount that was reported.

The major problem in getting a furure picture of the donations is the elimination of phony pledges. There are those who call in amounts which they never intend making good: There are also "practical jokers" who pledge large amounts in the names of celebrities. There are also those who refuse to make good because their names weren't mentioned during the show.

their names weren't mentioned during the show.

One major example of the practical joker was seen in the case of a caller who said he was Thomas J. Watson, International Business Machines topper, and who said he was subscribing $150,000. Watson later said that he knows of no one who in these days of high taxes who can afford to shell out sums who can anore to sheet out sums of that kind.

The last Berle show, on which $570,000 was pledged as against $1,127,000 the year previous, cut down the pledged figure because the Berle telephone force double-backed all phone and wire checked all phone and wire pledges of more than $50. The operators made almost as many calls as were received. As a re-sult, a major part of the phony pledges were eliminated at the Surefire collections those Surence conections are those made by and for children. If "Uncle Milty" waves to Junior for $1 that sum is sure to come in. The very large sums, some of which are arranged in advance, are also certain to be collected.

The very large sums, some of which are arranged in advance, are also certain to be collected.

There have been some exceptions to the low average t elethon takes, particularly on the Coast. It's claimed that the Cerebral Palsy tyid-pitch on KECA-TV, Hollywood, May 24, exceeded the $280,000 pledged. Bob Hope emceed. The Palsy Fund solicitations over KGO-TV, San Francisco, announced $450,000 and returns up to now are $300,000 Jack Webb conferenciered this longrunner.

Expensive for Webs

The telethons are a terrific expense to the networks. Time and personnel costs, administration and telephone bills are staggering. The performer also would like to get rid of this type of contribution. For example, a performer who gets $1,000 for guest shots, would gladly contribute $500 not to appear, but because of tax ruling he cannot do so. A shot on a telethon frequently spoils his chances of appearing on a paying show. Acts are frequently in the middle in situations of this kind.

However, the various charities, while not completely happy with the telethon situation, feel that whatever monies come in as a result of coaxing by top names in show business, may not have come in otherwise. Besides the lengthy plugging on the air has an educational effect on the greater part of the public, which to the cause's benefit. Yet, there is no real education on the nature of cancer, etc., on the telethons.

The charities are hampered by the fact many who might contribute feel that the various funds are in good shape because of the large sum that's announced. Some switch their coin to another endeavor.

One school of thought holds that because of the comparatively low sum collected, it would be better if heads of the drives would run a couple of shows in large areas in two or three cities and come up with as much money and considerably less overhead. There's another school that feels that the telethon only exhibits its possibilities under the present TV system. With pay-as-you-view TV, the charity could get the charges that would be collected through the telephone company for listening or the quarter that's inserted in the meter. Pay-as-you-go tele might also increase the number of collections. One school of thought holds that

At any rate, the telethon system is in line for a reappraisal. The increasing number of applications increasing number of applications for marathon performances will inevitably invite diminishing return both from the public and from performers, as well as the networks and individual stations whose contribution is costly. Many feel that the peak of telethon has already passed and charities had better look for other types of columniater.

Those who like comedy that is inherent in situation and hinges on development of relations between people will like Arnold Sundgaard's new play, "The Kilgo Run," given premiere showing at Barter Theatre given premiere showing at Barter Theatre.

There is no smearing on of bright remarks for the sake of the wit in Sundgaard's play. Too often in comedy a concocted situation is presented merely as a vehicle for a variety of biological and other wisecracks.

a variety of biological and other wisecracks.

Sundgaard succeeds in having humor come as essential to the situation. Olga, cafe keeper in a quiet Minnesota town, can worry about her teenage daughter's fancies while she operates a pool room which is also funeral home, high school recreation center and church. She works up a sermon to double for the preacher and is understandably disappointed when the preacher appears. From her cafe headquarters she carries on liquor running for Chicago gangs, gets paid off in counterfeit. There's natural humor there.

The plot develops when Ruby Hansen, on parole from a penitentiary liquor sentence, stops off at Olga's, thinking to get a job as far from liquor centers as possible. There she finds Eddie Kilgo, Chicago Cubs' star pitcher, holding out for a high priced contract. Asked what a Kilgo run is, Eddie says, "It's a common saying the hardest run in baseball is the run you make of Eddie Kilgo."

Repercussions of Chicago violence are heard at Olga's and Eddie lence are heard at Olga's and Eddie Repercussions of Chicago violence are heard at Olga's and Eddie undertakes a liquor run which leads him at 80 miles per hour over Minnesota roads and back to Olga's with the truck still loaded. At the end of the second act Ruby has caught on to the liquor business, the liquor-loaded truck is in Olga's barn and a federal revenuer is on hand to investigate the setup. To this reviewer solution seemed impossible, but a plausible solution comes neatly in a very short third act.

In this simple story Sundgaard's chief interest is the interplay of reactions among characters. With compassion and without sentimentality he describes relations between baseball star and parolee, between mother and daughter, between adolescent boy and girl and describes. reactions of people as a group. There is a robustness and understanding in the treatment. There is suggestion of pageantry which Sundgaard has used extensively in other plays.

Contrast offered between small town quietness and Chicago violence furnishes a contrapuntal theme that reminds us that the author has been working as libretist for musicals. Last year he held a Guggenheim fellowship for that sort of work.

Sundgaard, who directed the production, brought Rickard Carlyle and Brooke Fleming to Abingdon for the roles of Eddie and Ruby. They and Barter's Dorothy LeVern offer expert performances, with obvious understanding of what the play is about.

Keith Michael, as the waiter whose, mind "works slow and stubile," and Bryarly Lee, as the high school senior daughter, used dance effectively in playing the adolescents. Mel Fillini arranged the dances and in two entrances of his own uses dance techniques with humor and spirit. Robert Gallico was hard to understand Monday night in a too-thick dialect and a good bit of the bucolic humor of his part was lost. Mark Spencer was credible as the revenuer.

An orchestra of eight, recruited locally, will be used.

The cafe set, where all action takes place, is done by Mack Statham with simplicity and effective suggestion of quietness of small town life.

"Kligo Run" avoids slickness and has a suggestion, of offbeat that is characteristic of Sundgaard's work. It is a play that should go over east of the Hudson as well as here in the mountains.

Aimed at starting the tear-ducts to drain, Mark Trachtenberg's The Delicate Line," the first of the four new plays to be tested this summer at the Ivy Tower Playhouse, Spring Lake, N. J., will only wet the eyes of those who have led a life sheltered from pulp magazines, movies and radio. It probably won't be long before television discovers the invalided but noble little woman who loves and suffers for a noaccount rascal from her wheelchair. Trachtenberg's heroine has been an invalid from the waist down since she was felled by a truck at the age of nine. She is still a woman from that portion of the anatomy up, so her emotions are in a constant turmoil, indeed, when she allows herself to marry a weakling, knowing all the while that he wants her only for her money, which will save his family's homestead.

When she is brought to his home after the wedding she meets her groom's understanding and stalwart brother, a widower with two children, his domineering and frustrated sister, his mistress and the old family retainer, who has nursed him since babyhood. It is only a matter of time to wait before (1) the brother falls in love with her and wants to marry her, (2) there is a scene between the sister and the girl in the wheel chair in which the sister tells all, (3) the girl is going to have a wee one, (4) there is a scene between the mistress and the suffering one in which mistress slaps the girl, who falls from the wheelchair and does not have baby, (5) girl leaves with boy's old family retainer and sister leaves alone, and (6) boy, ennobled and made strong by all the events, goes after girl. There is also the scene for the girl to give the dead and the keys to the house to the boy.

He'll return east early in September for preliminary preparations for the Playwrights Co. production of his new play, "The Better Angels," which will go into rehearsal in December under direction of Joshua Logan. After a short tryout tour, the show will open on Broadway in February.

'Everyman' Angels

"Everyman," 16th century drama announced for revival on Broadway this fall for the benefit of the American Heart Assn., is budgeted at $60,000. Since the potential profits go to the charity, backers will not receive any profit, but will be repaid at 6% interest from the profits. The producer is listed as Everyman Associates.

According to a budget breakdown submitted to prospective investors, the preliminary expenses will be $39,000, including $17,000 for production, $14,250 for rehearsals and $7,750 for miscellaneous. Bonds and deposits will require an estimated $9,500 more, leaving a cash reserve of $11,500. Weekly operating expenses are estimated at $12,110, including $425 for "contingencies."

William Miles is listed as managing director of the project, with Paul Vroom as general manager, Arthur Cantor as pressagent and Vincent Bowditch production stage manager. Carmen Mathews is slated for the leading role in the play, which will be staged by Herbert V. Gellendre, with choreography by Doris Humphrey, music by Norman Lloyd, scenery and lighting by Donald Oenslager, and costumes conceived by Motley and executed by Edith Lutyens.

Another dividend, this time amounting to $12,000, was recently paid by "Kiss Me, Kate," bringing the total distributed profit on the Cole Porter-Sam and Bella Spewack musical comedy to $1,050,000 as of last May 5. The Lemuel Ayers-Saint Subber production, originally financed at $180,000 and costing $174,000, opened Dec. 30. 1948, and had a 1,077-performance run through July 28, 1951.

According to the latest accountant's statement, the show had additional income of $4,223, less $1,-539 expenses (including the management's $442 share of the operating loss on the London production from Dec. 29, 1951, through Feb. 23 of this year). Olney, Md., July 2.

Mia Slavenska and Frederic Franklin prove that fine ballet artists can also be practical, shrewd business entrepreneurs. The ir strawhat ballet package, a somewhat watered-down version of their Ballet Variante touring company of the past few seasons, should be a welcome shot in the arm to the revival-ridden barn circuit. A formula which has become a standard part of bigtime show biz proves to be a happy innovation for its offspring of the barn trail.

Company of 11 dancers and two pianists which teed off a seven-week summer season at Olney Theatre last week, is a compact, polished outfit of youngsters led by a quartet of ballet greats. Despite a somewhat nervous start in a rather routine, coloriess interpretation of musical excerpts from Cesar Franck, outfit shows solid preparation and assurance in its subsquent numbers. Routine is unusually ambitious and varied for any company, ranging all the way from the strictly classical to extreme modern. Moss Harts to Explore 'Lady' for Miss Carlisle

Kifty Carlisle, who last week concluded a brief tour in a special strawhat production of "Lady in the Dark," planes to Europe today (Wed.) with her playwright-husband Moss Hart and producer Joseph M. Hyman. While in England, the actress-singer will discuss a proposed London production of the Hart-Kurt Weill musical drama, in which Gertrude Lawrence originally starred on Broadway in 1940-41.

Hart and Hyman are going to London to try to cast leading parts in the former's untitled new play, adapted from the Edgar Mittel-holzer novel, "Shadows Move Among Them," which Hyman and Bernard Hart, the playwright's brother, will co-produce.

However, that is dependent on Benthall's availability, if he is finally signed for the direction. In any case, Hammond has revised his plan for an extended tryout and now intends to bring the William Archibald dramatization of the Henry James novel to Broadway early in November after about a four-week tuneup tour. He has budgeted the production at $60,000.

Sufficient success already has attended the Council of Living Theatre's campaign to revitalize the "road" to make practically certain that it will be healthier and more of a reality than for many years. This is according to Warren Caro, executive secretary of the New York Theatre Guild which has joined hands with CLT in the move to put the legitimate theatre more solidly back on its feet.

Here with his assistant Sam McDowell and pressagent Willard Keefe of CLT to map out preliminary plans for the Minneapolis participation next month, Caro revealed that so much progress has been made and results have been so encouraging that Broadway producers now see clear sailing ahead for road tours the impending season.

Written some 16 years ago when George Bernard Shaw was a young octagenarian, "The Millionairess' is now having its first West End presentation, having failed to come to town previously for a variety of reasons, mainly connected with the war. As a play, it is in the playwright's familiar penetrating style and comparable to many of his earlier works. As a production it stands unique, being dominated by such a vital stellar performance from Katharine Hepburn that it is difficult to imagine another artist filling the role.

As the theme for this play, Shaw has the theme for this play, Shaw

As the theme for this play, Shaw has taken as his text the precept that money means more than just wealth—it means power. To develop his subject, he has chosen as his heroine a girl who has inherited from her father not only his fortune of millions, but also his taste to use that money to acquire power. The theme is relentlessly pursued throughout the two acts, with the author's characteristic wit, satire and logic lending an air of reality to his fanciful plot.

The millionairess' father was as astute as he was wealthy. So he formulated a plan to keep the sharks away from his daughter by making them demonstrate their financial acumen before qualifying for her hand. The first person to pass the test is an ex-boxer, but he cannot withstand the fiery temperament of this "human tornado" who is his wife and finds comfortand happiness with a poor girl of simple tastes. The wife, for her part, soon tires of her husband, and after an uninspiring adventure or two, becomes intrigued with a quiet Mohammedan doctor, but he had promised his dying mother he would only marry a girl who could live for six months with an initial capital of only 150 piastes (about $5\).

That she leaves behind a trall of personal disaster is irrelevant to her way of thinking; she has made progress and the casualtles were inevitable.

her way of unitaring, she had a progress and the casualtles were inevitable.

Very theatrically, but very entertainingly, Shaw carries his subject through four contrasting scenes; but each is dominated and elevated by the tremendous force of Miss Hepburn's performance. Her portrayal is rich, warm and inspiring. Her diction is superb, and her appearance, in expensive creations, is almost startling. This is one of the acting events of any season.

Notwithstanding the overpowering personality of the star, the other members of the cast almost defiantly maintain their own standard. Robert Helpmann's portrayal of the doctor in quiet undertones, Cyril Ritchard's interpretation of the discarded and maltreated lover, Peter Dyneley as the husband of good physique and substandard mental power, Meriel Forbes as the over-simplified other girl and Campbell Cotts as a lawyer trying to unravel the domestic and matrimonial tangle, are all good Shavian characters.

An anglicized version of a German play about Scandinavia makes heavy going for the hottest weather to hit London in years. Its theme savors more of the printed than spoken word, and is outmoded in style and expression, lacking the stature of contemporary dramas. cipal conductor.

It would have stood a better chance. As a holiday attraction, its chances are slim.

Pivot of the story is a young farm girl, seduced by her employer, who turns the tables on him by getting him arrested for his wife's murder on false evidence. In reality she had committed suicide, but murmuring tongues soon fixed the blame on the husband who gets a life sentence. Ignorant and illiterate, the girl's idee fixe is to protect the interests of her unborn child, and his conviction prevents her lover's marriage with a designing widow.

Bewildered at the action of the girl whom he believed to be in love with him, the farmer philosophically accepts the situation on being told she will confess the truth as soon as their child is born. He will then be free and they will be reunited when she has served her sentence for perjury.

Mai Zetterling carries the main burden of vitalizing the play, depicting with unerring sincerity the simple peasant holding firm under bullying and remorse to safeguard her child's future. Herbert Lom blusters and strides lustily through the role of the farmer with hearty conviction. Rachel Gurney makes a wraithlike figure of his neurotic wife and Betty Ann Davies gives a subtle, modern performance as the predatory widow. Supporting characters give background coloring and realism. Direction by Julius Gellner is painstaking.

by Fritz Hochwalder. Stars Victor Francen, Jean-Roger Caussimon, Roger KarlDirected by Jean Mercure; sets, Georges

Thieberger and Jean Mercure. At Athenee Theatre, Parls; 33 top.

This play is from Austria where a smash success at Vienna's Burgtheatre three or four years ago as "God's Country." It is now an established Paris hit. A heavy drama of religion and ethics, it is splendidly acted, staged and directed. Any American production could not risk deficiency in any of these departments because the play, with all male cast, is almost actionless and could not survive inferior production. Main character has a field day. American pic possibilities are very remote but play may be filmed in Europe.

Scene of play is Jesuit colony in Paraguay in the early 18th Century. This colony, the Kingdom of God, is a state all its own. Jesuits have dealt kindly with the native. Cacique Indians and their colony is filled with refugees from the harsher treatment doled out by the greed-ridden colonial planters and merchants. As both "The Kingdom of God" and the state of Paraguay are under the Spanish crown, colonial planters organize and request that the King of Spain interfere and suppress the Jesuit colony as subversive. When the news reaches the Indians that they are to be turned over to the planters again they revolt and the Jesuits are blamed for inciting them to revolution. The colony is suppressed, and the Jesuits are sentenced to deportation.

Chief role of leading Jesuit father who is torn between his conscience and his duty and accidentally killed when the Indians revolt, is magnificently done by Victor Francen. He gives the churchman humor, dignity and pathos. Roger Karl registers heavily as the defiant Jesuit who takes part in the Indian revolt. Jean-Roger Caussimon provides a subtle characterization as envoy of the King of Spain and all others are okay. Play keeps on the constant move despite script's natural tendency to loiter.

"On Earth" is a triumph of staging as much as it is a triumph of playwriting. It is packing the Athenee to capacity nightly not so much because it is play with strong idea and situation, but due to its dramatic production and star performance.

Strawhat Reviews

Three to One

Shows, people like Gordon MacRae, Betty Hutton, Gene Kelly, Keenan Wynn, Tommy Wonder,
Eve Arden, Alfred Drake and Richard Haydn, and even the most modest revival stirs warm memories of these tailored, high-toned revues that were well laced with acid by Miss Hamilton and handsomely tuned by Lewis.

There's not much satire to be found in "Three to One," save for the unforgettable Gertrude Lawrence dressing room scene. For this strawhat edition, producer Schirmer has concentrated on a succession of boy and girl song numbers and some broad comedy for Alice Pearce. It's a company of nine with no attempt at production numbers. "How High the Moon," which has become a favorite ballad over the years, has its setting changed from a London blackout to a simple American street scene, and "Barnaby Beach," formerly a colorful climax in "Three to Make Ready," is telescoped into a duet.

Miss Pearce is at her best in the hilarious "Story of the Opera" in which she explains the involved
Wagnerlan relationships of Sieglinde, Sigmunde, Wotan, Hunding, and Brunnhilde to a lady from Montelair. She also finds poignancy in "Born for Better Things," the delightful portrait of a Degas ballerina. In other assignments
Miss Pearce lacks the crispness that made Brenda Forbes's comedy so standout in the initial revues. This explains the absence of such classic Hamilton sketches as "The Christmas Tree" and "The Birthday of the Infanta" in which that inevitable commencement gem was consigned to limbo.

Kaye Ballard, also from legit and niteries, has all the impact of a real pro. She is superb as the florid actress in "To a Skylark" in which Miss Pearce as a Pelham matron risks a backstage visit to a John Golden hit. Miss Ballard also gives this summer potpourri its best moment when she sings
"My Sam," which isn't from her own club material. Beverlee Boxeman has a funny number in "The Yoo-Hoo Blues" and Marti Stevens

William McCleery, whose "Hope for the Best" and "Parlor Story" were produced on Broadway and whose "Good Housekeeping" was toured with Helen Hayes, comes up with another in the same vein of domestic satire. The author plays a realistic, disillusioned newspaperman in the Elliott Nugent manner.

a realistic, disillusioned newspaperman in the Elliott Nugent manner.

Play is a husband's efforts to persuade his wife she's gotten out of her depth in her surface approach to political reform and has become the unconscious dupe of an ex-governor-gentleman farmer neighbor who is trying to get his foot back in the political door again. Ultimately, she's convinced she can't play in the big league yet, maybe never, leaving us about where we came in.

This ring-around-the-rosy inconclusiveness is frustrating. Does McCleery feel that cynicism is the only approach for the layman in dealing with politicos and that woman's place is in the home? His tongue-in-cheek attitude leaves the play, despite many hard-hitting overtones in punchy dialog, teetering between farce and comedy. McCleery writes expert and witty lines, but he takes a serious theme—the conscientious housewife's efforts to be a worthwhile do-gooder—and gives it the prewar Behrman farce treatment.

While the husband (McCleery) tells the wife (Virginia Mattis) that she's no Margaret Chase Smith as a senatorial aspirant, she looks and plays it more like Helen Gahagan Douglas. Miss Mattis, recently on Broadway in "Season in the Sun" gives a sympathetic interpretation of the-would-be crusader still a bit bemused with memories of former glories as a stage star and unconsciously using histrionics in her woman's club speech-making.

The character of p.a. Henry Bent has familiar overtones of several w.k. Madison avenue public relation counselors but splayed with more stiffness than assurance by Colin Craig. The willy ex-governor, whose frankly expedient motives are obvious to all but the idealistic ex-actress, is portrayed uneasily by Alvin. The scenes between Miss Mattis and McCleery are effective but the pace slackens when others enter except for the scene of an all-femme press conference.

With a stronger third act and slicker production, the play's prospects could look bright. Camp.

Overall, the comedy is well played. In the pivotal role of Patty O'Neill, Dlana Lynn is suitably naive—almost too wide-eyed, perhaps, to be anything but exasperating to either the young architect or the upstairs rake. To offset the little-girl innocence, Miss Lynn conveys an age-old if baffling feminine wiseness in a good portrayal.

She is at her best in scenes with David Niven, a remarkably relaxed actor whose film performances have long been dismissed by either of two limiting adjectives, "charming" or "suave." Obviously, a line referring to his southern background easily could have been deleted. Also, in describing her pickup in a telephone conversation, Miss Lynn says the architect has "a sort of brewut," whereas Brady has long locks.

Still, a satisfying production and settings by Stewart Chaney, used in one of the touring editions of the show, couldn't be better.

Unit Rate Hit

The unit rate—whereby a newspaper publisher gives advertisers a joint rate for advertising in two of his papers—was hit last week by Federal Judge Herbert W. Christenbury in the Justice Dept.'s suit against the New Orleans Times-Picayune Publishing Co. Judge issued an order that the T-P and its sister evening paper, New Orleans States, refrain from selling ads under the unit rate. Judge also ordered the company to stop refusing to sell advertising space separately in the two pnpers. Judge opined that the T-P was using its "dominant position in the morning field" to place competitor, the Item, at a disadvantage. The Item is published Saturdays and competes with both of the T-P papers.

About 180 papers in the U. S. have unit rates, which may be affected by the judge's decision. Several publishers are objecting to the decree, as a move by the Government to regulate newspaper advertising and to prevent a publisher from setting rates competitively lower than others in the field. Government contention is that the T-P was acting "in restraint of trade" by using the unit rate practice.

Convention Needs a 'TV Format'; Webs Appraise Coverage, Ratings

Chicago, July 15.
Pollcy makers among the TV networks are engaged this week in tome fast and furious "between conventions" reappraising of the sebits and credits emerging from video's contribution to public enlightenment, in its unprecedented overage of last week's Republican convention in Chicago.

Out of the Chi Amphitheatre excitement attending Eisenhower at slugfest and nomination of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the GOP standard bearer, emerged a TV whose impact on the American populace as a molder of public opinion is now beyond question, stute strategists within the politic of raternity concede this as perhaps the No. 1 revelation of last week's Chi fiesta.

That TV, perhaps more than any sher factor, was responsible for teating a pro-Eisenhower sentiment among convention delegates' tostituents back home, was refected in the thousands of elegarams inundating Western Union at convention headquarters imoughout the week, and virtually all of one tone—revealing a sym-(Continued on page 127).

Strips and Songs

Anchorage's gaudy bistros are typical of what clicks with the citizenry in the flourishing Far North. This 11,000 population (official figures) community has 127 bars, niteries and joints within its limits, 178 more in the immediate environs. About 90% of them specialize either in strippers and burleycue comedians, or songsters who dish out American corn plus Yukon style "Western" ballads. "Belle of the Yukon" is the going fave.

Only exceptions are the half dozen class spots which cater to the comparatively few couples out on the town. These include the Aleutian Gardens; the Last Chance, which offers three standard acts, usually a ballroom dance team, singing encee and specialty hoofer; the Seven Seas, which did SRO biz with Guli-Guli's magic; and Forest Country Club, a strictly commercial, non-membership spot patronized by the town's elite, which has a dance orch only.

By and large, patronage at the rest of the niteries and bars is lopsidedly stag, in keeping with the actual population. Estimates run from 10 men to every women in the boom area to 50 men to every eligible distaffer.

Bob Hope Explains TV Telethon's Long Pledges, Short Coin

Chicago, July 15.

Bob Hope last week frankly vol-unteered that he and Bing Crosby had erred in their handling of the nad erred in their nandling of the recent Hollywood telethon to raise coin for the American Olympic team. That's the reason, he explained, why of $1,002,000 pledged, only $300,000 has been received so far.

No British stars have attempted a similar twice-nightly tour in halls seating from 2,000 to 3,000.

Despite heatwave weather at various locations, and the fact that many citizens are away from home vacationing at the seaside, Kaye is cleaning up solidily on the tour, in which he's backed by a strong company. He does largely the same act that he offered on his vaude stints at the London Palladium and Glasgow Empire, but this time he's playing in provincial areas where stubholders didn't have a chance to see him previously.

Kaye is giving his huge audiences full varie for their coin, which is hard to come by right now among ordinary British folk. At second house here, in the 3000-seat Caird Hall, he entertained for an hour and 25 minutes, taking final bow at 11:20 p.m.

The technique is different from that in normal vaude halls, Kaye told the writer.

"Halls are mainly city halls normally used for political speeches and civic events, and aren't built for vaude performers," he said.

"Lighting isn't made for performers, and beats down in only glare.

"Frinstance, in 'Candy Kisses,' you need a soft spot on to the face from back of the hall, but you can't (Continued on page 124)

TV for President!

While television may well elect our next President, TV, perhaps, also helped kayo the Presidential ambitions of one candidate. Meaning Tast. It's no secret by now that the Ohio senator's adherents committed a faux pas in their video-press relations, on which the Elsenhowerites capitalized.

It is a certainty that the Democratic convention next week will improve on the GOPolitico show, just as the first '52 TV convention made the 1948 video pickups from Philadelphia Convention Hall look like a No. 2 road company of "Blossom Time."

Television's impact makes almost any public event a living newspaper. Each successive event proves that. One W. Shakespeare never quite envisoned to what degree all the world is now a stage because of television. The mamer in which we are all actors has never been so clearly defined as in the GOPolitico Follies of early July, 1952. The candid camera shots of President-makers and adherents in action; the Marx Bros. antics of those so-welcomedy relief Puerto Ricans; the daily town meeting of Vox Pop USA; the vivid evidence of the citizenry in action in national politics, these comprised not only a passing show of life but brought a fuller realization that here was democracy in action.

The 1952 Presidential race in relation to TV is as historic as Fulton's steamboat, McCormick's reaper, Howe's sewing machine, Fulton's steamboat, McCormick's reaper, Howe's sewing machine, Bell's telephone and Marconi's whreless. For the first time a scientific means of visual sound projection into the home brings the grassroots a sharp focus on the candidates. It must make the traditional stump-speeching as obsolescent as the tandembike. It must mean that the biggest TV show in America every four-years—the Presidential race—will have to be "scripted" dominantly to the new medium. It must even mean time-tabling the highlight events in each candidate's cause to the best "hoop-rated" hours i.e. when the voters are home from their daily the nightlight events in each candidate's cause to the best "hoop-erated" hours, i.e. when the voters are home from their daily chores and can fully absorb the virtues and values at maximum leisure hours. It is a safe guess that the Demos are not going to overlook that phase now and after their candidates are

The iconoscope and the zoomar lens are as clinical as a surgeon's scalpel. It cuts through everything. It is a great revealer.

TV showmanship no longer is confined to actors. We're all players and participants in the one big show of life. Video is the 20th century miracle which brings it right into our homes, in sharp focus, and let the values fall where they may.

With opening date of the Salzburg Festival nearing (July 26), management is still in difficulties on casting of the traditional "Everyman" open-air production. This year's show was put in hands of Ernst Lothar as director, vice Helene Thimig, widow of Max Reinhardt, who created the production in the 1920s. On that fight, the International Boxing Club, which promoted the event, received 90c per seat, with Halpern receiving 15c for his services as the network distributor. Hurley, reportedly fearing that theatre TV will hurt the in-person gate even though theatres in the metropolitan N. Improved Product Apparent as National Biz Takes Firmer Tone; 'Lovely Look At' 1st, 'Robin' 2d Firmer tone in business generally across the country is mirrored in Variery's check this week of numerous key cities. Heat is still hurting some, particularly at the weekends, but an improved product situation is resulting in better income in many areas.

"Lovely to Look At" (M-G) is this starza's winner, jumping from the No. 10 spot to lead the field via clicko engagements in many eastern cities. "Robin Hood" (RKO), which was tops last week, fell to the place position. "Hood" is still racking up good-to-strong revenues but in an insufficient number of areas this week to give it the crown. it the crown.

"She's Working Her Way

mainly in the east, and moves up to the No. 3 spot, from No. 4, last week. Trailing close behind, in fifth place, is "Scaramouche"
(Mr-G), which is providing a nice payoff despite lengthy holdover runs in various spots.

"Jumping Jacks" (Par) is getting off to a bango start in scattered situations this week and rates the No. 5 place in the moneymaking sweepstakes. On the basis of initial returns "Jacks" clearly correlation. "Pat and Mike" (M-G), which also is being given a long play by the showcasers, still has enough strength to merit sixth place, the same as last week. "Clash by Night" (RKO) slips from fifth to seventh rung this frame as the number of its first-run dates went down considerably. "Outcast of the Island" (UA), "Walk East on Beacon" (Col) and "Winning Team" (WB) round out the top 10,

A couple of boff exploitation bookings stand out in the current returns. RKO combo of "King Kong" and "Leopard Man" is going over great in Philadelphia. "Strange World" and "Red Planet Mars," UA duo, is clicking neatly in Bosten.

TNT Sets Up Separate Unit to Develop Closed-Circuit TV For Biz Meetings

Parls, July 15.

Shelving of Elias Laplnere, RKO six years, has brought about the renaming of the Lapinere Week to the "Week of Champions." The Lapinere Week, to be held in September, had been pusshed by all

Move, replacing Lapinere with Carl-Gerhard Wallman, was a sudden one and totally unexpected by Lapinere. He was in the midst of pushing the special hypo week release of RKO product when his dismissal came about. Lapinere was unofficially notified of his impending severance June 24. He was given official written confirmation two weeks notice to July 11.

Dismissal climaxed a long-time clash in personalities between Lapinere and Joseph Bellfort, company's general manager for the European division. Phil Relsman, RKO international topper, decided to side with Bellfort after he weighed the situation following a

Drive-Ins Cut Charlotte First-Runs Down to Two

Charlotte, N. C., whose population is 150,000, is down to only two conventional first-run theatres whereas five had been in operation whereas five had been in operation a short time ago. But distribution men in New York, who are familiar with conditions in Dixie, say that this time the impact of television cannot be blamed. Instead, cause for shuttering the three firstrun spots in Charlotte was the mushrooming of drive-ins in the south, particularly in North and South Carolina.

Wise Words From a Vet Exhib

Eldore, Ia., July 15.

A realistic view of the exhibition side of the industry is taken by vet fheatreman Lee F. Wolcott in a bulletin this week to members of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa, Nebraska & Mid-Central States, of which he is board chairman.

"We know," he declares, "that when TV can outbid us for pictures, we have a good fighting chance. And right now the odds are topheavy in our favor—because last year while TV was spending less than $4,000,000 on all film it used, the theatres paid production and distribution $500,000,000 in renfails! Quite a difference! The smart boys will not risk that half billion in the bag by selling old or new theatre films to help TV put more theatres out of business—not for a long time, perhaps never."

Wolcott predicts that more old, badly-managed, and economically unsound theatres will close or be replaced, that overseated areas will level off, and that war-boom theatres may never be able to survive under normal conditions.

"What it all narrows down to," Wolcott concludes, "is that while we're down, we're not out, unless we ourselves so will it. Those of us who want to stay must learn to operate our business on this lower, but not impossible level; keep up with a fast, now rapidly changing business, streamline our operation, effect greater economies and efficiency, and adopt the wider use of more inexpensive attention-catching showmen's gimmicks instead off the old, dishonest, worn-out advertising methods. Those who can't or won't streamline, reduce costs, modernize and meet the challenge will fall by the way."

Metro's Economy Move

No one likes layoffs, paycuts or cutbacks. America is indigenously forward-going. There have been crises and depressions, but in recent years the strides have been ever ahead. It got so that anything less than super-colossal looked like a panic.

Those familiar with the Hollywood "inside" know that what's taking place now is not panic, but orderly examination of the economic facts of life and preparation to meet them. There's no reason for panic because Hollywood must inevitably take command as the show-producer for TV, no matter to what degree the new medium holds public taste.

Five Notre Dame platoons no longer are necessary when a solid team and a great battery of reserves—usually younger men—can achieve the same end results. That's what Loew's, in its current retrenchment, is striving for. The move can only be applauded for the basic reason that the cuts start at the top.

There have been militant voices in management on all industry fronts—not just the pix biz—that "the only thing labor can understand is layoffs." But simple economics dictate that expert labor is worthy of its hire.

In turn, it is not unreasonable for management to expect—and get—a good day's work in return. That is a major request made by Loew's prexy Nick Schenck and Metro production veep Dore Schary in their combined statements on Loew's new

The rest comes from the Loew's-Metro management. They're cutting themselves 25-50% on salaries of $1,000 and over. The cut is for a year. There is a no double-talk statement that there will be no reimbursements of the cut, and its inferential relationship to the abortive exec paycuts attempt made at 20th-fox last year is obvious.

There are thousands of Loew's Inc. stockholders whose annual dividend yields have been cut. They have reason to expect improvement. The pattern set by management on economy is a dramatic signal that the employee team must match the circumstance by an honest day's work. There can be no salary cuts under existing crafts and guild regulations governing studio labor, but the signal flags are certainly on high that unless there is that necessary labor-management coordination, inevitably layoffs and more stringent constrictions will always exist.

That the Loew's-Metro move is regarded as sound is evidenced by the relative calm with which the Schenck-Schary edict has been accepted in and out of the industry. The chain reaction has been anything but volatile. Even Wall St. took it calmy as a sound economic program.

The film pioneer, now 79, observed that the reduction in Hollywood's turnout is being made in deference to modern-day economics. "We cannot get along on any second-rate product." Zukor asserted. He stated that the studios now are striving to endow each production with maximum values, requiring greater time and effort. "There's more time being given to the selection of story material, casting and the producer-director assignments. Pictures which look doubtful at the start will not be made; instead all care is concentrated on the lesser number of films, but the good ones."

Zukor told Variety that exhibitors need have no fears about product shortages despite the lopping of production skeds. "Inferior product is a loss for the theatremen and the producers. An exhibitor is better off with a picture which can run for two or more weeks and stand up at the box

Negotiators for the Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Assn. now insist that film company presidents sit in on arbitration discussions, instead of distribution lawyers and general sales managers as in the past.

The TOA-ers and Allied-ites, it's apparent, believe that further confabs with the non-presidential execs would be futile. They feel that the prexies might be willing to make certain concessions on bidding as an arbitrable subject, against which the attorneys and sales managers have been adamant. For this reason, the theatre org toppers are demanding the future talks with the top brass.

Schwalberg, Paramount sales topper and head of the national distributors committee, Reade and Allied States president Wilbur Snaper recently declared that the scarcity of "product of merit" in July was considered by them as the "most important crisis in the industry today." Reade framed the wire and Snaper added his signature. Earlier Snaper had sent letters to all sales managers complaining of a shortage of good pix in the summer months.

The Reade-Snaper message to Schwalberg declared: "Release schedules indicate there are 16 topflight pictures available in August, but two in July. This situation is drastic and would break up any continuity of motion picture patronage at our theatres during the summer months."

A free-wheeling, often hilarious, rambunctious followup to "The Paleface," Payamount's successful Bob Hope-Jane Russell teamins, has been concocted in "Son of Paleface." It is the broadest kind of slapstick, drawing advantageously on the silent-day masters of the pratfalls for 95 minutes of uninhibited mirth that certainly should hit a nifty boxoffice pace all along the line.

Best description of the picture is given by Hope himself in his character as the son of Paleface Potter: "This is impossible." It's also a lot of fun, fortified with Technicolor, songs, Jane Russell and the added Roy Rogers and his costar, Trigger, an educated equine that plays a major part in the comics! heroies.

Producer Robert L. Welch and director Frank Tashlin kid every western hero and situation yet nutron film. From the script which they did with Joseph Quillan that aim is achieved with only a few static moments that are quickly forgotten in the overall socks at the risibilities. The satirical burlesque with which the plot is concerned finds Rogers and Lloyd Corrigan, government agents, assigned to the case of running down "The Torch," a bandit and gang that is looting gold shipments end then mysteriously disappearing.

While already into their work under the guise of traveling medicine men, the job is complicated by the appearance in the small western town of Sawbuck Pass of Hope, the Harvard grad son of the late Paleface Potter. A superellious, cowardly braggart, Hope complicates matters temporarily until the agents decide to use him to confirm their suspicions that Miss Russell, the long-legged, amorous keener of the Dirty Shame saloon, is the leader of the robbers. Hope also has an inheritance to worry about because the townspeople want to collect the debts left by his old man.

Hope wants Miss Russell, she yens for Rogers and the plot boils along furiously through all kinds of hoked-up situations standard to all oaters that have gone before, including Indians on the warpath, lynching parties, ghost towns. parched treks across the desert and mirages. Finale twits, previously established, has Hope winning Miss Russell because Rogers, who doesn't like girls, only goes for horses. There's a jibe at video when Hope remarks: "Let's see te'evision top this,"

Top song-dance highlight along the way in the 95 minutes is the saloon sequence that starts with chorus girls doing "Whigh a Dirty Shame" and then going into "Wing-Ding Tonight," sextly sold by Miss Russell in a gaudy, scanty costume. and "Buttons and Bows," poo hit from the earlier "Paleface." or, her appearance hasn't much significance except to add marquee strength.

The script is a sketchy affair, spanning as it does the long period in Rogers' life from the 1900's through to August, 1935, when he took off with Wiley Post on that fatal flight to Alaska. Opening marks his return to his Oologah, Okla, home after two years of cowpunching in Texas. He meets the girl who later is to become his wife, tries to settle down and assume the position that goes with being the son of a wealthy, influential Senator and rancher. The strain is too much and he takes off on world wanderings while conducting his courtship via postcards.

Upon his return, he and his girl meet in St. Louis, are married and leave on a Wild West show honeymoon that eventually carries him to New York and a crack at vaude-ville that fails to pay off until he starts spinning jokes with his rope-twirling. This leads him to the "Ziegfeld Follies" of 1916-17-18 and 19, and a fame for poking pointed, but good-natured, libes at world leaders. When he is asked to put his homilles into writing, Rogers rebels, turns to silent filmmaking in Hollywood until influenced by a growing love of aviations. Some of his more famous quotes as a national and international commentator are generously sprinkled through the footage as the picture shifts rapidly through sketchily-shown scenes contemporary to the era, such as the drought and "Okie" migration, the depression, etc. The fault of the film is that it deals too briefly with each phase to permit the development of any feel of suspense, or importance; nor is Rogers, the man, created.

It's a conventionally - patterned action - romance drama with a war background, telling its story against. a Korean setting with standard results. A mixture of exciting warfare sequences, a few tearjerk scenes that don't ring true, and a sprinkling of humorous touches all fall familiarly in the too-long 105 minutes, but it is still a concoction that can stir up boxoffice with exploitation selling.

Robert Mitchum and Ann Blyth team effectively in the starring roles. He is the battle hero, a selfmade officer and professional solder who stays with the job even after he could have found an easier berth in that period when the abortive Korean action was getting off on its bumbling course. He makes the character acceptable with his specialized style of laconic heroics. Miss Blyth, as a war widow working with the United Nations, is likeable and believeable more often than the scripting and direction, neither of which, in the off-war action scenes, has much credibility.

Graw, a sergeant who looks after Mitchum; Roy Roberts, a general; and, fleetingly, Margaret Shenidan, Richard Egan and Eduard Franz, all come over well.

Humor is pointed up by several minor players seen as GTs engaged in the struggle. Remembered are Aivin Greenman, portly private who is the butt of jokes by his comrades; Wally Cassell, a wise-cracker; Lala Rios, a Mexican boy doing his bit, and Tom Carr, a lad from the western ranges who adopts and mothers a gosling. There's an infittily humorous sequence showing Greenman trying to teach some Korean kids how to blow bubble gum.

A Japanese-Korean song, for which English lyrics were written by Norman Bennett, will linger in the memory. It's a formantic ballad now fitled "Tell Me, Golden Moon," sung by Miss Blyth and Mitchum. Elsewhere, Victor Young gives the film a good score, and william E. Snyder's lensing is excellent.

"Don't Bother to Knock" is a minor entry in the melodramatic field, produced in too haphazard and leisurely a fashion to rate any more than lower-case booking. Marilyn Monroe, co-starred with Richard Widmark, gives an excellent account of herself in a strictly dramatic role which commands certain attention, but the story of a psycho baby-sitter lacks interest as it's here presented.

Plot needs too much explaining, which comes along at too late a moment, to stir much spectator response, as femme star enters a N. Y. hotel to take on a baby-sitting stint. Actually, she's newly released from a mental institution, sent there when her mind cracked after her fiance crashed in the Pacific and drowned. In Widmark, who glimpses her from his room across the court and comes calling with a bottle, she sees, in her dementia, the man she once loved. When her small charge, Donna Corcoran, comes out of her room to see what's going on, the sitter turns upon the child with homicidal intent, which grows as the evening continues. Under British Roy Baker's direction, action progresses at a dull pace, and script by Daniel Taradash tries to juggle too many elements. Julian Blaustein, whose production efforts generally are of class quality, misses the boat on this, although it's indicated that the studio has an upcoming dramatic star in Miss Monroe. Her role seems an odd choice, however, since studio has been giving her a big glamour buildup, and in this she's anything but glamorous, despite her donning a negligee. Title, too, indicates comedy, whereas its theme is melodramatic.

Widmark doesn't appear too happy with his role, as a man confronted by a tragic situation when he realizes the girl is a potential killer. It offers him little opportunity, but he handles the part with his customary glibness. Anne Bancroft, making her screen bow as a recruit from N. Y. television, scores brightly as a torch singer, chirping five song numbers, among them "A Rollin' Stone," written by Lionel Newman's music score contributes to building mild sus

The script by Gerald Drayson Adams and Joseph Hoffman doesn't always concentrate on blood-letting action. There are nice spots of humor and some above-average dialog which help Murphy and the others show to advantage. Story does jump about, somewhat, but in the main is easy to follow. Don Siegel's fast direction keeps things rolling to bridge the gaps, and he presents the players excellently. Miss Cabot registers well as a gal who loyes McNally but finally goes for Murphy. Mohr is a good heavy, as are Iglesias and James. Walter Sande and the others are capable in support.

Policy of N.Y.'s Italian Film Export is due for a complete thrashing out during a six-week visit to Rome on which E. R. Zorgniotti, outfit's U. S. rep, took off on Monday (14). With hundreds of thousands of dollars rolling into the IFE coffers annually, Zorgniotti is faced with the necessity of greatly and quickly broadening the co-op's activities. It is with that aid in mind he is planning to go personally before the board for policy directives.

Pact with U. S. distribs under which funds are provided had run one year as of June 30 and has another year to go. It is possible that the deal may be extended beyond that time, but the Italians will hardly be able to justify such a request if they haven't spent much of the money already handed them.

of the money already handed them. American companies are anxious that IFE get going full force, since they feel the pact is advantageous to them. They think that by creating dollar income for the Italians through exhibition of their pix in the U. S., the government in Rome will be encouraged to allow them to withdraw all or most of their earnings there. Should IFE not prove effective, there's a likelihood the government won't permit its continuance and cut off the funds now being converted as part of the subsidy deal.

BOOK, PLAY FIELDS

Although there's a growing wall by studio story departments of lack of material for important pix, Hollywood buys of hit Broadway legiters—such as Metro's purchase last week of "Kiss Me, Kate"—are getting scarcer and scarcer. Studios are getting increasingly chary of the high costs of such properties and of the investment of holding them in their inventories.

them in their inventories.

Actually, while Hollywood's need for "big picture" material—at reasonable prices—is on the increase, the selection available to it from both the publishing and play fields has been waning. Result is more pressure for originals and a tendency, in part from this cause, to make fewer plx.

On the publishing side, until the first six months of 1952, there were fewer books coming out each year because sales have diminished in recent years and there are fewer bestsellers of the stature of the prevar and war period. On Broadway the situation is pretty much the same. Each year sees fewer plays hitting the board.

Studios are thus getting less selection. Unfortunately, this is happening at a time when they are probably more choosey about the properties they buy than at any time since Tom Edison cranked his first camera. The whole group of middle-budget pix that formerly made up the bulk of every studio's program is on'a b.o. wane and the lots are hunting for source material for the important product to which they are turning more exclusively. Of the new books coming up this fall, there's disappointment in one major entry which most story eds had been counting as a sure buy. That's Edna Ferber's "The Giant." Virtually all of the author's previous efforts have been turned into pix in the past, but present indications are that "The Giant" may be

Lippert Would Deal With SAG If Pattern By Industry Is Set

Robert L. Lippert, whose contract with the Screen Actors Guild was cancelled by the union in a dispute over added payment for actors when their theatrical films are sold to TV, said in New York this week that he would be ready to sit down with the Guild when an industrywide pattern is set.

Key houses tare just beginning they are still pulling nicely on new product. "Lovely to Look At" is rolling as sweetly as its Jerome extra-smart take. Horror package of reissues, "Frankenstein" and "Dracula," opened Sunday (13) at "Dracula," opened Sunday (13) at the Palace and are expected to make hefty hay. "Wait 'Til the Sun Shines, Nellie" isn't too bright for Allen, edged out by Hipp's building "Wild Heart." Louisville, July 15.

Current week is showing a slight upturn in biz, rather hard to account for, unless it is the expected perking at the wicket after the July 4 holiday weekend. Convention hullabaloo on TV, etc. didn't seem to hurt film house attendance in this town very much.

"Lovely to Look At" at Loew's State currently looks to top the town. Estimated $10,000 figure is considered good for this time of year. "Cash By Night" at the Rialto, with publicity slanted slightly on the sensational side, should nab satisfactory $9,500. Other houses are doing just average biz.

Three holdovers, "Clash By Night" at the Palms, "Lovely to Look At" at the United Artists, and "Scaramouche" at the Adams are slow. Republican Convention cut heavily into last weeks grosses, and July 4 weekend was not big enough to balance.

New York's first-runs for the most part were belted by the high mercury readings over the weekend. Only a few spots did goodbig Saturday and Sunday. But similar torrid temperatures are proving a b.o. assist during the weekdays in many spots, judging from the day-by-day returns. This, of course, suggests that those in town between weekends are giving the air-conditioned comfort of theatres'a big play.

On the overall basis, current week is a mixed one for the showcases, with the situations drawing good revenue outnumbered by other houses drawing mediocre revenue. Abundance of holdover product albng the Main Stem is further responsible for the b.o. inertia in many theatres around town.

Brit. Govt. Tax Crippling, Says ABPC Prexy; B.O. Up But Revenue Sliced

London, July 15.

A decline of admissions of approximately 2% is reported by Sir Philip Water in his annual statement as chairman to stockholders in Associated British Picture Corp. for year ended March 31. Total attendances exceeded 207,000,000 and boxoffice receipts were just below $36,000,000.

Although attentions

$36,000,000. Although attendances were down, gross receipts were up by nearly $3,000,000 owing to increase in admission tax and Eady levy, which siliced off almost 40% of the corporation's revenue. Amount paid in tax and levy totaled more than $22,000,000.

Sir Philip's statement, which will be submitted to the stockholders' meeting July 31, warns the government of the crippling policy of increased direct taxation which has been featured in recent budgets. Increased admission charges were not the answer, he said, and it was "absolutely essential" that exhibs should receive substantial relief from the admission tax burden if they were to continue in business with any success.

from the admission tax burden if they were to continue in business with any success.

While pleading for tax relief, the ABPC prexy also urged the continuance of the Eady fund on a permanent statutory basis. He contended that unless the fund was put on a more permanent basis, the outlook for British production wasn't encouraging. Even with the help of that fund, the difficulties of British pictures recouping production cost in the limited available markets continued to make production a speculative business. As a company, Sir Philip said, they endeavored to lessen the risk by co-production with Warner Bros. and other American companies.

Average price of admission on the circuit during the past year was 27c. Of this the government got 11c, the distributor slightly over 6c, and balance was left with the theatre to meet all running costs and overheads.

As previously reported, the corporation showed a net profit of $1,482.100. It's paying 20% dividend on its ordinary stock.

At the present time, "Joan of Arc" (RKO), now in a fourth week day-and-dating at the Trocadero, Libertador and Palacio del Cine theatres, holds the No. 1 position, with total gross of around $90,000. Doing this despite cold weather plus rain. Decline in two of the theatres on the third week was only to be expected, being partly blamed on weekend traffic delays caused by the government's sealing off some streets as part of open-air acrobatic performances for the Eva Peron Foundation. "Joan" is heading for a record as high as last year's $184,690, done in 12 weeks by "The Red Shoes."

"Cinderella," also distributed by RKO, made $95,795 in a 20-week holdover at the bandbox Radar Theatre, and "The Window" $54,050 in 23 weeks. These pictures combined to give RKO the highest figures of its 15-year history as a distribution unit in Argentina.

'Don Camillo' Sets New Record in Italy Plus Big Showing in France

A record local gross of over $1,300,000 has so far been racked up by "Don Camillo" (Dear Film) in its initial Italian run. It was sock in Milan on first-run at the Capitol Theatre which lasted 61 days and topped the $110,000 mark. Pic is now running strongly in subsequents.

days and topped the $110,000 mark. Pic is now running strongly in subsequents.

Opening Paris run of this Franco-Italian production has repeated the Italian success. Paris initial playdate beat the previous theatre high, set by the same producer's "Fanfan La Tullpe." A sequel, "The Return of Don Camillo," is now being scripted by Giovanni Guareschi, and will go into production late this year. It will again team director Julien Duvivier with stars Fernandel and Gino Cervi.

Dear Film likewise has revealed an ambitious production-distribution program, with the trend swinging to the large-scale International product. Following Rene Clair's "Belles de Nuit" and Mario Camerini's "Bride for a Night," now ready for release, the company will handle Christian-Jaque's forthcoming "Lucretia Borgia" to be shot in Gevacolor, a Technicolor life of Pucctni which Carmine Gallone will co-produce and direct, and an Italo-German tinter, tentatively titled "Without Vells."

McEldowney Raps Film Star System in Vienna: Prepping 2d India Pic

Prepping 24 Inia Pic.

Vienna, July 15.

Kenneth McEldowney, producer of "The River" hit Vienna on his way back to the U. S. drom the Berlin Film Festival. In a press conference staged by UA's new distrib for Austria, Constantine Films, McEldowney rapped the star system and pointed to "River's" b.o. as proof that good pix, well produced, can make a profit without names. Press meet for McEldowney was the first event of its kind since the war in Vienna outside the MPEA structure, with that outfit phasing out its operations as of August.

McEldowney said it would be unfair to charge his total outlay of close to $1,000,000 in India to transport all Technicolor eguipment and arcs all the way to the Orient to get the hall rolling Second film, "Kedda," an adventure in elephant hunting, is already in pre-shooting stage in India, McEldowney reported.

He also stated he has no definite plans for further production away from India.

In spite of the heat, there are still 14 theatres open in this capital, all with light fare, and all doing from reasonable to good biz. Reason of this unforeseen good summer season is the great influx of tourists who fill the stalls, especially of houses which provide typical Spanish fare.

But they were all in top form next night.

Hotels announce 15%-20% drop in biz since the affair. Restaurants in the trouble zone are doing much less trade than before. Air lines, railroads and other transportation companies suffered a sharp drop in passenger biz even before, from July 4, two days before the elections, not only from the U. Israeli Show Biz Tumbles; Pix Hit has dropped approximately 30%. Readon for this sudden, sharp drop is the downbeat economic situation. Ever since introduction of the new exchange rates, as well as the 10% compulsory-loan and exchange of bank notes, a great shortage of money has been felt by everybody. Scarcity of money has resulted in less frequent visits to places of entertainment. For instance cinemas, which never suffered from lack of attendance on account of prices, are most severely hit. While operating at 75% capacity until two months ago, they are now working only at 50%. As result of the increase in cost of living, exhibs were forced again to increase their admission fees, which has had an adverse result, inasmuch as the public cannot afford to buy expensive tickets and stays away from the cinema altogether.

During the last four weeks, business in all places of entertainment has dropped approximately 30%. Reason for this sudden, sharp drop is the downbeat economic situation.

On top of that, transport facilities have been cut down and buses stop at 11 o'clock at night. As result, cinemas had to advance their evening performances to 7 and 9 p. m. instead of 7:30 and 9:30.

From Sunday, July 6, until Aug. 16, double (daylight) summer time is being introduced, which means that it gets dark at 9:15 in the evening. This, too, will have a bad effect on cinemas, theatres and coffee-houses, which will not be able to operate properly. Cinemas, for instance, as result of Rabbinical laws, cannot start their first performance on Saturday, inght (best day of the week) before end of the Sabbath. This will mean that instead of two shows on Saturday, they will be able to give only one show.

Fire Causes $80,000 Loss at Cine-Citta

Rome, July 8.

Fire last week destroyed one of Cine-Citta's large studio buildings, causing an estimated damage of about $80,000. Cine-Citta, located on the outskirts of Rome, is considered Italy's largest film plant. Fire broke out while Austrian director G. W. Pabst was doing a scene of his current Italian production, "The Voice of Silence," starring Italo actor Aldo Fabrizi.

Considerable damage was done to the wardrobe department of the Cines Co., producers of the Pabst pic.

Any lingering hopes of a two way traffic of cooperation between the BBC-TV and the British motion picture industry have been shattered by uncompromising de-cision of the Cinematograph Exhib-itors Assn. to boycott producers and distributors who offer their product for video. Edict puts end to suggestions of a rapprochement that have emanated from producer circles during the past few months.

Hitherto the CEA attitude has been restricted to barring from cinema screens all product which has been transmitted on TY; but the new development is of a more far-reaching character and likely to eliminate all screen time on British TV programs.

British TV programs.

CEA decision, if supported by other sections of the industry, will mark the end of all BBC hopes of securing film product for inclusion on TV programs. In joint talks with the industry over the past months, TV heads had been campaigning for a greater measure of cooperation, and had intimated that if this wasn't forthcoming they might be compelled to end the "Current Release" program which each fortnight features extracts from upcoming West End and general release attractions.

BBC demands were designed to enable TV to fill part of its afternoon program time, and there had been indications that producers and some distributors were willing to negotiate an accommodation in return for the boost the industry received from the "Current Release" feature.

The CEA declaration, which was carried at its Llandudno conference last week, indicates the association will play no part in further talks with the BBC. It wants to see a tangible measure of cooperation, particularly so far as theatrical video is concerned, before it is ready to modify its attitude.

Brit. Pix Exhibs Warn Parliament On Film Attacks

London, July 15.

As a prelude to a film industry debate which opens in the House of Lords tonight (Tues.), the general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assm., at its conference in Liandudno, launched a new broadside against the supporting quota, which, it claimed, was leading to "a reign of terror conducted by vested interests in Parliament."

Tonight's Parliamentary debate is to be opened by Lord Archibald, former Rank producer, and arises from a formal motion drawing attention to the National Film Finance Corp. and the film industry. It will be the first major debate of this Parliament other than the discussions providing additional coin for the Film Bank.

At the CEA conference, debate was opened by Theo. H. Filgel's stone, former president of the association, who pleaded with the major circuits not to "prostitute the entertainment on their screens" by showing second feature quota which they had no right to offer to patrons. The industry was being frightened into fulfilling the quota and that was never the intention of the Quota Act.

president of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, last Thursday (10). Advised by sales managers of the theatre associations' demands, Johnston said he would "check to see if some arrangement could be worked out."

Over the past couple of months, two fullscale meetings of industry excess were convened in the overall effort to develop the arbitration plan. Last of, the two sessions, early this month, was adjourned, with little progress achieved beyond the appointment of the committee to take another crack at resolving differences.

The group named were: for exhibition, Abram Myers. and Wilbur Snaper (Allied), Herman M. Levy, and S. H. The exhib team is represented as holding firm in its assistence on making: arbitrable 'the institution of competitive bidding by distribs in all cases where it is uncalled for and undesired by exhibs. Opinion in some trade circles now is that the film companies, via the requested meeting with the prexies, must yield on a good portion of the disputed competitive bidding issue. The "or else" is that the several years of informal discussions within the trade on setting up an arbitration program, and the formal conclaves over the past months, will add up to just so much wasted time and motion.

The owners of the Boyd, Globe, College, Palace and Nile told Bethlehem city council that there has been a 50% drop in business since Feb. 1, 1950, when a 10% amusement tax went into effect here. They pointed out with the 20% Federal tax, theatre-goers now have to pay a 30% tax on all tickets and that, in addition, cost of operation has tripled in recent years.

Book is said to lack plot. It's about a Virginia gal whe moves to Texas, where she raises her children. First of six installments started in the June issue of Ladies Home Journal. It will be published by Doubleday in December and is a Book-of-the-Month Club selection. Studio selectivity is so great now that, despite those attributes, there's no Hollywood enthusiasm. Ernest Hemingway's new volume is said definitely, not to be a pic, although its literary values are being lauded by story eds. Titled "The Old Man and the Sea," it's a 30,000-word novelette. Reportedly Life will reprint it in full in a-September issue, it will, be published in a book by Scribner's, and it is a dual B-of-the-M choice.

It is the story of the 36-hour fight of an old fisherman, his luck gone, with the biggest marlin ever caught. He's unable to land it, he's so exhausted, and it gets eaten by sharks, so that all he brings back is the skeleton. There's no other plot.

On the brighter side, so far as the studios are concerned is Tom Costain's "The Golden Chalice;" a story of the Holy Grail. It is seen as a possible challenge to 20th-Fox's upcoming religious spec, "The Robe." Story eds crystal ball it definitely as a bestseller and very likely a screen buy.

Also slotted for fall publication is one of the longest novels on record—exceeding "Gone With the Wind" or "Anthony Adverse." It is titled "The Hills of Sironia" and is a firster by Madison A. Cooper, Jr. It will run about 1,750 pages (840.000 words) and be published

It's so long that none of the stuios that have seen it so far has determined whether it is a screen story or not. Curiously, it is also about Texas. The "Sironla" in the title is the name of a mythical town, said to be Waco, where the author lives. It won the Houghton-Miffiin Fellowship prize.

Jap Sex-Problem Films Stir Unusual Interest: 'Harmful Effect' Claim

Harmful Effect' Claim
Tokyo, July 8.
Sparked by the successful Japanese run of Leonide Moguy's Italian sex-educational film, "Tomorrow Is Too Late," studios here have jumped on the bandwagon with two adolescent problem films already released and others in the making. Caught in the strange switch to democracy, Japanese youth has a serious problem about what to do sex-wise about new freedoms, and the situation has resulted in some scandalous incidents. Sex education of youth has become a matter of deep public concern, and the two completed films are worthwhile contributions to the problem, although neither offers an actual solution.

She is brought to a normal attitude toward her experience by an understanding woman teacher who had made a similar mistake in her adolescence. Young girl is sensitively played by Sachiko Hidari. Shochiku's entry, "Musume-wa Kaku Kogi Suru" ("How a Young Girl Protests"), tells how a mother tries to steer her daughter away from mistakes similar to her own youthful errors. Her efforts, overly strict and narrow minded, have a contrary effect. Leading role is played by Kyoko Kami of the Shochiku Girls' Opera Troupe. Veterns Haruyo Ichikawa and Kuniko Ikawa lend support.

Second-run exhibs are playing up reroticism in both films. Second-run houses are ballying the film as "Avec Festival."

U.S. Distribs Selecting Reps in Vienna, Since MPEA Moves Out Soon

Vienna, July 1. With the Motion Picture Expo With the Motion Picture Export Assn.'s Austrian operation skedded to definitely cease Sept. 1, the major U.S. companies have been lining up their local reps and are already selling fall contracts to exhibitors. Robert Schmitt, Metrochief, formerly in Cairo, heads the Viema office for a combined Metro-20th-Fox sales setup which will share the former MPEA office space and projection room with a Paramount-Warner combo. Latter is headed up by Louis Kanturek, who was MPEA Continental chief operating out of Prague until Commie pressure forced a retreat to Vienna. Vienna.

All other U.S. companies have appointed Austrian distribs to rep them in this territory. Columbia is sold through Union Film; Universold through Union Film; Universal International is repped by International Film (no relation); RKO has named Sascha, biggest Austrian distrib. UA, Republic and others are still in negotiating stages. But it looks definite that the Par-Warner and Metro-20th combos will be the only direct homeoffice branches.

Hope said he thought the excess resulted from the fact that the public was so deeply touched by the kids on the show that they later decided to up their original contributions. He also explained that while televiewers knew that it only took a set sum to send the Olympic team abroad, there was practically no limit on what could, be spent for treatment and care of CP sufferers, so they dug a little deeper in their jeans.

Only Cinema Biz Holds Up in Arg.

Buenos Aires, July 8. Over the last month or two a recession has set in here. With the exception of film theatres exhibiting top product, show biz is not doing as prosperously as it was this time last year. The luxury trades are up against sales "resistance" on the part of consumers, and sales of electrical appliances, phono-of electrical appliances, phonograph sets, disks any many other items are practically negligible.

An outstanding symptom of this recession is the sliump in number of tickets sold for football (soccer) matches over weekends. This is the most popular entertainment, and although the Football Association's receipts are higher by comparison with last year's total, it was due to a recent boost in prices. The 12 first-division champlonship matches played in the first six months of 1952 played to 166,664 fewer admissions than last year.

The slump cannot be blamed on television because there are only around 1,000 to 2,500 sets actually in use, and the small crowds outside radio stores to view the big matches on sets installed in windows can't make all that difference. Plummeting sales in other lines make it obvious that the drop is due to lower purchasing power. There is still no decline in race-track betting which is still verying business. At two ordinary April race meets at the Jockey Club track at Palermo, total betting was $1,732,826 and $1,464,594 respectively. On April 27, at the San Isidro race-track just outside Buenos Aires, on a card of nine races, a total of $732,296 was bet. Cafes and nightclubs have been hard hit by recession, with their business tapering off at least 80%. This goes for ordinary restaurants in the business district as well as the class nitery spots, which last year were doing brisk trade in considerably more than does the free competition of television. Schenck said that some time ago he had told this theory to certain Wall Streeters, who countered with the fact that the nation's savings in banks is now at an all-time high. In reply to that, Schenck added, he pointed out that the savings were in the accounts of persons in the 40-to-60 age bracket and that these people were in the lowest ratio of film-goers.

Schenck said that in nearly every instance he got pledges of cooperation. In a few cases, he admitted, some people he talked to were up in the artistic clouds—but, he said, that even they came down to earth when Schenck gave them the facts of current film production economics. A few creative people, Schenck admitted, were first antagonistic to the idea that, they do more than one picture per year for the $100,000 or more that they draw in yearly salary — but Schenck gave, them to understand that they would have to expend the extra effort, or else.

Schenck said that the day is past when even so much as a half-hour can be wasted on a set by anythody. In regard to time-watage, he continued, a great contributing factor was the Motion Picture Academy's extension of awards to take in virtually every facet of film production.

Academy Award Fever

extension or awards to take in virtually every facet of film production.

Academy Award Fever

"At first, when it was only the stars and the picture, it was okay," Schenck said, "but when the awards began to take in every other category, that hurt." Now, Schenck pointed out, the cameramen, costumers, soundmen, musicians, and right down the line, are so conscious of possible Academy awards that they spend costly time on details the public never recognizes when it's in the theatre. In fact, Schenck stressed, even industry people don't recognize many of the fine details in a picture that probably add many thousands of dollars to the cost.

Cameramen have been asked to speed up their setups; directors have been asked to come on the set every morning fully prepared for the scenes they are going to shoot; actors have been asked to be ready and on time, for their calls. They have been told that one hour wasted on a set daily adds up to a full day by the end of the week and that the average day's shooting cost is well over $10,000. With say, an average of four pictures shooting weekly, that would represent a possible preventage wastage of around $2,000,000 on the year.

Announcing the measure following more than five weeks of studio conferences, Schenck said that the top money men are taking the cuts "to provide leadership in the drive of economy," He added that the salary lopping will be in effect for a year and under no circumstances will any amount of money be returned to the execs involved.

In addition to the obvious benefits on the economics front, benefits on the economics front, the economy program also figures to go a long way toward placating the corporation's stockholders, who recently were forced to take a cut in dividend payoffs. color video sent the quotations skyrocketing to 33½, and the board felt the purchase of stock for retirement at that price would not be economic.

Idea of a tender was thus allayed until the stock recently returned to something close to the price of last year's bid. Company has plenty of coin on hand to buy up the shares. As of its last annual report, Dec. 29, 1951, it had cash of $16,425,500, plus marketable securities totalling $2,315,000.

During 1951, Par acquired 153,184 shares of its common for retirement at a cost of $3,296,469. Adding to these acquisitions are the 808,076 bought up in 1950, which makes an aggregate of 961,160 at a total cost of $20,227,432.

Aim of the continued stock-buying, either through open market purchases or by asking for tenders, is to cut down on the amount outstanding. By that process dividends can more easily be maintained, since there are fewer shares among which to spread the earnings.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Clarifying a suit brought by his client, Dawn Mundy Provost, against 20th-Fox and the Bobbs-Merrill Co., attorney Murray M. Segal explains that in 1928 Talbot Mundy sold the film rights in "King of the Khyber Rifles" to 20th through Bobbs-Merrill. His widow, Mrs. Provost, renewed the copyright to "King" in 1943.

Relying upon representations by Bobbs-Merrill and 20th to the effect that she had nothing to sell with regard to the film rights under the copyright renewal, Mrs. Provost assigned the rights to 20th and received $2,000 for what was termed a "technical assignment" For representing Mrs. Provost as agent, Bobbs-Merrill took $1,000.

Damages of $21,500 are demanded in the N. Y. Federal Court complaint on the basis that the rights were worth $25,000, that a reasonable agent's fee would thus have been $2,500 and that Mrs. Provost has already received $1,000. Action, moreover, raises the question as to whether a writer can sell film rights to his work in perpetuity. Segal maintains that an author can only transfer film rights during the life of the original copyright.

RKO is using a novel approach in heralding its new Screenliner series for 1952-53 via a circular written in early colonial syle and employing a type face familiar in that period. Text reads: "The Proprietors of RKO-RADIO beg Leave to inform the Publick that a One-Act Phantasy, much enliverid by spritely Ballads and suitable Narration by one Mr. Tom Glazer, called 'Sweet Land of Liberty,' a Tale of Williamsburg, has lately been performed for the first Time at Williamsburg in Virginia before a numerous and polite 'Audience, on July 4th, 1952 (being the Anniversary of our national Independency), and is now available to all Theatre Directors, having been nicely recorded on ingenious TALKING PICTURE Machines, capable of projection upon a Screen, and forming the first of the new SCREENLINER Series for the Year 1952-53. LONG LIVE THE REPUBLIC!"

Paramount has gone into the picture postcard business as part of the promotion for "Greatest Show on Earth." Film company had four cards printed by Moss Photo Service of New York and sets of these went out to exhibs this week, along with order blanks. Theatremen may elect to sell the cards directly to the public or arrange for local stationery outlets or other merchants to peddle them. Cards feature color art from Cecil B. DeMille epic.

Metro's non-speaking four-episode picture, "Invitation to the Dance," will start off with an 18th Century circus background, followed by a children's tale, an episode involving eight popular tunes and a finale titled "Ring Around the Rosie." Gene Kelly will appear in the first and last episodes. Stories will be told by singing and dancing. Rehearsals start next month in London.

William Dieterle's recent trip to Israel will save Columbia more than $100,000 in the production of "Salome, the Dance of the Seven Vells." Director filmed a lot of background footage in the Holy Land, and about half of it will be used in the Rita Hayworth starrer. Film contains camel caravans and age-old buildings, impossible to shoot in Hollywood.

M-G's 38 Pix a Surprise

Paramount has been a leader in that type of thinking. It has gone so far as to refuse to announce any set number of films. Its nolley is that when it has a package—story, cast and director—ready for production, it will put it before the cameras rather than try to rush into lensing merely to maintain a schedule and turn out a lote, of films. Its thought is that it may be able to make about 25 pix a year on the shoot-when-ready policy. year on policy.

Although it will attempt to main Although it will attempt to main-tain a heavy slate, Metro is follow-ing the current pattern at other studios by moving to terminate contracts of much of its permanent production personnel. Aim is to hire people as they are required and keep them off the payroll when they're not being actively produc-tive.

That's a move designed, of course, to hold down overhead and make less necessary the lensing of pix merely to absorb standing costs. Since Metro has more long-term pacts with players, producers, directors and writers than any other lot, it is thought that perhaps it cannot shuck them off fast enough to substantially reduce the quantity of "overhead" pix this year, but will move in that direction in subsequent years. By that time a good many of the contractees should be eliminated.

On the production side, exces of other lots are frankly wondering if Metro can come up with a sufficient number of important screen properties to make 38 pix. Since profits seem to be coming now only from films that are really "big" or really cheap, there's always fair, that quantity will bring on middle-bracket pix of the type which have generally not been successful in the current market.

Distribution men, on the other hand, say there is no difficulty in the current market.

Distribution men, on the other hand, say there is no difficulty in peddling product in quantity. Exhibs, as a matter of fact, are screaming for more pix. Theatremen's standard answer to weak grosses is to speed program changes. There's little percentage in that for producers, however, since it means divvying up very little more money among a lot more pix.

Garson in Melody

Hollywood, July 15.

In keeping with Metro's new policy to keep its contract stars busy, Greer Garson was assigned to the top role in "Interrupted Melody," her fourth assignment in the last few months. Others are "My Mother and Mrs. McChesney," "Julius Caesar" and "Snips and Snails."

"Melody" is the story of Mar-jorie Lawrence, Australian song-bird who contracted polio. Jack Cummings will produce in the fall.

SAYS:

"Leading the musical parade is M-G-M which hit the jackpot last year with 11 musicals, all hits. M-G-M's 1952 schedule calls for 13 more."

(13 Million readers of Life read the above in a 3-page section in full color devoted to such M.G.M musicals as "Lovely To Look At" "The Merry Widow" and others)

As predicted, the M-G-Musical parade continues with jackpot success. Following the happy reception for "Singin' in The Rain" we've captured the No. 1 spot on Variety's "Ten Box-office Leaders" for June with "Skirts Ahoy!". The new, big musical Champ is "Lovely To Look At". And as you'll see on this page there's a wealth of fine, melodious attractions ahead. Preparing for production is "The Student Prince" starring Mario Lanza, giving assurance that the fans can always depend on Leo the Singing Lion.

Prelude to Grant's Hiring

Prelude to Grant's Hiring
On the matter of the $40,000 paid Grant, Klein goes into an extensive history of efforts of Cohn and the board to come to an agreement on a new deal. Fruitless negotilations had been going on for two years, when it was decided in 1947 that Cohn should hire Grant to represent him in working out a new pact and Col should pay the attorney.

Klein points out that Grant's intital chore was drawing up an exhaustive memorandum regarding appropriate compensation for the prexy and chief production officer of a film company. Grant showed that Cohn's basic salary of $3,500 weekly had not been changed since 1932. He didn't seek more coin, but "other benefits," and the $300,000 insurance plan was a compromise.

In recommending the settlement-promise.

In recommending the settlement; Klein states that in light of "what has been said concerning the importance of Harry Cohn" to Col, extension of his pact to 1955 "is an exceedingly important benefit."

an exceedingly important benefit."
Klein also asserts that there is no argument as to the value of the services of Grant to Cohn, only as to the fact that Col made the payment. Referee calls Grant's services "substantial and constructive." He also points out that actions of the board complained of were almost all taken before Grant and Crown become directors, so that their liability is dubious.

Klein finds unjustified the charge that the company maintained a yacht for Cohn, although it chartered one for him in the tained a yacin for Conn, although it chartered one for him in the summer of 1946 to keep him near the studio. A projection room (originally authorized at $30,000 but finally costing $129,000) bull at Cohn's home was for the purpose of lengthening his work day, Klein finds, and so was justified. He also outlines terms between Cohn and the company for repayment for the room if he resigns or sells the house.

Parties 'Necessary'
Klein finds no support for the dissident stockholders' charge that Cohn's home was repaired at company expense. As for New Year's Eve parties at Cohn's home that con the cost Col $2515 in 1949, $2255 the cost Col $2555 the dissident stockholders' charge that Cohn's home was repaired at company expense. As for New Year's Eve parties at Cohn's home that cost Col $2,613 in 1948, $2,835 the next year and $3,728 in 1950, Klein next year and $3,728 in 1950, Kiein says that after examining guest lists provided by the prexy he found that most of those present were connected with the film biz. "Undoubtedly such parties are necessary and proper to foster good relationships," the referee onines.

Klein finds no evidence that o Klein finds no evidence that Cohn used company cars for personal biz, as charged, and says that records were provided to show that clothing made for Mrs. Cohn and some execs by the studio wardrobe department was on a "cost plus 10%" basis. He adds that this was during the slack seal ruling by the Commission.

plaintiffs' cause of action. The purpose is rather to point out the general difficulties and impediments to a recovery which are inherent in this litigation."

Defendants in the action, originally brought in New York Federal Court and then moved to the state court, are Cohn, Columbia, Grant, exec v.p. Jack Cohn, v.p. Abraham Schneider, v.p. Nate B. Spingold, v.p. and sales chief Abraham Montague and director Henry Crown. All the Col execs are directors of the corp.

Suit was brought by David Cohn no relation to Harry), William I. Rosenfeld, Horace B. Burnstine and B. Paul Rosen. They were represented by attorney Sol A. Rosenblatt. Echwartz & Frohlich reped Col; Ferdinand Pecora, Cohn; Milbank, Tweed, Hope & Hadley, all the other Col' execs, and Abraham N. Geller, Crown and Grant.

Action charged that the board is under the complete dominance of Cohn and consequently furthered his scheme by approving an "improvident" contract for him that would have the effect of permitting him and his family to reap the benefits of a $300,000 insurance policy.

Klein finds that the board was not under Cohn's thumb and that in many instances they were in disagreement. He also finds that the board drew the pact with Cohn on the basis of sould business judgment and, in any case, since there's no evidence of fraud, it cannot be set aside.

with Cohn other than on Sunday's or sometimes on Saturday afternoons.

Also "sponsored but not related" was Milton Feldman, earning $261 as an assistant director; Sam Katzman, "B" picture producer; Sylvan Simon, earning $2,000 a week (same as he had previously been getting at Metro) as Cohn's assistant, Norman Krasna (no salary mentioned), and Charles Vidor, who was receiving $3,000 per week as a director when he left in 1949.

Klein also says he found no evidence of family portraits being painted at Col's expense or that Cohn set up a corporation for "secret profit" or that Col bought bogus literature and dramatic properties from Cohn.

TV's Future Eye to Film

Asserting that TV stations in the future will depend greatly on use of film, DuMont claimed the merger "poses dangers... that have no relation to financial resources, no relation to financial resources, but that would stem from imposition of unreasonable runs and clearances or inability to get film product due to tie-in of the ABC network with the UPT theatre chain."

ABC's appeal for "emergency relief," on-the grounds it needs approval by Sept. I to plan fall programs, was termed by DuMont a "new theory... injected into the case long after reasons for the merger were given. The obvious purpose was to obtain swift Commission action when evidence produced by the broadcast bureau (ECC) appeared to be sufficient to duced by the broadcast pureau (FCC) appeared to be sufficient to endanger the ultimate approval of integration of UPT and ABC man-

Declaring that Paramount Pictures has "absolutely no control over its policies," despite a contrary FCC holding, the brief urged the Commission to "remember that. DuMont also has been a competitive force in TV networking industry." A decision that Par does not control DuMont, it said, "will also increase competition for the two major TV networks."

However, said DuMont, expedition of the case "is not a sufficient reason to destroy a procedure that has been established and followed primarily to protect the public interest."

Scripting is highly involved with so many odd characters that none takes on enough clarity to register properly.

When "Castles in the Air" was first presented on the West End stage in December, 1949, it had at least the merit of some local topicality. The joke about the National Coal Board taking over vast country, estates ham't, however, stood the test of time, and the resultant picturization is a melange of forced farce and inconsequential humor. Possession of a quota ticket may help to sell it at home, but it has little prospects in the American market.

Action takes place entirely in Scotland, with an ancient castle as main setting. An impoverished earl who has to dodge the tradesmen and take in boarders is suddenly faced with a new situation. The Coal Board (which administers the nationalized mines) wants to requisition the place as a hostel, and a wealthy American divorcee, with an eye on the earl as potential husband No. 2, is anxious to pay cash for the property. Around this simple theme is developed a hodgepodge of nonsense, including an attempt by an eccentric woman nationalist boarder to prove that the young earl is the heir to the Scottish throne.

Yarn is extended into an inordinate 59 minutes by adding one trite situation after another, with frequently ghostly appearances and other absurd inventions. The cast is in the unenviable position of trying to make entertainment from linson, Helen Cherry and Barbara Kelly make a vealiant but unsuccessful effort in the leads. Margaret Rutherford is made to look erts struggles with the role he ghostly Ermyntrude. Ewah Roberts are more than adequate for the production.

Problem of rehabilitation after war, when a high-ranking military post has to be followed by a humdrum civilian job, provides background of this featherweight yarn, which is handled with an assured light touch by a competent cast of British performers. Film should chalk up steady grosses at home, but is only likely to attract modest husiness in American territory. Bringing up two small children on a major's pay in the army of occupation is substantially different from facing the same problem on the modest earnings of a town hall clerk. That's the situation confronting the Wildings as they return to civilian life.

The plot is slender enough, but the script resorts to an unnecessary degree of padding to keep the story moving. It's mainly played, however, in a light key, with a few chuckles and odd moments of pathos. Film has been smoothly directed, and Patricia Roc and Anthony Steel fill husband and wire loles in frothy style. Moira Lister, A. E. Matthews, David Hutcheson, Michael Trubshawe and Diane Hart play the other principal characters in a pleasing light way. C.

The idea of lensing a certain large number of films as a means of cutting studio overhead is now established as false economy, said the vet filmite. As an example, he added: "Metro isn't planning the production of 38 pictures because that's the number required to keep the overhead at a minimum. They're making 38 pictures this year because they have that many properties which look good."

On the exhibition front, Zukor is in sharp conflict with some industryites and observers who insist a large number of theatres, upward of 5,000, should be closed indefinitely. This would be "unsound," be believes.

However, he said, a circuit operator who has seven theatres, perhaps, in a certain area could profit by closing one or two of them in such a way that the remaining houses would better support the entire chain. However, he said, a circuit operator who has seven theatres, perhaps, in a certain area could profit by closing one or two of them in such a way that the remaining houses would better support the entire chain. He cautioned that this type of shuttering must be done on a judicious basis. Offering himself in a hypothetical case, Zukor said: "I would study the film releases due for the next six months. I would consider these in terms of which pictures would be best suited for my houses. If I find that there's not the appropriate product for, say, two, theatres, I would close those two and let the remaining five do the work of all seven."

Zukor would not necessarily keep let the remaining five do the work of all seven."

Zukor would not necessarily keep the lock on the door of the shuttered situations for all time, but only in accordance with new circumstances as they arise. As an illustration, he continued, the Palace Theatre, Chicago first-run, was closed a few months ago and it appeared set to stay shut for the balance of the summer at least. However, the Palace reached out for a pic which it figured could sustain it. Film was "The Greatest Show on Earth," now in its 10th week with a gross of over $200,000. In addition to his recommendation on theatre closings, Zukor further counselled exhibs that "the days of automatic booking of pictures and letting these pictures speak for themselves are gone, and gone forever." He advised that showmen must be astutely selective about the product they book for each situation, and then support this product with full promotion effort.

Zukor was upbeat on two new developments in show biz. On the first, Telemeter, which is the subscription TV system in which Parlas a 50% interest, he believes there's a good chance for exhibs showmen to share in the profits (Telemeter likely will be licensed territorily to franchise operators).

"Telemeter must be operated by showmen, and theatremen are showmen," said Zukor. He added: "They (the exhibs) could play pletures in their own theatres and then send them out over Telemeter to 4:30 p.m.

Hissong feels a court decision knocking out newsreel censorship law which applies to all films. Clagett contends this is not necessarily true, much as he would like it to be. The MPAA attorneys, he said, believe they may only succeed in knocking out newsreel scissoring. The rest would be gravy.

A peculiar sidelight on the campaign against hie censors is the revelation that Ohlo exhibitors asked for the state-wide law in the first place. This statement was made here last week by James A. Maddox, the first chairman of the censor board and former manager of the Majestic, the first theatre in Ohlo built specifically for showing films (in 1914). Maddox claims that in 1912 and 1913 various Ohlo cities were setting up their own censor groups, all with different standards. The situation became so intolerable, he said, that the exhibitors requested a uniform statewide law.

There is a possibility that this decision may be broad enough to include feature pix. In any case, Classic Films in New York is now prepping another suit on the banning of "Native Son" in Ohio, and that may settle the feature issue. Ephraim London, who was Joseph Burstyn's counsel in the recent "Miracle" case before the Supreme Court, is repping Classic.

Each of the five newsreel companies has prepared footage for the test showing. Paramount will show at the Palace, Youngstown, operated by Ed Prinsen; Universal at the Lower Mall, Cleveland, operated by Bert Lefkowlich; Fox-Movietone at the Westwood, Toledo, operated by Martin G. Smith, Metro's News of the Day at the Park, Cincinnati, and Warner Pathe at the Little, Columbus.

A trailer will precede showing of the newsreed picture. The clips in the reel to be presented here including shots of Taff and Elsenhower, new dirigible, Greek troops in Korea and a sports story.

Washington Irving's classic tale of buried wealth in Spain generate only mild interest in this tele-ate only mild interest in this tele-film version. Story values have been subordinated to sermonizing in the Kurt Steinbart teleplay and the result is frequently tedious. Irving's basic story is of the dis-covery of an ancient Moorish treas-ure by a pair of poor Spanlards and the greed that the wealth arouses in town officials. Their greed destroys them, leaving the original discoverers of the gold and diamonds to continue their plati-tudinous philosophizing of the yellow metal's affect on men's minds.

tudinous philosopnizing of the yellow metal's affect on men's minds.

Direction by Victor Stoloff doesn't lift the teleplay above the level of its sometimes annoying dialog and a cast numerically superior to those usually found in a vidfilm fills the roles with no particular distinction. James Griffith, Nick Dennis, Adele Longmire and Lou Krugman are among those with the most lines. Technical credits are average.

the attempted regeneration of a June attempted regeneration of a young convict, and develops as satisfactory telefare chiefly as result of fine thesping by Bill Lester and Elisabeth Fraser in the leads, and adroit direction of Norman Lloyd. Chief fault is its contrived ending, which was so abrupt that it left the impression that the shooting sked was up, so the lead had to be bumped off in a hurry.

abrupt that it left the impression that the shooting sked was up, so the lead had to be bumped off in a hurry.

Lester is the young con smitten of a femme medico who has come to the penitentiary seeking volunteers for a plasma test. He agrees to take the test, so that he can be near the doctor. He comes out of it, and she asks him to take a stiffer one, one which could be fatal, and he agrees. He survives this one, too, and amicably consents to give his blood to a vet just back from Korea. But when he learns the vet is the former cop who sent his buddy to jail he reneges. An unfriendly guard goads him into thinking the medico has duped him all along, and he makes a break with his buddy.

But he learns the doctor has given the vet her blood, and consequently is seriously ill, so he turns back to give her a transfusion, saving her life. Hoky ending has him killed by the guard as he's leaving the hospital.

Bobby Jordan, Russell Hicks and John Crawford turn in competent supporting performances. Teleplay by Howard J. Green and Ray Spencer, based on a Spencer yarn is okay except for the finish. Camera by Ellsworth Fredericks is particularly sharp.

Ziv Moves in Where Webs Fear To Tread With 12G 'Freedom' AM Series

Pointing up again how some of the indie transcription outfits are moving in where the networks fear to tread, the Frederic W. Ziv Co. this week revealed plans for a new half-hour, series starring Tyrone Power which will carry a weekly talent and production nut of about $12,000. Figure far exceeds the budget permitted by the nets on any but their top-name shows, since the webs initiated their budget-trimming maneuvers last season on the supposed theory that it would be impossible to sell sponsors a high-cost show under radio's present state of affairs.

the supposed theory that it wounder impossible to sell sponsors a high-cost show under radio's present state of affairs.

New Ziv series, titled "Freedom, U.S.A." will have Power as a young Senator, who, will take listeners behind the scenes with him in Congress. Ziv is launching sales on the series with a full-scale ballyhoo campaign, including messages of endorsement from a number of Congressional bigwigs, who have hailed the project as helping to educate the public in how their Government is run. Each stanza of "Freedom" will have Power in a dramatic situation based on his unwillingness to compromise his principles. As an epilog each week, he'll spotlight various places in Washington and outline their contributions to America.

Apparently on the assumption that local station operators will have little trouble selling the series. Ziv will accept no contract unless it's for a firm 52 weeks. On that yearly basis, the transcription firm will be investing more than $600,000 in the package. It's recalled, though, that affiliates of both NBC and CBS, during recent meetings with network brass, berated the nets for cutting down on program costs. Affiliates argued that "we can still sell radio," and it's apparently on their confidence that Ziv has so high a budget on the Power series.

Show will also appotlight Washington commentator Edwin C. Hill, who'll act as narrator, and Francis Commentation and remediating the series of the commentator and remediating the series.

Show will also spotlight Washington commentator Edwin C. Hill, who'll act as narrator, and Francis X. Bushman, one-time stlent film star, who will play a judge and Power's advisor. David Rose has been signed to compose and conduct a special score for "Freedom." Herbert Gordon, Ziv production veepee, will produce.

Show is the first radio package set by Ziv since its "I Was a Communist for the FBI," which is now aired on more than 500 radio stations across the country. As with other Ziv properties, the cost of the show to each station is based on a formula, which includes the size of the market, the station's power and the show's budget.

'36 Olympics Closest TV Can Get to Helsinki; Berlin Version Peddled

With the television newsreels banned from covering this year's Olympic games in Helsinki, indie vidfilm producers Jack Gross and Philip Krasne have come up with a 55-minute feature on the 1936 Olympics for syndication to TV stations. Titled "Olympics Caval-cade," the feature was lensed by Adolph Hitler's cameramen, since the '36 Olympics were staged in Berlin.

Film was reportedly smuggled out of Germany during the war and played a small number of theatres in the U. S., but has never before been seen on TV. Gross and Krasne turned it over to United TV Programs for syndication and UTP, in an effort to get it out to stations while this year's Olympics are still in progress, is selling it at a flat fee plus a small print charge. PIX HUNT FOR WCBS-TV

WCBS-TV currently uses more feature product than any of the other network flagships, and the station is eager to get top films for its schedule. With the major studios determined to sit out any move to lease films to TV, however, it's expected that Savage will have little success in his talks with them.

Reynolds Sets Up 2d Europe Unit

Paris, July 15.

India vidfilm producer Sheldon Reynolds expanded his operation this week by setting up a second unit to lens part of his "Foreign Intrigue" series here. Plans for the coming season call for the two units to work simultaneously here and in Stockholm, where the entire "Intrigue" series was lensed last year.

Because of the expanded production schedule, Reynolds henceforth will devote most of his time-to-production and supervision, and for the first time will hire outside writers and directors. He will, however, continue to script and direct some of the stanzas. Format will-switch from cloak-and-dagger stories, to a documentary technique and, in addition, Reynolds plans henceforth to use three leads in each stanza, instead of two as before.

Efforts are being made to design the material for the packages in such a way that subsequent series for the individual participating may grow out of them. He feels it would be bad to tee off a laugh show series on celluloid. He thinks it should start live. Parsonnet Gears N. Y.-L. A. Setup

Indie vidfilm producer Marion Parsonnet tees off his two-coast operation during the first week in August, when he heads for Hollywood to lens a minimum of six stanzas for "The Doctor" series, which he's currently turning out for Procter & Gamble. While he's working on the Coast, his Long Island City, N. Y., studio will remain in operation for the production of spot commercials and another series he's doing for the March of Time.

While he's planned for sometime to open up production work on the Coast at the same time as in N.Y., Parsonnet said one of the main reasons he's going now is because of the difficulties imposed by eastern screen unions on location shooting. With his "Doctor" series calling for considerable location work, the producer said that any attempt to do it in N.Y. would run him into heavy overtime charges.

credential hearings last week, has expanded its fight to an international scale. TV newsreels last week filed a vehement protest against the decision of the Finnish Olympics committee to ban TV newsreel cameras from the 1952 Olympics. Combined TV reels wired their protest to Helsinki last week but have not yet received a reply, despite the fact that Olympics kick off Saturday (19).

Committee originally set a $250,000 price tag for TV rights, which the reels turned down as being exorbitant. Committee, as a result, decided to ban TV coverage entirely in favor of letting a local Finnish film production outfit lens a feature film on the Games. Committee reportedly hopes to sell the film to theatres in the U. S., and was worried that day-to-day coverage by the TV reels would ruin the b.o. prospects of the film. Committee has okayed coverage of the Games by the American theatrical reels but on a stringent pooled basis. Reels are permitted to lens only a specified amount of footage and are not permitted to fly back their material daily. In addition, they must turn over dupes on all film they lens, presumably for incorporation in the projected feature. Committee has also instituted a $100,000 fine to be levied on the theatrical reels if they use their footage in any way other than for TV reels have protested the ban on their coverage on the basis that the committee is attempting to commercialize an event which is participated in by amateur athletes from countries throughout the world.

Filmed TV Shows Have Reschedule Advantage In GOP Preemptions

In GOP Preemptions

Television networks found another advantage in filmed versus live programming last week—that of being able to slot film programs whose regular time periods were pre-empted by the Republican convention coverage at some later time, and thereby save the cost of rebates to the sponsors.

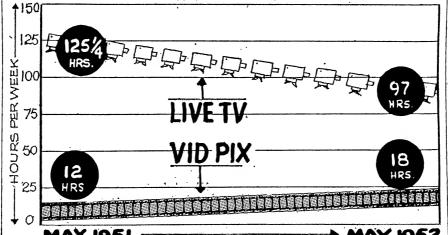

Of the number of programs necessarily cancelled out of their regular periods by the GOP pickups, it was only the film shows in most cases which could be rescheduled. Most of these, of course, are aired locally or on a regional basis but even so, the pre-emption costs they saved the networks made their rescheduling very much worthwhile. Nets also pointed out that they were able to reschedule them now since their summer schedules include a number of sustaining holes.

Among the shows aired at a later period was NBC-TV's "Foreign Insuringue," which is bankrolled in some 15 markets by Ballantine's. Film series is usually aired in those markets at 10:30 p.m. Thursdays. That time, however, was filled by the GOP nominating speeches from Chicago last week. As a result, NBC aired the show Saturday night (12) at 10 p.m., trimming the sustaining half-hour from it's "Summer Dance Party" for those markets which usually carry "Intrigue."

'Capt. Banner' Vidpix Educ'l-Adventure Series

Seacrest Productions, Inc., recently formed to turn out films for TV and industrial use, rolled a series of educational adventure pix for television yesterday (Tues.) in Newport, R. I. Tagged "Captain Banner," the series will be a 52-episode group and will be packaged for the William Morris Agency.

VARIETY Filmometer (Nighttime Only)

Time devoted to films for television increased and time devoted to live programming decreased on the TV networks over the past year, in the hours from 5 p.m. to midnight. Daytime programming, where film has made little dent, is not included in the chart, nor are films not made especially for TV. Included in the film figures are vidpix which are sponsored in at least five markets by one advertiser. Figures are in hours of programs per week.

Commission action, faken at meetings which lasted until midnight, indicated that the agency means to move fast in getting out permits wherever there is no competition for specific channels. In its first go-round, the Commission has already covered 27 cities in two priority lists for application processing (in several cities applications were dismissed for inaccuracy or failure to amend to new allocations).

Agency acted in giving out permits in less than two weeks after its scheduled date of July 1 to begin processing. The last-minute flood of applications, however, did not subside until a few days before the Friday meetings.

Issuance of the permits, especially those for Denver and Portland, Ore., is expected to result in a hot race to get stations on the air first. Some of the permittees, it's believed, have had equipment on hand, including cameras, for some time and may be able to get in operation this year. It usually takes from six to nine months to build a TV station.

Wade Rounds Out WOR 'Date' Plans

Tying down the format for the upcoming addition to WOR-TV's (N. Titled "TV Dinner Date," it's to be aired Monday through Friday from 6.30 to 7.30 p.m., starting Aug. 4. Directly preceding Wade's "Broadway TV Theatre," the two shows together will simulate an "evening out" for viewers, including dinner and a variety show, followed by a legit play.

In addition to Wingate, the permanent cast will comprise duopianists Whittemore & Lowe; vocalist Gail Meredith, and a male singer and a dance team yet to be selected. In addition, the show will be backed by a 20-piece studio orch. Wade plans also to inject a talent search gimmick, in which three girls, recruited from off-Broadway thesping groups, will vie for the title of "Miss 9"—tying in with WOR-TV's channel 9.

Wade is currently lining up nine judges, whom he hopes will comprise w.k. show biz personalities, who can judge the contest by watching the show each week just one night from their homes, Each "Miss 9" winner will be pacted by WOR-TV to serve as a live station-break announcer the following week, for which she will plug the WOR-TV program lineup.

As with "Broadway Theatre," the show will be exactly the same all five nights each week. Vocalists will sing the same tunes, terp team will use same routines, etc. In that way, Wade hopes to capitalize on the format evolved for his "Theatre" series, in which the budget can be amortized over a period of five nights, rather than the one-night deal handed most other video shows.

There's Room for Both TV. Theatre Pix, Says British Exhib; Sees No Biz Threat

A line of demarcation should be drawn between entertainment beamed on TV and that screened in exhibitors' theatres, according to Jack Davis, head of Monseigneur News Theatres, Ltd., which operates eight newsreel houses in Britain. There's room for both in the public's taste, he said in New York recently, and rather than infringe upon one another they could provide a healthy competition.

could provide a healthy competition.

Meantime, Davis noted, the industry is somewhat divided as to the advisability of making films available to the BBC. A certain faction of the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors association), he added, wants to play ball with the BBC and grant features to it, on the theory that if product is withheld the government will proceed to make its own.

On the other hand, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. opposes any move which would turn over pix to TV. In Davis' opinion industryites are unnecessarily alarmed, for he doubts that even if the BBC made its own films, they'd be of high enough calibre to cause any distress to the exhibitors.

Although Britain now has three TV stations which cover the London area, the midlands and the north, Davis revealed that video has affected business to only a small extent. Grosses have been holding up well, he pointed out, except in areas hit by an economic depression. Lancashire, for example, has eased off since the market for textiles dipped.

Davis, who arrived in the U. S. recently, is here primarily to contact sponsors with a view to setting up deals for production of full-length and short features for television in England. He's already held talks with several potential clients. Associated with him are a number of top British producers who have both studio space and scripts available.

FCC Okays Power Boost For St. Loo's KSD-TV

For St. Loo's KSD-TV

St. Louis, July 15.

The FCC has okayed an application of KSD-TV, sole TV station here, to expand its transmitting facilities to increase its power from 16 to 30 kw and the expansion will include installation of a new six-bay antenna atop the 500-foot TV tower on the roof of the Post-Dispatch annex building in the downtown district.

Chief Engineer Ed Risk of the station said the increase in power will improve a stronger signal which will improve reception of the station's programs in the "fringe" area 60 to 100 miles from St. Louis. The power and antenna changes are part of a long-range program to eventually increase the station's power to 100 kw, which would more than double the station's signal strength. The new facilities are expected to be operating by next fall.

ACLU Urges Webs, WPIX, KOWL License Stay Pending Blacklist Sift

Washington, July 15.

American Civil Liberties Union, charging that the FCC "by imputation" is bowing to the same type of pressure as that which it charges Red Channels exerts on the networks, called on the Commission again yesterday (Tues.) to hold public hearings on the Issue before renewing licenses of the nets and two indie stations. ACLU demand was contained in a formal brief in reply to the nets' disclaimers to the FCC April 9 that they practice blacklisting.

According to the ACLU, the "most significant part" of the networks' answers is what they omit. "For not a single answer contains any denial of the allegation that blacklisting on the basis of Red Channels is prevalent in the radio-TV industries," the brief said. "Since four of these defendants—NBC, CBS, ABC and DuMont—are the largest networks in the country, this fallure to deny an essential allegation of the complaint would seem to be the most significant. Unless a specific denial of blacklisting practices is forthcoming, we are willing to abandon our request for a general investigation and the investigation of listed instances of blacklisting, and askonly a hearing to determine measures of combatting this evil.

"We do believe, however, that only an investigation could disclose the extent to which Communists operate, or have operated, a blacklist of their own, since their operations are so secretive that we were unable to uncover any evidence thereof, evidence which could be obtained only through use of the subpoena power."

Notre Dame Plans Own Grid Package

Notre Dame, the midwest football kingpin smarting under the financial squeeze caused by the restrictions put on gridiron telecasts, is threatening to keep all its home games off live TV. The South Bend Catholic school, instead, is working on a plan to sell the exclusive TV films rights to the game.

Notre Dame officials have long been critical of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.'s limitations of live video, It's been their possition that telecasting rights belong to the individual institutions and have reluctantly gone along with the NCAA-controlled TV setup at a financial sacrifice. Two years ago, before the NCAA impósed its bars, the school peddled its home games to DuMont for $300,000. Under the present NCAA schedule, limiting each team to a single tele appearance, Notre Dame would get but a fraction of fhat amount as it share of the package.

Should the school succeed in wrapping up either a network or regional bankroller for its postgame film rights, it would put something of a crimp in the NCAA package recently bought by NBC-TV. It's recognized that any TV grid schedule that didn't include Notre Dame would be less attractive. However, one of its road games could conceivably be included in the NBC-NCAA bundle.

Anthony set a price of $8,000,000 many years ago, knowing it would scare off would-be purchasers. If NBC is stymied in KFI deal and turns to KMPC as second choice, the price would be somewhere between the Richards estate's asking price of $1,250,000 and the net's outside offer of $300,000. It's considered likely the web is playing KMPC against its affiliate, with Anthony likely to strike a deal rather than lose network shows and struggle along as an indie.

BRISTOL-MYERS MULLS DEAL FOR KEN MURRAY

Ken Murray, who's aired Saturday nights at 8 on CBS-TV for the last three years, may move over to a Sunday night period when he returns this fall. Bristol-Myers, which has been looking for a show to replace its "Break the Bank" Sundays at 9:30 p. m., has reportedly been considering the Murray package among several others, and is expected to decide finally within the next week or so.

in the next week or so.

It had originally been thought that Murray would be back at his Saturday night stand in the fall, but CBS revealed this week that the period has been handed to Jackie Gleason for his new vaudeo presentation. The 9 to 10 period Saturday nights is still open, however, and a possibility remains that Murray may go in there, if the projected deal with Bristol-Myers falls through.

Indications that television is drawing the audience away from all programming done by the radio networks' key ode, stations with the exception of music and news was seen this week with the decition of WCBS, CBS Radio's N. Y. flagship, to cancel both Margaret Arlen and Phil Cook in favor of a personality disk jockey show. Web hopes to bring over Bob Haymes, now under contract to WNEW, N. Y. indie, to take over the time both Miss Arlen and Cook had occupied six mornings a week.

Situation also underscores further the way the network flagships are moving into a programming groove once considered the private domain of the indie stations. Trend was pointed up several weeks ago when WNEC, the NBC web's key N. Y. outlet, lured Gene Rayburn away from WNEW, as part of an expansion of its roster of personalities who have built enough of a name for themselves with local listeners to endorse personally the products of their participating sponsors. WCBS had also been bidding for Rayburn.

Miss Arlen has been with WCBS for about 11 years and Cook has been a stalwart on the station for almost 20 years. Station had wanted to expand its informal music programming for some time and got its opportunity when Miss Arlen, who has been heavily sponsored, decided she wanted to devote her full time to her video show on WCBS-TV, the AM station's TV sister. Her radio show has been aired Mondays through Saturdays from 8:30 to 9 a.m. but WCBS station manager Carl Ward, in order to give Haymes a bigger slice of time, decided also to axe Cook, who airs Mondays through Saturdays from 8:15 to 8:30.

Haymes' contract with WNEW runs to August, 1954, meaning that WCBS must buy him from its indie competition. Negotiations are now in progress and WCBS hopes to be able to launch the Haymes 'series Aug. 11. Present plans call for him to do the same type of show he now does for WNEW, including some solo planoling, singing, and record-spinning.

Illustrating how the move to personality shows helped build ratings for the network flagships, Ward revealed

It's basically an interesting idea, in which panelists attempt to solve a crime enacted by a group of thesps. and the lifeless work of the panel. (Program is in for a summer run as replacement for "This Is Show Business.")

On any show such as this, its success derives entirely from the moderator and panel. Rathbone, an obvious choice for the moderator's role because of his longtime association with the Sherlock Holmes character, was evidently suffering from camera fright. He raced through his lines with a patently assumed air of bravado, but paradoxically slowed the pace aimost to a halt with the long pauses in his speech. Panel teamed two authentic private eyes (W. Sherman Burns, chief of the Burns agency and Patrick King, assistant head of Saks 5th Avenue detective squad) against two show biz shamuses (Walter Greaza, of NBC-TV's "T-Men in Action" and John Larkin, of the "Perry Mason" radio show), but their crime-solving capabilities and disinclination to join in the fun indicated they might have been suffering from the heat.

Scripter Henry Kane, himself a w.k. detective story writer, dished up two good crimes for the panelists to play with, and they were well enacted by a group of competent thesps. One of the puzzlers, incidentally, formed the story some months ago for NBC-TV's "Martin Kane," which, Kane also scripts, But any fun that viewers had in watching the show could only have come from their own attempts to crack the cases, rather than from participating with the panel.

Andre Baruch handled the Lucky Strike plugs, which were filmed, with his usual capable amouncing. Based on the tremendous popularity of detective stories and other private eye mellers aired regulative on TV and radio, "Lucky Clue" stands a good chance of grabbing off an acceptable rating during the summer—but only if something is done to inject a little more life into the moderator and panel.

(Dancer, Fitzgerald & Sample)
The going may be expected to be a lot tougher for this lightweight family situation series now that it has invaded the evening hours after an earlier cruise as a Saturday morning offering. Fluffly affair with its potbolier script, uneven acting and generally disjointed direction as unveiled on the initialer (10) is hardly up to even hiatus standards.

Judy role this season is played by Mary Linn Beller, who, with firmer directional reins and less stereotyped lines, would register more effectively. Same goes for the rest of the cast, although Flora Campbell and John Ghson, as the mom and pop, showed their knowhow despite the handicaps.

The "situation" this ume was one that had been done countless times before and was telegraphed from the opening bell. It was that chestnut about the old suitor popping up again to stir up embers in the matron just as Judy and brother Randolph had convinced dad he'd lost his romantic touch. Gaffer deedes to go gallant and sends flowers to the frau and asks her for a "date." Mom thinks the posies and the invite came from the old beau and after a series of misadventures, the pair windup on Inspiration Rock, favorite smooching spot of the Younger set. Yarn finales with Judy and her boy friend dashing off to rescue the parents who end up in the clink for necking in public.

longhair. He's also a good shownan, although on the schmaltzy side.

On the premiere program, for instance, he trained the cameras on "mom" in the audience, mentioned her Polish background and his Milwaukee childhood and did a solid polka medley. His personality comes across as ingratiating, but a little too saccharine; a more casual, relaxed approach is more suited to tele's intimacy.

The schmaltz was also present in Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody" and other items in which he exhibited his digital dexterity. Unfortunately, he was perspring after one demonstration of finger fireworks and his singing of "September Song," which followed, didn't get full impact. He also has a tendency to throw in concerto-type chords where a simpler arrangement would tell a better story.

Robert Montgomery is attempting something new for his summer dramatic series on NBC-Tv, via inception of what is probably Tv's first stock company. Based on the accepted modus operandi of strawhat resident companies, Montgomery has rounded up a group of thesps, headed by Vaughn Taylor, John Newland and Margaret Hayes, who will appear in different types of roles in all shows aired on the series this summer. Acting group is experienced at Tv and the idea should pay off, providing the scripts are of comparable quality.

Initialer Monday night (14), however, was only a fair teeoff. Show staged was "The Catbird Seat," adapted by Robert Shaw from a James Thurber short story. Basically a satire on ad agencies and the overly-collegiate brand of execs who sometimes run them both Shaw and the cast overdid the satire with slanstick. Play held audlence interest and was probably most appreciated by show biz viewers, but even the most uninitiated could have predicted the denouement by end of the first act.

If many more quiz shows are brought into tele's programming skeds, viewers are bound to become as confused as femcee Arlene Francis was in the preem stanza of CBS-TV's latest quiz show entry, "Who's There?," Monday (14). Miss Francis, who should know her way around panel programs, referred to the new series as "Celebrity Time" and "What's My Line?" She could have tagged a half-dozen other current quiz show names on it without straying too far from the truth. This quizzer is a composite of them all and uses the same basic ingredients—host, panelists and guest celebrities. All are attached to a guessing game format that offers little excitement or humor.

Plan of the series is to have the panelists guess, the name of the guest celebrity from displayed prop and/or apparel clues. For example, George Jessel, stanza's initial guest, was cued to panelist Bill Cullen, a TV quizmaster, Paula Stone, Broadway producer, and Robert Coote, British thesp, via (1) a portrait of Whistler's Mother (for his "Mom" monologs), (2) a picture of a fox (for his 20th-Fox affiliation) and (3) a telephone booth (for the monolog phonecalls).

Jessel's name was guessed by Miss Stone at the third clue, but it was a tedious affair until she got there. Only letup was Jessel's mugging when one of the panelists guessed Lassie and another Tallulah Bankhead. Jessel, by the way, gave the program its only lift when he sat in with the panelists to guess the other names, Cupid and Phil Rizzuto. He gave his seat to Rizzuto-for the guessing stint on the final celeb, Gertrude Ederle, but program had run over and Rizzuto had no chance to participate.

Miss Francis was her usual effervescent self in the hostess' chair, and aside from series' label fluffs was in top form. Panelists Cullen, Coote and guest for the preem, Miss Stone, had little more to do than shout out names.

Several camera-shot mishaps indicated that the show could have tused more rehearsal. Rex Marshall delivered the Maxwell House commercials for General Foods efficiently.

An alert, weekly program moderated by Theodore Granik, had a lively and provocative half-hour (9) with Paul Hoffman, former ECA administrator, General Eisenhower backer and Ford Foundation official, in a pickup from Chicago as part of Philco's NBC-TY coverage of the GOP convention. An alert, intelligent, well mannered and fine appearing group of boys and girls, selected by the American Legion and a juntor college, fired a series of pointed questions at Hoffman on virtually every phase of the Eisenhower campaign and the former General's stand on the important issues.

Most of the interviewers were articulate and assured, for their ages, although several stumbled. A few, at the suggestion of Granik, pressed Hoffman with second and third queries. The ex-president of Studebaker Corp. proved to be as fluent and effective spokesman for Eisenhower, giving direct though necessarily brief replies. Hedging noticeably only once or twice, thoffman good naturedly commented that the youngsters "are asking some questions that would take a book to answer."

A query on the reason Eisenhower had not taken a more active part in the 1948 Republican campaign—when he was bserving as Columbia Univ. president—seemed to get Hoffman slightly on the hook. Most newsworthy revelation was that if Eisenhower were elected president, he "probably would want to go to Korea and spend sometime there looking over ministrator, General Eisenhower backer and Ford Foundation offi-

ELEPHANTS WON'T FORGET TV

TV Tunes Up for Donkey Serenade

Chicago, July 15.

Democratic convention planners who closely observed TV's "shake down" handling of the Republican conclave are busy this week plotting various changes designed to smooth out "errors" they detected in the GOP sessions.

Major correction on the Demo agenda being worked out is a ruling by the various committee chairmen that their respective hearings be open to radio and TV. Committee sessions start later this week, with the convention proper starting Monday (21).

Definitely in the works is a new back-of-the-hall position for one of the pool cameras to permit head-on shots of the speakers' platform. The GOP refused requests for such a position at its meet, allowing only angled lensing from the pool bays along the second balcony in the International Amphitheatre.

An improved credentials arrangement has been devised for the myriad number of staffers and technicians involved in the electronic coverage. The Repub's complicated badge system caused considerable confusion at the hectic convention site last week. The Dems are issuing a single badge for radio and TV which will permit the bearer free movement in and out of the hall and in all sections of the huge arena except the convention floor itself and the speakers rostrum. Special badges will be handed the radio and tele men working the floor and the rostrum.

The convention time table has come in for a lot of study. It has been recommended that nominating speeches be limited to 15 minutes, with seconding gab. limited to five minutes. Honorary set speeches are being flequently reminded of video's presence. Letters have gone out to the 1,574 delegates and their alternates asking them to be on their best behavior while in the hall. The formal convention program contains a page of television instructions and reminders.

The Dems have worked up some visual devices which will be used to sell their political "message" from the convention via video. Although Fry refused to go into detail, it's understood these gimmicks include charts and drawings which wil

TURNED TIDE TOWARD IKE

Chicago, July 15.
For the first time, radio and television have played a major part in forcing the selection of a Presidential aominee.
This is a selection of a presidential aominee.

This is recognized by the GOP politicians who admit that, without the broadcasting media, Senator Bob Taft would undoubtedly be their party's candidate for President

dent.

Here in Chicago, where the advance guard for the Democrațic convention is already gathered and at work, the big time politicos are studying this hard fact. They remember that TV lifted Sen. Estes Kefauver into the position of a leading contender for their nomination. They are wondering what part the medium will play in the eventual choice of their nominee.

But, more than this, across the nation wherever politicians gather they are ordering new studies into the best possible use of TV to help their parties win next November.

What has colored their thinking

What has colored their thinking
—from the oldest of the Old Guard to the youngest of the Young Turks —is what happened to the powerful, smoothly operating Taft machine in Chicago last week.
When the GOP National Commit-

When the GOP National Committee met and gave the Taft faction the contested delegations from Texas, Georgia and Louislana, the nomination was regarded as "in the bag." The Eisenhower people met in a desperation huddle. Only one thing was left to them—arouse the people to demand that the convention upset this action. There was one way to reach the people most intimately within their own homes.

Ike's Big Bally

The Eisenhower leaders took to the etherwaves. They accepted every invitation from every netevery invitation from every network and station to speak on the issue and to denounce "the big steal." They created invitations for themselves, seeking out broadcasters who would put them on the air. One pro-Eisenhower U. S. Senator did practically nothing else for three days. Morning, noon and night he was on television and radio, talking about "steal," "morals," "smoke-filled rooms" and "steamrollers."

From scores of thousands of

and "steamrollers."

From scores of thousands of towns in the 48 states, the letter and telegrams began to roll into Chicago. Some delegates were flooded with them. These messages demanded repudation of the National Committee's action.

Now that the Republican convention hoopla is finished, reports are beginning to flood the TV networks from local stations of misplaced commercial bills of the commercial company to the commercial commerc

the TV networks from local stations of misplaced commercials, line snafus, etc., presumably caused by American Telephone & Telegraph's lastminute rush to complete its interconnecting facilities through the southwest. Five southwestern stations, for example, reported they were getting the Philco commercials' audio from the NBC pickups over the Westinghouse plugs' video, via the CBS coverage.

Topper to the situation was one station, which had contracted to receive sponsored coverage from one of the nets, wiring in to report that it was getting the pictures fine, "but when do we start to get the commercials?" Quick check with AT&T revealed that the station was getting the network pool coverage designed for the Coast stations, which was being fed sans commercials. TV execs are now wondering whether some stations during the upcoming Democratic conclave will be getting FM sound on their TV screens.

RWG Strike May Seriously Impair Dems Convention

Radio Writers Guild, currently striking against ABC, CBS and NBC in an attempt to get pay likes for radio news writers, has indirectly warned the Democratic National Committee that it might seriously impair progress of the Demo convention in Chicago next week via its anticipated picket lines around 'Chi's International Amphitheatre and Conrad Hilton Hotel. At the same time, the Guild requested national committee chairman Frank McKinney to intercede on its behalf with the nets in an attempt to settle the dispute. dispute.

Entire deal was worked out for GE by BBD&O, but it was later decided that the show would be bankrolled by another division of GE, which is handled by Young & Rubicam. As a result, Y&R gets the billings. GE moved in on Crosby last week, when a previous deal with Coca-Cola fell through. CBS had made a firm, binding offer to CBS for the Groaner at the web's asking price of $16,000. Contract, however, had not yet been signed by Crosby, and his brother, Everett, who serves as his business manager, was still shopping around. Groaner had been offered a deal to ping various Indie ice cream dealers around the country, on which he wanted to cut in his show's staff and crew to help compensate for their enforced pay cut when CBS trimmed the budget from last season's $27,000 to $16,000. Since Coke considered ice cream competitive, the Crosby were looking for another bankroller.

Everett Crosby at that point talked with Jim Bealle, BBD&O's chief of talent and new program development, who told him the agency was recommending a radio show to GE. Several days later, the GE deal went through, under a plan which would have the parent company plug all products on an it.stitutional basis; but with the various divisions kicking in the costs. BBD&O reps the parent company.

Louisville division, which handles the larger home appliances, demanded it get the show alone, and the parent company finally released the show to it. This meant turning the billing over to Y&R, which handles the Louisville division. As a result, GE and BBD&O got together and tossed the plum into Y&R's lap.

While a time slot has not been finalized for the show, it's expected to take over the Sunday night at 9:30 slot, rather than the Wednesday at 9:30 period, which Crosby had last season. Contract gives GE first rights to any TV Crosby does this season, but it has not been determined whether he'll double into the newer medium yet.

The 5½-pound handle talkie has a two-way switch which permits wireless conversation with a Telenews cameraman operating from a platform high above the convention floor. Gen. Ike (New Acts)

By BOB HOPE

Chicago, July 15.

Television really came into its own at the Republican National Convention in Chicago, where Gen. Dwight 'D. Elsenhower (see New Acts) stole the show ... Eddie Arcaro arrived Thursday to ride the dark horses out of town ... But the Puerto Rican delegation really wowed 'em ... There is a report that Sen. Robert Taft is auditioning as straight man for them next season... Just before the ballot was taken I saw Johnnie Ray standing between the Taft and Elsenhower quarters... He was ready to cry either way.

One of the most dramatic moments of the convention, and certainly the best acting job of the season, was the Taft-Elsenhower handshake scene in the lobby of the Conrad-Hilton after the nomination... You could see the sincerity right through their bandages... They had a victory dinner (without Jessel yet)... Fred Waring played... George Murphy danced... Ike and Mamie sang.... Everybody ate Taftburgers and had a wonderful time.

Taftburgers are made out of ground Democrats... Taft made an interesting speech at the victory dinner... He got up and said, "A funny thing happened to me on the way to the first ballot.... I lost Minnesota ... The editor of Quick magazine was a little disappointed at the outcome... He was hoping they'd nominate a midget.... And those reporters really got, around... During a secret conference of the Texas delegation one of them crawled out of the air-conditioning units... It was Elmer Davis, wearing a racoon coat. ... Bill Henry did a great job.... He talked almost continually for five days.... Decca Records is considering putting his tongue out in an album... Ben Grauer handled the West Coast news reporting job.... In fact he talked so fast his pivot tooth struck oil three times.... Overall there was some great reporting done by all the boys, zooming this medlum to new heights in public interest... And what a break television is for the voting public interest... And what a break television is for the voting public interest... And what a break television is f

Credentials Snag Burns Radio, TV Correspondents

Chicago, July 15.
Radio and TV correspondents had their share of grief and annoyance at the Republican convention, but nothing got under their skins like the early breakdown in credentials distribution.

Having watched the GOP flub, Democratic spokesmen promises there will be no such trouble this coming weekend in connection with their ducats and badges.

Networks, stations and members of the Radio-TV Correspondents Gallerles, which controls credentials, all laid the blame at the door of the GOP ticket committee. They specifically exempted from blame Ed Ingle, in charge of radio-TV for the Republican Party, Ingle fought for adequate credentials for the broadcast group.

TIMBERII TIMBEE!!
With Don Garrard, Jacqueline Smith
Producer: Doug Nixon Writers: Nixon, David Savage,
Dolores Claman
90 Mins; Wed. (2), 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining Sustaining CBC, from Vancouver

Vancouver's "Theatre Under the Stars" took a night off, after a week's run of "Timber!!" (announced as the first professionally-produced Canadian musical comedy), to air it with the same casion Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s Trans-Canada Network.

"Timber!!," which has one more exclamation mark than "Oklahoma!," resembles it too in being fresh and genuinely indigenous to its setting—the British Columbia logging industry, who se 32,000 real-life timber topplers have been on strike for several weeks. Chopped down to an hour and half for radio, it still made sense, was a lively piece of Canadiana and would be novel entertainment on a U. S. network, with revisions retaining the freshness but toning down purely local references.

Music, penned by Dolores Claman, Vancouver pianist, ranges from fair to good show tunes, with one swingy pop potential, 'High, Wide and Handsome." Doug Nixon, CBC's Vancouver program director, and David Savage, Canadian freelance, turned out lyrics of high consistency and a light, amusing book with some heavy cracks at the character of a lumber baron. Plot has a conservationist newspaperman take the bigshot's fancy frilled offspring into the dive to see the weekending loggers who make her $375 evening outfit possible, and she sees them chip in a like amount for a B-girl to buy an ensemble to match. Daughter falls in love with Dan, the handsome logging expert, and her papa fires him, but a strike threat forces his rehirling, with permission to "farm, not lay waste, our forest reserves."

B-girl, distinctively playe d by Lorraine McAllister, socked across a smart song, "You Can't Catch a Man With a Mink." Jacqueline Smith played the rich gir well, but warbled too operatically. Don Gerrard acted and sang the lumberjack role with warmth and strength, and the general acting level was good, as was the air production. Ot her meritorious show songs were "Highrigger" (with a flavor of "Old Man River"), "Take It Big!," and a ballad, "I'm Going to Wear My Best Sunday Heart."

Back at his old stand behind the mike doing a play-by-play of the Salt Lake Bees baseball games, Mal Wyman is still this town's favorite sports man. He's glib and fast on the pickup, with a warm, friendly voice that comes over with plenty of life.

As result, his handling of the games is an interesting session, even when the Class C Pioneer League players go haywire and start heaving the ball at everything but the right base. Wyman is quick to pick up any byplay occurring during a game, and when the situation can stand it he tosses in a gag or two. But he has no suppressed desire to be a comic, so his broadcasts aren't loaded with sour quips. Commercials are pitched mostly towards an institutional approach, stressing the fact that electricity is the family's biggest budget bargain. They're slipped in occasionally and hold to a nice length, which makes them easy to take.

"Open House" dispenses a generous amount of live local talent, which would leave a sharper impact with tighter preparation and production. Show originates in the Latham Circle Super Market, where, according to emcee Frank Panny's remarks, the space for entertainers is congested. It features Carol Horton, onetime vocalist with Eddy Duchin's band; Lenny Hart, Albany popster; Bill Wemple, electric guitar (he furnishes accompaniments): Glöria Call and the C.D.C. Models, and others.
Alan Dix, who does a fall-winter singing program on WINS, New York, guested the day "Open House" was heard. Miss Horton's mother, Betty, a New York vocal coach, also appeared. A high school girl piano-accordionist and a harmonica player likewise performed. Super-market customers were interviewed between numbers.

Show, presented in Informal fashion, moved at a slow pace, with moments of obvious padding. A cut in the running time might be advisable. Miss Horton sounded best in a rhythm number. She ductted smoothly in the closing "Now Is the Hour" with Dix. He soloed twice, registering strongest with "It's Wonderful."

Panny featured a friendly, mildly kidding approach. He, emphasized a bit too much the catch-ascatch-can presentation and leaned heavily on superlatives. Interviews with market patrons stressed the advantages of suburban shopping and living conditions. Technical side of program did not always sound perfect.

Telling stories to moppets is nothing new on radio, but Alene Dalton throws enthuslasm, skill and effort into the old formula and comes up with a session that leaves nothing to be desired.

A warm, rich voice and the knack of making it actually sound as if she's telling the story and not reading it result in a lively convincing session.

Program opens with Kay Richins introducing the S. P., who then goes into her yarn. In stanza, caught, she gave the youngsters a repeat of Cinderella billed as an encore by popular demand. (President, Ziv Television)

The gold rush era in television films is coming to an end. Now that it's more or less agreed that sooner or later perhaps 75% or 80% of television programming will be on film, the hit or miss days are really over.

From a romantic standpoint, it's too bad that no longer can a sourdough dig up a pilot film and declare he's in business. It's not that easy, anymore. There are now too many solid companies in the field producing good, entertaining and artistic films for the fly-by-nights to have any attraction for the advertiser.

Naturally, I'm not criticizing the pioneers. I might modestly say that many of us who were among the first in the field are now the backbone of television films. But I do mean that the chances of a gold strike on the basis of one pilot film are rapidly disappearing, if they haven't already vanished.

Matter of fact, the television film business is becoming stabilized, and while we will go still higher, the level of artistic integrity and creativeness is many times higher than it was even two years ago. Some very fine things are being done on television film. Even better things will be done.

Parenthetically, I should like to point out that there one.

Parenthetically, I should like to point out that there seems to be some critical confusion on the subject of television films. It's not a question of whether television programs on film are better or worse than live television. Each has its own function, its own standards of creativeness and artistry, its own art form and its own peculiar demands.

Comparing live and film television loosely is like asking do oranges taste better than eggs?

Burned by a Quick Pilot

To get back to the situation in film, no longer do advertisers grab for a quick pilot. They now want to see a whole series and with reason. Too many have been burned.

users gran for a quick pilot. They now want to see a whole series and with reason. Too many have been burned.

And even beyond that, advertisers now assess rival television film companies with a cold, discerning eye. They want to know about the artistic and technical quality of the films and their production, of course; more, they now are very much interested in servicing; distribution, promotion, publicity and sales record.

These are important because many times the success of a television film series will depend to a great extent on them. After the films are finished, will stations get them when they should? If necessary, is the producing company so well set up that a replacement can be shot out to a station? Are the films being properly promoted and publicized? And what kind of a sales history does the company have? Etc., etc.

Smart advertisers are looking all this over.

They also make sure now that a company doesn't allow the quality of its film to nosedive after a plushy pilot has been bought.

They know, further, that to be successful, television films must contain the elements that build sponsor identification, give him merchandising potentialities and a program structure that will enhance and not be in conflict with his commercials.

We know, those of us who have had years of working with thousands of sponsors in transcribed radio programs and television films, how important these things are.

But we're not losing sight of the fact that the race will go to those who not only can make television films to fit the commercials pattern but who also know that there is only one way for artistic standards to go. And that way is up.

By WILLIAM F. BROIDY (President; Wm. F. Broidy Productions)

Like the greedy fellow in the fable, indications point to the fact that we in television are very likely to be guilty of virtually killing the Goose to obtain its Golden Eggs. To commit this crime, in our greed to reap "our rightful shares" of profits, would be to commit a foul act indeed.

Television is as lusty an infant as ever has graced the entertainment world—but it remains still an infant which must be nurtured and guided before it can grow up into its own majority to become our complete sustenance. We must maintain it—before it can ripen to the age where it can maintain it. And we must not take nourishment from it, until it has arrived at that age.

There is a great deal more to the production of television films than the mere consideration of it on a profit and loss basis. The fact that a producer today sometimes achieves a profit on a television production is still a happenstance, rather than the usual pattern. More usually, he doesn't start to make a profit until after the third or fourth run on the TV circuit—which may take two or three years. This means that, in addition to the original investment money, he must add to it the interest necessary to earry that investment over that period of time. And this fact is what makes outside capital so difficult to obtain. But these are things of little interest to the get-rich-quick boys: they are interested only in the fact that sometimes television can be made to pay a profit and they want their "cut."

consideration is that, in the main, television films today are being made using every shortcut possible, in order to realize the lowest budget, and when you cut corners, you cut quality. Whatever profits may be realized these days should be poured back into television film production—to better the quality, to afford better preparation or more rehearsal time, to allow more "takes" to assure best possible cinematography. Without this, television film production never will achieve that superb quality which theatrical motion picture production attained, and quality is probably the most outstanding need in the television industry today.

Every single person who has anything to do with take.

Every single person who has anything to do with television films, from the producer, director, artists, cameramen, craftsmen and all the way down the line to the man who ships the final prints, must contribute his share toward its quality goal, not take from it. Television can afford to pay within reason, at this moment, but it cannot afford luxuries.

If ever there was a Noble Experiment, we are in it today. It calls for understanding and cooperation between all phases of television operation—for give and take. Such a spirit surely will hasten that day when the present-day infant becomes a giant—large enough to sustain us all nfant becomes a giant—large enough to sustain us all 'in the manner to which we'd like to become accustomed!"

By ROBERT M. PASKOW (Film Director; WATV, Newark)

WATV has always concentrated on film programming up to 80% of total time on the air since its premiere of more than four years ago.

By this time, it is common knowledge that theatrical films are acceptable and popular with TV viewers and sponsors as well. It is also common knowledge that there are only a few thousand features and westerns available and cleared for television. Most of these have been played to distraction by the four and seven-station markets.

Depending on program policy and methods of purchasing, every station can bid for and buy first-run product. In most cases, it is the total amount of money involved in relation to the quickest playoff that carries off the coveted contracts. The remaining stations then wait for the round robin to play them off at prices the stations can afford.

The age of the pictures as well as the quality of production and star values in each has some bearing on the deal. Even the running time may be a big consideration as many stations will not run over the hour unit, and do not have the large staff necessary to re-edit each film to fit the time slot. Stations are required to buy from one run to 10 or more runs in one year in order to amortize the enormous prices asked. Only a few stations are responsible for this condition while the law of supply and demand aids and abets.

Most of the distributors attempt to get their total invest-

Clearance Major Problem

Our gripe about some distributors is the fact that they insist on more than one run in a short period of time and sell other stations in the same market in between the runs they have sold in the first place—without clearance.

runs they have sold in the first place—without clearance. Our biggest problem is clearance. Until station film buyers demand an accurate cut-off record of every playdate confirmed and played in the market, we deserve to get the treatment we are getting.

Each contract should state explicitly how much time should elapse after each playdate before it is repeated by another station in the same area.

In our opinion, this period should be at least 90 days. We believe there should also be 90 days clearance before each playdate. For example—a film buyer may contract for a group of films today and include a clause to start playing them three to six months later.

The station has every right to expect protection in the playing them three to six months later.

The station has every right to expect protection in the interim period if the contract is acceptable to the distributor. Otherwise, the distributor should tell the buyer it can't be done. The clause referred to should clearly state that such and such a group of pictures would not be sold away until 90 days after the playdate and 90 days prior to the re-run contracted for.

As for the quality of prints: Most of the established distributors try to keep their prints in fair condition, but they are not geared up for good service. Confirmation of bookings are ignored; last minute substitutions are not infrequent. Prints often have 50 to 100 splices and they hate to junk them.

Stations film personnel should reject poor prints unless they are paying for inferior prints.

These distributors with 35m backgrounds (theatrical films) are invariably better equipped to give better serv-

The 16m versus 35m discussions have subsided—thanks to laboratories. Sponsors are no longer worried about films as accepted entertainment. Better equipment and more experienced personnel have helped materially. But, television toppers have not yet recognized the place of film in proper perspective. Television film departments are not getting the cooperation they deserve in relation to the overall operation.

By ELIZABETH BAIN (Film Director, WGN-TV, Chicago)

(Film Director, WGN:TV, Chicago)

The most crucial problem facing distributor-station relations today is centered about the fact that local television advertisers cannot meet the first-run prices distributors need to continue to enter the present television market. Unlike theatrical distribution, television has a celling upon potential first-run lease prices. Limited markets and audience exposure place certain restrictions on the commercial value of first-run features which some distributors are ignoring in evaluating expected revenue in Chicago. This is a mutual problem which requires close cooperation between distributor and station. A station buyer, knowing the budget of the local client, cannot meet the price distributors have put upon first-run material without knowledge of market conditions. Unfortunately, some distributors' over-optimism, in spite of research into what markets will bear, has resulted in confusion and discouragement.

The quality of subject matter and of prints now under release has sky-rocketed in the past year. seems to be a matter of diminishing concern.

At the present time, there are several first un packages available in the Chicago market—a situation without parallel. The only obstacle in their sale is the two-edged consideration that they are priced beyond a station's ability to realize a reasonable return of profit and the client's inability to pay upper bracket prices. Stations' growing reluctance to underwrite expensive multiple runs has forced distributors to sell high-budgeted first-runs to clients willing to buy one run—a practice which in itself has kept film prices at astronomical levels from a station viewpoint.

WGN-TV feature films are about 85% totally sponsored. Hence, saleability and not picture quality is the determining factor. The sale of films appears to be dependent upon star names as opposed to story content. Recently there has been a deluge of old films of varying degrees of vintage and quality flooding the Chicago market under the false hope that stations are so anxious to get films anything can be sold. Fortunately, no one has been a scapegoat.

By CHARLES J. BASCH, JR. (Television Screen Productions)

We believe that among users of television film, there is beginning to be a consciousness that all films of one length are not alike. This may sound axiomatic. But, aside from the largest producers (who are able to sell a program to a national sponsor for a first run), those who have made film for syndication, have found that a 15-minute show would bring a given price in a given market, regardless of the quality of the picture or of the ingredients entering into it, including the quality of script, cast, sets, and technical "know-how."

Not too long ago, many of the smaller and medium-sized agencies and television stations seemed to expect a producer to sell a program in their market at a price to compete with tired old motion pictures and ancient one a producer to sell a program in their market at a price to compete with tired old motion pictures and ancient one-reelers, produced for other purposes, and now shown on television by budget advertisers.

Audiences are getting "wise." They'll accept old-time movies at a late hour, when that's all there is to see. But, when competition is in the air—and on the air—they're not satisfied with second-rate entertainment. Then, they compare what's on other stations, and turn off the old stuff, which may be spotty, or full of long-shots, good for full movie screens, but with heads and feet chopped off by the TV screen. So, audiences too, in large metropolitan areas, who have had TV for several years, now note the difference, and will become more selective as time goes on. We know of a number of medium-sized film producers, who have produced films of good quality and have gone out on the limb to produce 13 or 26 episodes of good programs, and who have had trouble selling them in individual markets for syndication. "Too high" has been the squawk. But, we are beginning to feel encouraged. We think perhaps the huyer of films in independent markets is "growing up." There is a tendency to consider films with the same yardstick as is used for live programming. Buyers are beginning to be willing to pay more for a better quality show on the theory that "you get what you pay for."

By WINSTON HOPE (WTAR-TV, Norfolk)

. Those of us who are working in a single station market area find that we are unable to reschedule a film, even a very, very good one, in less than 10 to 12 months time. Perhaps large areas do not have this problem, but in our case, it applies to not only feature films, but shorts and film series. We find great difficulty even when the networks repeat a program sooner than 10 to 12 months. We

It Used To Be Mah-jongg, Then Charades — Now They Say It's Because of TV 2. Ilco of TV

Burying the Motion Picture Industry at frequent intervals is a national pastime, indulged in by movie critics, housewives, high school debating teams and racetrack touts, despite the fact that there are some well-defined laws on the books against burying a sentient body. The principals in this rather ghoulish indoor sport also include a professional coterie of crepehangers, procession mourners and eulogy howlers who are above offering cogent facts and intelligent diagnoses to bear out their special pleading. The significant fact is not that there is an army of viewers-wift-alarm, but that despite the dreadful prophecies, the Motion Picture Industry is still with us, alive, vital and profit-bearing.

It might be interesting to note also in passing with us, alive, vital and profit-bearing.

It might be interesting to note also in passing that the current onslaught of television—generally given as the latest affliction which brought about this sudden rigormortis—is but the newest of a long series of "calamities" which brought the movies to earth. There was, for example, the advent of radio in 1920; the first talkles in 1926; the Crash of 1929; the 1933 Bank Holiday; the European War in 1939; Pearl Harbor in 1941; and now in 1952—television. These occurrences have resulted in the deepest values of gloom on the agitated anbularity of Hollywood's graph ups and downs. In fact, selsmological disturbances, spots on the sun, and tidal waves near Terra del Fuegos are also said to influence the fate of Hollywood movies at the world's boxoffices.

Always Living In Crisis

Always Living In Crisis

The motion picture industry has never been in "good shape" as the perfectionists understand that standard of excellence. Neither has the entire automobile industry as an industry; or the radio industry which has been bedevilled by all sorts of competition, including girls' softball and, believe it or not, the movies. The legitimate theatre has been dying for so many years now that spectators have just quit going to the funeral and are attending the "South Pacifics" and "The King and I," among many others instead. The motion picture industry lives in crisis. Studio executives face perpetual crisis. The production of every motion picture—from your weekly newsreel to a musical extravaganza—starts with a form of occupational crisis and ends in one. Everything affects the movie industry, in the same sense that everything affects everything. And the graves registration team which digs its plots and prepares for this indecent burial of the movies is hypersensitive to every gravitational, as well as economic, disturbance.

But, say the prophets of predestined doom, why are the movie houses of America closing up? Seventy this week? A thousand this year? Is this to be taken as an equally positive indication that the movies are dying? It is a fact, that drive-in movies are under constant construction and their number is increasing. It is also a fact that the number of Broadway legitimate theatres which are open has dropped from 70 to 30 in the last few years; the stage is still going strong and plays are still making money. In the current Divorcement, which will ultimately separate the film industry entities of production, distribution and exhibition, there will be a great amount of preliminary economic jockeying, which will inevitably close movie houses, as well as sound stages and distribution exchanges. This is a change-over period, a revolution in the structure of the film industry which is bound to have significant economic repercussions until a new level establishes itself. This cynical rema shortages of everything, and the public had nowhere to spend its money except at the beach or the bar or the Bijou, statistics were based on 1939. In 1939, statistics were based on the median year of 1936. In 1936 figures were based on the low drop point of 1933. And in 1938, statistics were based on the low drop point of 1933. And in 1938, statistics were based on the Crash of 1929. In 1929, boxoffice ratings were based on the dismal year of 1928. In 1929, boxoffice ratings were based on the dismal year of 1926 when the industry was undergoing the switch from silence to sound. These figures have been juxtaposed to prove almost everything. By the light of federal amusement taxes on theatre admissions, the industry is not doing badly at all. In 1929 the government collected 720 million dollars; in 1935 518 million; in the peak year of 1946, 1,427 million; and two years later, 1,386. If you want to look at it that way, Hollywood is twice better off than it was during the pre-depression peak year of 1929. A very cursory glance at major company net profits for four different years reveals that in 1931 the companies declared a net profit of 33 million; in 1937, 24 million; in 1941, 16 million and in 1947, 47 million.

These statistics prove only one thing: that there are no absolutes in the finances and economics of the movie industry. The economists see an early demise of the movies based on charts and graphs; the polisters conjecture a quick burial based on attendance at baseball, wrestling and cock-fighting. The TV experts multiply the number of set sales by the weight of the Loch Ness sea monster, and come up with some pretty foreboding if fishy statistics.

Television, which is the latest of the behemoths to confront the movies (it used to be mah-jongs, then bride, and later charades) deserves a special consideration, for here is a fellow entertainment medium which is squawking and wetting its electronic diapers just as radio once did Television will grow up; and claim adult attention just as all children growi is is the general assumption that the movie industry will not have learned how to control this brash youngster by then.

A serious misconception is that movies are competing for public attention on the same basis of television. The movies and television are competing not for money, but for time. It the supposed gauge of public interest is the price the spectator pays for this entertainment, then television has the edge on the movies because it's free; and by the same token of absurd logic, ants trooping in and out of their mound will be the curse which eventually lays television, because you can buy a ready-made ant hill in most five and 10-cent stores for a dollar; and, finally, housefiles put on a good show by themselves-for nothing. Shoppers for entertainment are rapidly discovering that if they have two or three hours of time to devote to entertainment, movies offer and will continue to offer more entertainment, movies offer and will continue to offer more entertainment, movies offer and will continue to offer more entertainment per amusement hour. Television, in fact, is beginning to serve as the propellant which is sending people back to the movie houses to get away from a plethora of "one minute spots;" supercharged appeals to PHONE NOW; and the unsightly spectacle of amateurs trying hard to look like professionals in a medium controlled by amateurs who seem to insist on holding on to their amateur standing at all costs. Audiences, in fact, are delighted when they are treated to the relief on TV of a seven-year-old movie, outmoded styles, plots, dialogue and concepts notwithstanding.

Motion pictures thrive on 50 years of technical know-how, on the combined experience and talent of outstanding creators, and on the continued interest of the public in intelligent, eye-appealing entertainment. The gloom-spreaders are always with us, and are eyer ready to pull down the walls on the industry and themselves as well. In the meantime, between wakes, we shall continue to make some great pictures, many good ones,

Network television today, despite the often unwarranted critism, has developed into a year-round business. Advertisers are staying on 52 weeks each year. In 1951, out of CBS Television's full evening schedule, only one advertiser chose to take a hiatus. This year there is also only one and we have just written over $7,000,000 worth of new business.

Advertising Budgets

When we compare the advertising budgets of the 60 leading food and drug firms for 1950 and 1951, we get a pretty good idea of what's been going on. First, we start with the fact that 80% increased their budgets in 1951 over 1950. However, 42% cut magazines; 61% cut newspaper supplements; 72% cut radio, and 98% added to their television appropriations.

In my opinion, as advertisers be-months of this year are running about 75% ahead of the same period last year. At this rate, we can expect television to account for about $850,000,000 this year—or about 10% of the total money spent for all advertising media. I think television, offering sight plus sound plus action, deserves and can put to highly profitable use for its sponsors, a lot more than 10% of the advertising dollar. Perhaps the most encouraging picture that I look at every day is the long list of logical television prospects who are not yet in the medium. This list is our main target. It's a long one. These advertisers belong in television. They can afford it financially and in most instances, since their competitors are already in, they can't afford to be without it.

As long as such a list exists, there is no danger of our scraping the bottom of the advertising barrel.

Today, the future of the network television business rests in the hands of prospective advertisers like these, as well as those already using the medium. Our future could not be left in better hands.

& Use of TV

By D. J. JACOBSON
(Director of Public Relations, CBS-TV)

On the mass communications bill-of-fare these days, as we all know too well, television is easily the most popular dish. In fact, in some quarters today people are saying that it is the only dish—and saying it would do normal. saying that it is the only dish—and saying it would do very well as an exclusive diet. In other words, they would actually have you believe that television is a medium of mass communications destined to make all other media obsolete. To me, this is both unhealthy and unrealistic thinking. To me, talk like this not only endangers the healthy growth and future of television, but jeopardizes as well the importance and obligations of mass communications in a free society.

We at CBS Television believe in importance and obligations of mass communications in a free society.

We at CBS Television believe in the need for mass communications—all mass communications—by written word and by spoken word, as well as television. We realize full well that the printed word via newspapers and magazines registers upon readers a host of vital facts. We realize, too, that the spoken word via radio highlights to a gr. at degree this vast body of information. At the same time, we see the dramatic pletuse in action on the cathode tube—as one that gives added perspective to a total problem, and does the job virtually with the speed of light. The result is that the printed word, thanks to the swift visual implementation of television, can be quickly assimilated, quickly evaluated and, in short order, can take on a fuller meaning and truey dimension:

With the Speed of Light

With the Speed of Light

Putting it simply — television translates words into actions swiftly. It makes facts come alive with the speed of light.

But, the more I think of television in respect to public relations, the more it seems to me that television has more to do with public relations than any other medium of mass communications.

One reason why I say this is because, in a very real sense of the word, the function of public relations is not merely one of disseminating facts. It is a job of making sure that these facts are properly evaluated. A public relations man's function is to give people a better perspective of his company, its policy, its people, and its products. Television is the perspective medium.

Television is the perspective medium.

I believe that every public relations man should take full advantage of the television programs currently being sponsored by his company. Being mindful of the fact that television is an invited guest in the home and that however many millions it reaches, it reaches them all intimately and personally, the public relations man should utilize his company's program to make sure in such a way that it reflects the personality of his management. If good public relations is good citizenship, I can think of no, better use of television in public relations than the sponsorship of programs which bring people good entgrainment or a sharper concept of current events without violating any of the laws of good taste, or without insulting any minority groups, or without overstraining broadcasting regulations or codes. I believe that it is within the power of a public relations man to guide his company's television program in such a way that its content and commercials reflect the real personality and spirit of the company.

A public relations man who wants to bring the truth, the facts, yesperspectives, to the people whose lives his company touches in one way or another, can look to this medium as a powerful ally. I think that I can speak not only for CBS Television, but also for the entire industry, when I say that we are tremendously mindful of our obligation to serve the American people. I am sure that a public relations man with a real public service need for his client can find a local television station or a network extremely receptive to his problems, provided his problems are related to the public interest rather than the public interest being related to his problems.

By FRED M. THROWER (Vice President in Charge of CBS Television Network Sales)

Television's future is brightest, the seems to me, on the very points on which it is criticized most today:

1) That it is not a national medium.

What will this station growth 2) That it is pricing itself out of

While it is true that television is While it is true that television is not yet a completely national medium geographically, it is most certainly a national medium competitively. It offers more circulation than Life, Saturday Evening Post and Collier's combined. Its sales impact—the combination of sight and sound—is far superior to that of printed media. Where else can an advertiser simultaneously demonstrate his product in millions of homes?

Television is doing all right

Television is doing all right thank you, with its tremendous penetration within the areas it already serves. And now that the freeze has been lifted, new stations in new markets will make televi-sion a truly national medium geographically.

About the Future, Say Five Years

The FCC allocations plan will permit 2,053 stations in some 1,275 communities. There will be three or more stations serving 101 of the top 168 markets in the country, if, as and when these stations are in operation. The FCC, in our opinion, will approve about 20 new stations this year, and about half of these may be on the air by Christmas.

Now in this fertile field of prog-ostication, there are many many nostication, there are many, many unknowns. Adding everything up, however, here's the way I see the

What will this station growth mean? First, it will make television a truly national advertising medium geographically and; incidentally, remove one point of current criticism. Second, it will mean millions more TV homes—homes to buy goods. Third, it will mean that buyers of network shows and networks themselves will not have the prohlem of clearance in single the problem of clearance in single station markets.

The experts on set sales tell us that there will be 20,000,000 TV homes by the first of the year. Since there are already 34,000,000 homes that can receive TV signals, this means that, as of the end of this year with 20,000,000 TV homes, we will still have a potential of 14,000,000 homes within the area of our present station setup. Strong promotion by TV set manufacturers should help to lower this figure substantially.

In the areas still untapped by television, which the new stations will serve, there are another 17,000,000 homes. With this potential, it seems reasonable to me to assume there will be at least 40,000,000 television homes in this country by 1957, as new market areas are opened up, and television sets flow into them.

Pricing Ourselves Out of Business

Costs of television have increasnostication, there are many, many unknowns. Adding everything up, however, here's the way I see the future, today:

By the end of 1953, there should be a total of 240 stations in operation. By 1954, there should be

Radio and the Box of the Good Pandora

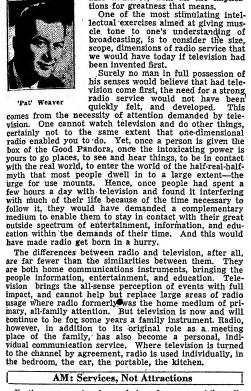

Wherein "Pat" Weaver Sets Forth NBC's Declaration of Principles and Sees A Vital AM-TV, if Molded Into a Complementary Medium, Mirroring the Changing Patterns of Beliefs and Permitting America to "Witness the Problems, Participate in the Tragedies, Watch the Riots, Thrill to the Inspiring Deeds"

By SYLVESTER L. WEAVER, JR. (NBC V.P. in Charge of Radio, TV)

There is far more at stake in American radio in the next year than the question of a rate cut, or the programnext year than the question of a rate cut, or the programming changes that must come to network operation.

Network radio is the complement to network television in keeping all America a single, available audlence, with all the implications for greatness that means.

One of the most stimulating intellectual exercises aimed at giving muscle tone to one's understanding of

AM: Services, Not Attractions

Furthermore, as has been obvious for years, while radio as a series of attractions demanding high attention is easily replaced by television attractions because a fuller, more complete attendance of the event or entertainment is made possible by television, a great deal of radio's development has been in the direction of services, not attractions. Thus music while one works around the house, plays cards, reads, eats. Thus the news when you want it. Thus the time, the weather, the coverage of sports and world events.

Radio and television together reach all the country. Radio cannot be relied on for full coverage of TV homes, but not a dollar should be spent by a national advertiser on top of his television campaign in media other than radio, until he knows his next appropriation is aimed directly and without duplication at the vast American audience of 25,000,000 homes without television. All media duplicate television coverage. Only radio clearly complements it.

I have never deviated for a moment from my convictions about the need our country has at this time for a great communications service, which is only available through a great network operation that can plan and program both radio and television, as below, and that can afford the tremendous coverage job of the planet so important for our survival on our own terms. It is so greatly, so insistently in the public interest that radio and television be built together that we must solve all the problems that impede us, realistically, incisively.

Planned and programmed together, radio-television will

Planned and programmed together, radio-television will offer personal and family communication that will present basically the same ingredients in the forms each medium does best, offering planned alternative to television to make non-viewers into radio listeners in television homes, or to make non-viewing members of a family with its TV set on, also radio listeners. The great names of show business, the great shows, will be on both radio and television.

The broadcaster competes with all other attractions for the time of the American family. He must plan well to get more time for his television broadcasts, and in addition, more time for his radio broadcasts.

more time for his relevision broadcasts, and in additional more time for his radio broadcasts.

If television and radio are planned together, to give what all of the people want some of the time, and what some of the people want all of the time, then we will have a centralized and broad series of television and sound schedules which will make for a tremendous communications service to the people.

When one has television one has the best presence at the event, but as the people get used to this instrument and all of its marvels, in seems to me that people in the years to come will remain in contact with the event mostly through radio and will go to the television screen partifularly during the climaxes and the more visual parts of the event. In terms of planning, a coverage of the world's events, peoples, problems, et cetra, the ability to cut from radio to television and to use radio as an extension that will not impede the progress of business and social activity, but will enable one to hold one's audience, has great advantages. Following that basic line of thinking of coverage of the real-world, one quickly begins to sense how the complementary programming of radio and television together is always pressing toward a more complete coverage . . . a more fixely be schedule . . . a more enlarged scope of the communication service of radio and television.

Radio developed gravitating toward an entertalnment medium because it was entirely responsive to the advertisers whose basic wishes were to attract circulation at as low a cost as possible, and sell that circulation their goods. In television, the program plans are much broader and this has not happened, and as television takes the primacy in the broadcasting art, the television pattern will be impressed on the radio pattern.

This is essentially a good thing for all concerned, particularly the advertiser. For it means, at least to me, that the advertiser will eventually be in a position where he can buy guaranteed circulation on the same basis that he can buy guaranteed circulation on the same basis that he can buy guaranteed circulation on the same basis that he can buy guaranteed circulation on the same basis that he can buy guaranteed circulation of the same basis that he can anywhere else, where he can associate his advertising with entertainment that he is sure will not be offensive to his company and his customers. Or he can divorce his advertising from association with entertainment. He can continue to have personalized selling and certain aspects of the so-called gratitude factor. He and his agency will be able to develop a permanent stable relationship whereas in the past the advertising relationship has often been disturbed or ended by the failing program.

Once television and radio are broadly advertiser-supported on a media basis rather than individually programsponsored, and circulation is guaranteed, the whole emphasis on finding new faces, new stories, new techniques, refreshing the schedule in every way, will be high-lighted. The kind of jeopardy that broadcasting has experienced, in trying novel things, will disappear. The new programs will be advertised supported but if they fail or hit, it will not essentially affect the circulation of the advertiser because he will be buying a series of positions and he will be guaranteed his base circulation. On this system, therefore, there will be a constant and planned change of program in an attempt to build new stars and develop new excitement in the broadcasting schedule.

'Personal Radio Is Here'

Anyone who has given any thought to the technological future of radio and television knows that the personal radio is here, that while pocket television sets are possible once a light amplifier is developed (on a projection basis of course), it is still basic to full country coverage for 10 years and probably forever to have radio services available. The future television set will use its screen for television, movies (home kines), plus many other features. But the personal radio set will also be able to give you, by push button, the correct time, the weather, the news, the TV audio, the radio schedule (which will have all the AM-TV combinations in it like simulcasts, back-to-back version A and B of the same show, use of the top artists in both media in different shows, use of the same attractions with different stories, et cetra, and repeats of anything outstanding.

Now anyone who thinks such a broad and necessary pub-anything outstanding.

Now anyone who thinks such a broad and necessary public service will be developed by a fragmentized radio industry, or a television industry based largely on marginal network or syndicate film operations, is living in a dream world. If the economics of great network operation are blocked by any interest or group, or by the government, then the communications service of our country in its time of peril will gravitate toward the merchants of amusement, toward the too-wide range of local service, toward the limited and specialized service companies which cannot do the complete job. The picture of what can happen to radio and television in this country is a picture that should be with us all, because it can be disastrous.

And why should any company be allowed the kind of

And why should any company be allowed the kind of scope I am outlining? Broadcasters through their history have had to be basically news men first. They had to cover the real world. Entertainment actually has had little representation in management among the broadcasters. Most programming, origination and production has been done by private companies through their agencies on facilities furnished by broadcasters, and the latter have used revenues from these companies to present news, special events, sports, education and public service shows. However, in televishon, program origination and production have largely been developed by the network. And, even more important, we have given the clients what they needed before they wanted it, whereas earlier radio lagged the clients' want and needs; we have made new advertising patterns which develop more efficient advertising values, lower cost per thousand, higher cumulative audiences, bigger ratings for smaller advertisers, et cetra.

We believe that our long-range plans are better for the client and the agency in offering the television medium to sell goods than any other of the possible developments in network television. Furthermore, the radio version of our clients more effective advertising at lower costs that we believe it is important for great network radio-television to survive. It is because having the all-family, all-home circulation through a planned radio-television schedule, we can create a new stature in our citizens. The miracles of attending every event of importance, meeting every personality of importance in your world, getting to observe members of every group, racial, national, sectional, cultural, religious; recognizing every city, every country, every river and mountain on sight; having full contact with the explanations of every mystery of physics, mechanics. and the sciences: sitting at the feet of the most brilliant teachers, and being exposed to the whole range and diversity of mankind's past, present, and the aspirations for mankind's future—these and many other miracles are not assessed as yet, But I believe that we vastly underestimate what will happen.

miracles are not assessed as yet, But I believe that we vastly underestimate what will happen.

I believe that we are on the threshold of a new era in human history, and that it will be brought about through a change in human attitude. Barring war, I believe that a radio-television communications system of the scope and dimensions that we plan will create a generation of informed youngsters whose great point of difference from us will be that they accept diversity, individuality, differences in belief, costume, language, et cetra, as wholly natural and desirable. The whole history of all societies has been the effort made by the society for conformity, uniformity, conventionality, identification with the society. This tremendous weight of disciplines on each of us, from birth on, has not been remotely measured. Once we have the instruments and the will to open the world for all to see, we are making a most dramatic change in the environment of our country, a change almost wholly for good in my opinion. This does not mean, of course, that exposure to all the varieties of human experience is endorsement, or that such exposure of the rich treasures of man's history and development need lighten the enthust-asm with which, for instance, American history can be portrayed, and the votal values created by our Founding Fathers.

Indeed, how much greater is the explosive idea of equalities and the values of the state of the contraction of the

Indeed, how much greater is the explosive idea of equality as it was developed by the American thinkers, when it is related to the world of its day, and how slowly it has moved forward except in our own country. With, the memorability and impact that history-through-television will have, every child will know our history with a grasp simply not found outside history departments in the better colleges. One of our projects in the "Frontal Lobes" group which I have mentioned before is the history-making plan, wherein we take the footage of great historical movies, cut out recognizable-face footage, use the rest as the material from which we will write our historical scripts, inserting our actors with background projection, cut-in scenes, montage effects, and all the tricks of Hollywood. But at the end, when you see the War of 1812, you'll see probably the background footage from $100,000,000 worth of pictures about ships-of-the-line. First indications from Britain are favorable. Hollywood is considering.

Still Something Desired

It may be said that our present product leaves something to be desired, a generality true of most everything. Our news and special event coverage is great, and will be greater with more prosperity. The TV helicopter, disaster unit, overseas interconnection, and all other physical equipment projects are moving along fast. Our new plans for a communications center with an electronic brain recording every picture and word, filing and indexing on microfilm, recallable by pushing a button for instantaneous background material, morgues, orientation, et cetra, are coming along. And far beyond equipment, our actual program plans in the field of ideas are of a scope and intelligence that I consider well ahead of any other effort by any other group in any other idea field. This includes Operation Wisdom (interviews with aging greats, like the Bertrand Russell interview which was the first); Faces of the Age (a checking of our content and taking action about it); Operation Enlightenment, which is in the integration of beyond-entertainment material in all entertainment shows; Operation Frontal Lobes (special event) which is the replacement of shows on the commercial schedule by one-shots, great telementaries in the public interest; plus shows aimed at making our audiences more aware, more interested, more knowledgeable, like "Today" (and its planned successor programs), the news shows, "Meet the Press," "American Forum," "Youth Wants to Know," "Mature of Things," "Mr. Wizard" and many, many others. Radio and television, planned together, programmed together, and finally sold together, will keep the 95% of all Americans available for news, information and entertainment. Whether they follow their favorite comedians on one medium or another or both, or listen to an event until its climax draws them to the television set, or until their leisure allows them to sit down and give full attention to television, or whether in a house, the children watch a television show while Dad hears a baseball game on radio, Mother follows her f useful and helpful.

Behind all the confusions and fears of our present world, there lies a very clear pattern of beliefs in which enlightened people (of a liberal persuasion) can believe. If radio-television can present the alternatives to the people, can take them out into the world so that they witness the problems, attend he conferences, participate in the tragedies, watch the riots, see the misery, thrill to the inspiring deeds—then the frequently uncertain and anxlous mood of our people will give way to an accelerated resolution and determination. An aroused America, vigorously optimistic, understanding and equitable, can quickly match its vigor in the people of its allies, many now also confused and anxious. Once there is a full and forceful group giving the Communists battle with a clear-cut belief complex, Communist power, thriving in many vacuums, will meet its match on myriad fields.

Blame It on Lack of Vision Telepix -But Don't Say It's Television Arithmetic

One of the curious things about the show business season just ended is that' television, the patsy for everything bad that's happened to the entertainment industry since Booth shot Lincoln, is—as is usually the case—a ubiquitous but threadbare scapegoat. For when it costs you two bucks to make a dime, as weeping TV producers claim is the case with them—when it costs you more to get customers than the profit you can make on them—you're not winning the race; nor are you in a position to be much of a long-range threat to anyone but your creditors.

The truth is, TV is just this era's flashiest peace-side example of how the world is changing. Things, people, prices, human values, everything is changeing. Even our language. Bromides that have come down through the years meaning one thing have changed overnight and suddenly mean something else. Not long ago, when a kid showed up for breakfast and heard his mother say, "You look a little green around the gills," he'd deny he felt straces of some chlorophyl toothpaste.

If show business thinks there's anything it can do about this changing world, ask the guys who used to be in the buggy-whip business.

If show business thinks there's anything it can do about this changing world, ask the guys who used to be in the buggy-whip business. Or ask the gas companies. When electricity started to illuminate our lives, the gas companies didn't turn on all burners, take an overdose of their product and get buried with their sorrows. They soon found new ways to sell what they had and as all survivors have done, they accepted that uncontestable political truism—if you can't beat 'em, join em'. You can't beat progress. You've got to join it.

Some Call It Madness

And that's what calm people call this change—progress. Others call it social revolution, or refer to it with single dignity as the foreseeable eventuality of ideological warfare. This progress—or change—has been blamed on the Republicans; the Democrats, Management, Labor and sunspots. Some call it madness, some call it love and the horoscope boys call it a pain in the astrological castings.

Whatever the case, whatever the effect, the fact is we are enjoying the greatest prosperity in our history. We are virtually the only solvent nation on the face of the globe with management making substantial profits even after taxes, and labor getting more money and union recognition than it ever got before. Yet with things seemingly to be going so right, every area of enterprise in the country is on a blues kick and show business is walling the loudest.

To hear the top men in every echelon of entertainment Johnnie Ray it, Irving Berlin should have written—there's no business that has no business like show business. And the whipping boy for all this is television.

it, Irving Berlin should have written—there's no business that has no business like show business. And the whipping boy for all this is television.

TV has, to hear them tell it, ruined everything from the motion picture industry to stag smokers. It has annihilated the radio industry, strangled the music and record business and, to get down to grass-roots, the fruit and vegetable dealers all over the country beef about a sharp dropoff in sales because it makes the living room messy to sling a soft tomato at a no talent tomato on a TV screen.

Though TV is the target of every branch of show business, the truth is, we've entered an era that's calling on every department of the entertainment world to get off the dime. And each department is discovering, with a sickening thud made by dropping profits at the box-office, that they've got to be more than merely adequate with considerable regularity, if they're gonna cut the mustard and get with the rising rate of audience intelligence. Those who are not eager, willing and anxious to swing with this increased awareness on the part of their customers, those who want to cling with suicidal cowardice to a rapidly aging status quo, must soon realize that the old bromide "business as usual" is another cliche that's taken on a new meaning ... which is, "less business than usual."

The fact that TV has helped—along with radio, movies and the stage—to increase audience intelligence is the only point at which TV becomes in any way responsible for the necessity to change. And here it's best to remember that show business has always created monsters for itself; monsters over which it must then triumph. And I don't mean actors. Vaudeville was the monster that de-flowered burlesque. Burlesque came back in the form of the lavish revues of Ziegfeld, George White, Earl Carroll and the Shuberts to start kicking the pins out from under vaudeville. Motion pictures took another swing at vaudeville before talkies and brought one up from the floor when

The music business thought radio would kill records. Now records are killing radio. Motion pictures, too, thought radio would kill them. But after the first hysteria died down, Hollywood found radio and talking pictures working together in happy communion. Because both radio and pictures learned the public would buy both when either of them came up with something distinctive.

2 Rights Can Make a Wrong

Today pictures are again bleeding and now they blame TV. The truth is, their hemophilla is directly traceable to the same thing that started the Broadway stage on a rocky road—a transfusion of real estate into the bloodstream of creation and production which, in the case of the movies, resulted in too high a blood-count of bad B pictures and double-feature bills. When these ceased to sustain boxoffice life, it led to a couple of A pictures on a double bill, a classic example of two rights making a wrong. So motion pictures shouldn't just blame television.

Television is this decade's reminder that each element of show husi-Television is this decade's reminder that each element of show husiness, by its constant and natural desire and effort to improve itself, has done such a great job of educating its customers that unless it Keeps up with them, it will have educated itself right out of business. Today, to have business at all, there must be a new drive, an intensive effort to recapture the first, fine, careless rapture of the haleyon days before show business got so grooved. And to judge how deep our rut really is, consider this; when we can't sell our product we blame the customer instead of the product.

In most industries when there's a slump, the top men try to talk to the trade. In show business, showmen have had things their own way so long, they've forgotten how to do this. They only talk to each other. And try to blame television for everything that's wrong, forgetting that customers may not have anything to say about what is offered to them, but they darned well have something to say about what they have

Show business differs from other operations to the extent that where most businesses have only to be smarter than their competitors, the people in show business have to be smarter than their customers. And to blandly blame TV for the slump in all branches of show business proves no effort is being made in the direction of outsmarting the

The truth is, audiences have caught up with showmen. For the most part, they'll now accept only such items as have some intrinsic merit. And to the fact that radio and television have contributed to this sharpening-up of people, radio and, of course more importantly now, TV are indirectly to blame for the troubles of the other branches of show business.

But if you call the roll of sufferers, you'll find radio and TV are both right in there with those who hold them to blame. With the music business in a near panic, motion pictures in a cold sweat and "The Fabulous Invalid" enjoying one of the worst of its periodic relapses, radio is barely able to get up off the canvas, and television, the alleged cause of it all, turns out to be a spendthrift infant with a high I.Q., a great future, no past, a vulgar present and a big bottle of red ink for consolation.

Wanted-Intelligent Effort

So to find the true wherefore of this you have to go beyond the mere mention of television. For TV, too, is a sufferer from the inescapable truth that show business, in all its phases, has grown into an ogre that devours people and material at a rate that outstrips all possible human effort to keep up with it. Show business is consuming faster than it can create. And little or no intelligent effort is being made to reforestate our creative manpower with the same intensity that we're chopping it down.

For this reason, the material that show business is now relying on is not from the factory of the mind, but from the storehouse of the mind. We're running through our memories revamping, rehashing and rearranging the antiques in our mental attics in a frantic effort to supply the increasing demand created by harum-scarum competition. We're taking out more than we can possibly put back. Witness all the revivals, all the re-writes, re-dos and blurred carbon copies. This, not television, is show business' problem today. But no one will admit the slump is a long-range thing that includes television, the "menace." This necessity for getting raw material from which to create product is inherent to every industry and show business, from AM to TV, is not (Continued on page 46)

The arithmetic of TV film programs is the American way of doing things—the same American way that enables most of us to afford an automobile. Without mass distribution and pro-rated costs only Arab princes and Rockefellers (or their corporations) could af-ford an automobile—or a top cali-bre television program. But today, with telepix costs pro-rated around the country among sponsors (or residually)-now you, too, can afford the top calibre television

I say categorically that film will do more to up-grade the quality of U. S. television programming than anything that has happened to television since the vast technical improvements up to 1950. 1950 to 1952 has been the testing ground period for telepix. Now we know there's nothing wrong with TV film that program quality can't cure. Film, as a program vehicle, has proved itself. From 1952 on, the vast improvement of TV programming will be because of film and is based on simple arithmetic: Sponsor the best programs money will produce, yet share the cost.

Two years ago a regional oil company had to spend $10,000 per week for a live show in some 17 markets. When the live show was ended the sponsor saw $10,000 worth of pregramming go into limbo. Today, through the pro-rated economics of television film, that same regional sponsor can buy a $25,000 program for approximately $7,500—enjoy two times or more the quality and satisfactions of a really bigtime show, yet pay only a fraction of the cost of his former, and poorer, live production.

With open market purchases, regional—and even local—advertisers can enjoy good programs at prorated costs completely in line with what the regional and local traffic will bear.

156,000,000 or so people is what makes America great. The arithemetic of share-the-program-cost regionally, locally, and residually, makes the future of film inevitable. For those die-hards who still worry about film quality vs. live, we ask ope rhetorical question: For the past 40 years haven't the American people enjoyed their entertainment on celluloid (movies) on what you and I call a "national spot" basis? Did "Ben-Hur" have to play in Boston at 9 a. m. Wednesday, and in Miami that same 9 p. m. that same Wednesday!

Puffing & Sipping on TV By MANNIE MANHEIM

For some time now our research group has observed the photographing and lighting of the thyroid cartilage on the front of the human throat, found usually on men.

To the average TV viewer, this is known as the Adam's Apple and we believe our findings will shock and enlighten those whose function it is to improve and advance the medium.

The question before us is: What effect, if any, has the Adam's Apple on television? And our reply is that the effect is beyond the comprehension of most performers, agents, Weavers, Robinsons and even Sarnoffs and Paleys.

For a case in point, our research group examined the many professional beer sippers found today on TV. No in the employ of leading brewers and all were seen on television during the past season.

We, as researchers, admit that it isn't easy to publicly

The usual pattern requires the professional guzzler to (a) hold the sponsor's beer bottle to the camera (b) pour the beer into the glass (c) the sipper smiles (d) he sips the beer (e) he smiles again (f) he smacks his lips and (g) puts glass on table and delivers the oath to the brew—and finally sips another sip, sort of an anti-climactic sip.

It was noted that no pro sipper was asked to remove the cap from the bottle or-stick one of those small harpoons into a beer can. This statement has nothing whatsoever to do with the Adam's Apple and its effect on television, but we have a tough time harpooning beer cans.

During the process of holding the beer glass to the sipper's mouth, it is obviously necessary for him to tip his head back about 13 degrees. This tipping of the head reveals his Adam's Apple to the camera and what do we

You, Too, Can Giggle at a Wiggle

Well, most of the Apples we noted were of ordinary size and shape but there's one guy whose A.A. wiggles considerably while he devours the suds. This tickled us quite a lot and instead of directing our attention towards the given brew, we found ourselves giggling at the wiggle of the apple. And to add to our amusement the sipper's bowtie wiggled with the movement on the cartilage and it was most distracting.

However, our purpose is not to entertain ourselves but to bring to the men and women of the television industry an accurate account of the use of the thyroid cartilage before the camera.

We do not discredit any sipper or any brew—but it is our learned opinion that the gentleman who sips Budweiser via kinescope to this Coast, possesses the least active cartilage while professionally sipping and to him goes our nomination as the Professional Television Beer Guzzler With the Non-Movable Adam's Apple.

Cigaret puffing next claimed our attention and there are many fine men and women employed today as professional inhalers and they're doing a splendid job—all of which makes our task of selecting the best of the cigaret puffers a difficult one—but, as always, we manage to come through.

The Adam's Apple will not be an issue in this discussion of inhaling and exhaling as the puffer is not required to bend his head back in the manner of the beer sipper. We shall, however, consider the method of inhalation and exhalation and special attention will be directed towards the latter as it is our belief that exhalation, whether by mouth, ear or nose is the focal point of cigaret smoking on television.

Obviously no manufacturer of a leading cigaret intends to show a fellow on the screen blowing smoke out of his ears—and our group can unequivocally state that no smoke has been discovered merging from a puffer's ear since we have been in the survey racket.

The usual pattern for pro smoking on TV follows somewhat that of the beer sipper in that (a) the puffer extracts a cigaret from the already opened package (b) he inserts it in his mouth (c) lights it (d) smiles (e) inhales (f) exhales (g) sighs and (h smiles affectionately at the unsmoked portion of the cigaret and delivers his declamation.

Regarding item (h) of the above pattern, our researchers were never quite convinced whether the puffer smiled affectionately at the unsmoked portion or whether the smile was to be interpreted as an expression of joy at not being required to smoke the rest of it. This is an involved question and none of us had the answer.

Chesterfield the Winnah!

But we did have some conclusions in reference to the smoking ability of the various puffers. It was noted that the Chesterfield man from New York seemed to have unloaded a great burden from his shoulders as he confessed the ingredients of his product. When he revealed that Chesterfield was the first to name its ingredients, our reaction was that here was a man who had known all the time that inside each eigaret was a fortune of costly glycerol and to him goes our nod for making this confession. But, and, we dislike to do this, we watched a baseball telecaster for Chesterfield who didn't seem to sense the importance of this glycerol confession and he tossed it off as if glycerol meant nothing in the life of a smoker.

Honorable mention is given to the Philip Morris pro-fessional puffer who followed the same pattern as the Chesterfield man but no mention was made of ingredi-

Since VARIETY's first annual Radio-Television Review

Since Varieties, annual Radio-Television Review and Preview issue in 1945, television has grown from practically nothing to an industry, the business volume of which last year amounted to $3,000,000,000. Including radio, the industry as a whole now runs at about $5,000,000,000 a year. And television is only in its infance?

In fact, when the broadcasters first participated in a presidential campaign in 1924, there were only 12 radio stations in the hookup that extended as far west as Kansas City, and there were only 1,000,000 broadcast receivers in the country.

Today there are 105,000,000 radio sets. Television will grow as radio has grown, and eventually I believe that every home now radio-equipped will have a television set, while millions of new homes yet to be built will have television installed as they will have stoves, refrigerators and other household utilities.

Time-and-Talent's 70% Hike

Looking ahead from midpoint of 1952 for both radio and television, the outlook for the final half of the year is good.

In the field of program broadcasting, present trends indicate that television time-and-talent sales this year will exceed the 1951 total of $217,000,000 by 70%. The gross income from radio broadcasting in 1951 was $485,492,000 an alltime record—and there is good reason to believe that the 1952 figure will at least equal last year's total.

Television receiver sales during the remainder of 1952, stimulated by the national political conventions during the summer and the Presidential election in the fall, are expected to amount to more than 3,000,000 units. This would bring the 1952 overall sales total to approximately 5,500,000 sets, and increase the number of television receivers in use throughout the United States to more than 20,000,000

Maintaining the firm trend set in the first half of this year, sales of radio receivers and radio-phonograph combinations in the second six months are expected to number approximately 4,000,000 units. The industry distributed approximately 5,000,000 radio sets in the first six months of the year.

Present favorable prospects in both radio and television receiver distribution are based, of course, on the assumption that supplies will continue to be available and that no increases are required in defense production.

Television has gone big time in a big way. Never before in the history of the entertainment arts have such vast numbers of our people been enabled to view simultaneously the variety of shows and events available today, and every day and night in the week, on television. Practically any one of TV's hit programs pulls a bigger audience in the shape of 30 minutes than the total attendance of all the shows on Broadway in 10 years.

Nearly half of the people in America can now view the top programs of television. Microwave radio relays and coaxial cables have been forged into a 1952 TV chain that links all but four of the nation's 108 stations, from coast to coast, carrying the headline shows to more than 17,000,000 sets, with a potential audience of 70,000,000 viewers.

Behind this vigorous advance of television, with its impact on practically all phases of life in this country, have been superlative pioneering efforts of scientists, engineers, industrialists, program directors and broadcasters, endowed with great faith in this new art. Ahead, as the result of their foresight and continuing enthusiasm, beckon vast new horizons of television service.

Foreseen a few years from now is the day when America will have 50,000,000 television set owners, and there will be stations in range of nearly every community. Studled estimates by those familiar with the possibilities place the eventual number of television stations in this country at more than 2,000, with most of them linked in coast-to-coast and regional networks. This will mean television service for the entire nation.

Those Magic Letters—UHF

The UHF spectrum now authorized provides 70 new TV channels between 470-890 megacycles. Thus the way is open for 1,445 new UHF television stations. These, with 498 new VHF stations, will give the United States, its territories and possessions an ultimate total of more than 2,053 TV stations in 1,291 communities.

The magic letters UHF loom on the horizon like a giant

What Is a Packager?

The radio-TV business has divided into two distinct kinds:

1. The Producer-Packager—Thinks up his own ideas, sells'them (sometimes), and personally produces each show. Examples: John Guedel, Goodson & Todman, Carleton Morse, Phillips Lord.

Carleton Morse, Phillips Lord.

2. The Agent-Packager—Spends more time selling either his or other people's ideas. Examples: William Morris, MCA, James Saphier, Don Sharpe, Lou Cowan. Group two frequently sells the product of group one.

The agent-packager obviously represents more product than the producer-packager because of the time required to personally put out the shows each week. S6—which is the reason for this explanation—all young men with ideas or packages for sale should contact an agent-packager, whose function is primarily selling.

So What's New?

Some random thoughts about my reaction to my duties and responsibilities.

I'm VICE PRESIDENT in CHARGE of STATION RE-LATIONS... and because I'm conscientious I'm gonna write in detail about my multiple responsibilities... let the chips fall where they may.

First, VICE: I've got 'em all. I imbibe although not as heavily as some vice presidents I know on other networks. I draw to inside straight, often with radio editors of trade papers. I howl like a wolf whenever my myopia permits me to perceive anything in skirts, which is only too frequently. I am gluttonous and a sucker for a three-layer cake with two scoops of ice cream dripping with chocolate goo. I envy everyone who doesn't have to get up in the morning. I hate work! I have lots more vice, but you get the general idea.

Second, PRESIDENT: I like IKE.

I was put in charge of all the dirty pots and pans for Fourth, STATIONS: The Union Station in Denver used to be run by my ex-brother-in-law Jack Keating. I got the worst haircut of my life in the railroad station at Washington. Walter Damm personally planted the radishes in the garden plot of his outdoor television station; try to pull one and he'll step on your hand. The night desk sergeant at Detroit's Trumbull Street Station is uncouth and extremely unsympathetic. My wife just got a new station wagon.

Fifth, RELATIONS: My Uncle Joe was a rum runner in Down-River Wyandotte, on the Canadian border, where he got water on the knee and the water kept rising until he drowned. My cousin Zeke began life as a sheepherder in Wyomeng and then became a gag writer for a guy ramed Axtoli key that will unlock television for thousands of communi-ties. This opening of the radio spectrum for the expan-sion of TV service means more television for more people.

For present or prospective TV viewers, the addition of UHF can be aphieved without diminishing service to millions of existing TV sets. In fact, UHF and additional use of VHF will expand program service through more stations, while presently operating VHF stations will continue to serve large and growing audiences.

To the broadcasters, the opening of UHF means added opportunities to extend local, regional and national television coverage; it will greatly increase the size of the audience.

To manufacturers, it means the creation of vast new markets, not only for home television receivers, but for all of the other products and services with which viewers become acquainted on their TV screens.

To, the service industry, which has the responsibility of installing and servicing equipment for the home as well as for broadcasting stations, UHF also means a new field of operation

To scientists and engineers, the use of UHF for tele-vision brings to fruition laboratory experiments, product designing and field tests that have been under way for many years.

One of the most significant events in television history—both from the standpoint of the viewing public and of television set manufacturers—was the opening in 1951 of AT&T's new transcontinental radio relay system linking major cities in a coast-to-coast television network. It is estimated that through this achievement, and projected transmitting expansion, at least 95 out of every 100 television homes in America eventually can be served by "live" shows.

The surge of expansion has a linker of the strength o

"live" shows.

The surge of expansion has made television an extremely important factor in American economy. It not only has created tens of thousands of jobs in set production and programming, but it has been an extremely valuable aid in the growth of many other industries.

Steady improvement has been noted in television sets themselves since the first postwar instruments reached the market in 1946. Picture tubes have increased in size from 10 inches to 30 inches, virtually all sets being sold in 1951 and 1952 having screens of 17 inches or larger. Circuits have been simplified and made for efficiency, and cabinet designs now meet the satisfaction of the most discerning buyer.

Circuits have been simplified and made for efficiency, and cabinet designs now meet the satisfaction of the most discerning buyer.

Television coverage of the national political conventions in Chicago this summer and other phases of the Presidential campaign up to and including Election Day events in November exceed in scope anything the country has seen in the past. Millions of dollars worth of new and improved equipment, including RCA's "Walkie-Lookie" one-man TV station, is being brought into use to make it possible for TV watchers to eye-witness the political conclaves—to see as well as hear news, and history in the making.

New headlines and headliners will appear during the next three months as political events turn new pages in American history. As each page presents new faces, new ideas, issues, plans, pledges and promises that will affect the future of the country, they will be within full view of the American people. What the TV audlence sees will be a decisive factor in helping them to formulate decisions that will make history on Election Day.

Summer broadcasts and telecasts are also of high quality with news and entertainment at the forefront. The autumn will see the return of most of the top favorites, plus new faces and new program formats that promise to make television's "bigtime" bigger.
